CARNATIONS

A BAD CASE OF STIGMONOSE.

Please state the name and cause of the disease on the carnation leaves which are enclosed. The soil in which the plants are now growing is on raised benches and is the same as was used during the seasons of 1912 and 1913. It was taken out of the bench and stacked in a pile six feet high, about fifteen feet wide and about thirty feet long, with the addition of a little manure. The plants were benched in the middle of September. The night temperature is 50 degrees, with 10 to 15 degrees of a rise in the daytime. The varieties are the Enchantress family, Beacon and White Wonder. At this time of the year a good watering will keep the soil wet from twenty-one to twenty-five days. J. N.

The specimens submitted showed a bad case of stigmonose, the disease that is making such inroads on the vitality of carnations, especially the Enchantress family, all over the country. I have noted it also on Beacon, but have seen little of it on White Wonder.

The fact that the soil you are using is old, and requires three weeks or more to dry out on your raised beds, would indicate that it is in a condition not congenial to the plants. This lack of drainage might be the cause of your trouble, or at least would aggravate it. I have seen numerous attempts at growing carnations in old soil, but seldom with anything like fair success. The number of successes are so few that I am inclined to look on the whole proposition with disfavor. I would not think of using a batch of soil a second time without having spread it out and grown on it a good sod for at least two or more years. Even then I would doubt its value as compared with new sod.

SHEEP MANURE IN COMPOST.

We should like to know what fertilizer is best for carnations in benches. We are referring to the soil for next spring. We have a compost in which, for every four loads of sandy soil, we used one load of sheep manure. Do you think that will do as well as any other animal fertilizer? We have been told that it is not the best for the purpose; so we decided to get your advice before using the compost. M. C. J. & S.

Under ordinary conditions, I would not consider sheep manure a good substitute for cattle or stable manure in preparing your compost for next year. It might be all right to supplement the other manure with a moderate amount of sheep manure, in case the soil lacked in fertility. Sheep manure is rich in nitrogen and is one of the best manures to use for adding that necessary element to the soil, but the soil needs more humus than would thus be provided. This, by the way, is one of the main reasons why chemical manures alone have not been found satisfactory.

If you are unable to secure as much cattle or stable manure as you require for preparing your compost, you can help matters somewhat by preparing the soil before it is composted. For this you can use some of the green manures, such as soy beans or red clover, in addition to what manure you can get. I do not know what kind of sheep manure you propose to use, but if it is the kind we use—that is, pulverized and dried—then the proportion you propose is far too much. One to twenty would be plenty. HELPING ONE ANOTHER.

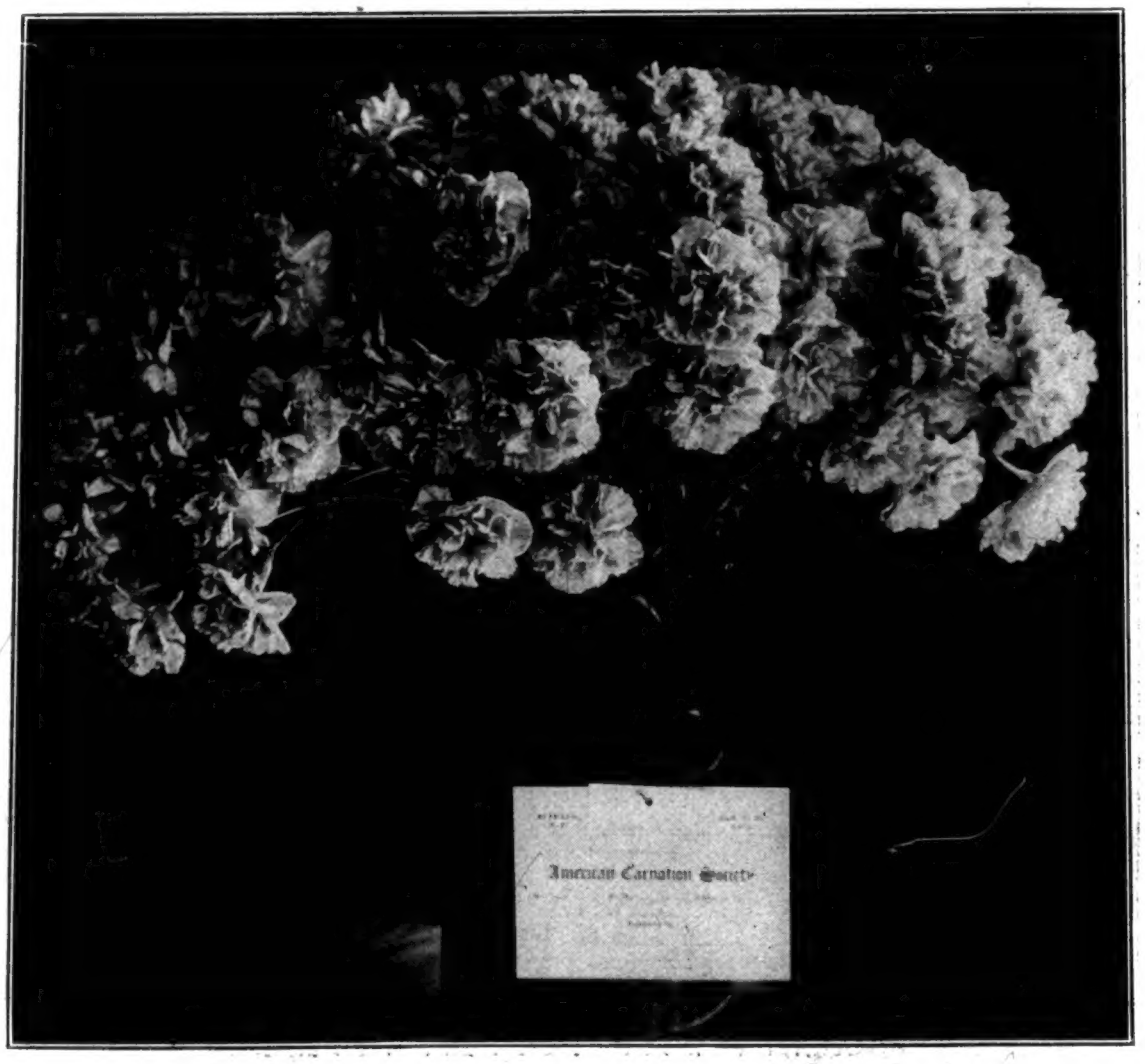
Opportunity, it has been remarked, has a fine shock of hair in front but is exceedingly bald behind, and Albert Pochelon is one of those who hope the trade will seize while the seizing is good—and take a lot of telegraph orders to send out for St. Valentine's day. Mr. Pochelon, as nearly everyone knows, is all wrapped up in the F. T. D., of which he is secretary. He has put a vast amount of effort into acquainting the trade with the possibilities that lie in the business of exchanging orders among retailers. Until quite recently the work has been to get florists interested; now it is to get florists to interest the public. "Only a small portion of the possible flower buying public has been reached," said Mr. Pochelon the other day, "but the volume of exchange orders has increased wonderfully. Business conditions at the best have necessitated earnest efforts, but with a sure return for earnest effort in this direction during the coming St. Valentine's period, unusual appeals for telegraph orders should be resorted to. Travel in the United States will undoubtedly be heavier during the coming season than ever before. The relationship of people living in the United States will be closer than ever, and the resultant benefits to the flower business are obvious."



Mr. Pochelon is able to report frequent additions to the membership in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and is receiving many letters showing that genuine interest is being taken in the movement to work up orders of this character. "The effort at Christmas was unprecedentedly successful; why not do the same thing for St. Valentine's day and make it stand forth a winner?" he says.

PALMS USED FOR DECORATING.

Please let me know how to handle old palms that have been used for decorating. Some of the leaves are lost and the others are damaged to a greater or less extent. Please tell me how to treat the plants so that the foliage will be renewed as quickly as possible. I have all the necessary heat and moisture at my disposal, but can not get the plants to grow leaves fast enough to make the work pay.

C. H. P.

At this season the palms that have been used for decorating will not recover rapidly from their injuries, from the fact that the present is the resting period for most of these plants. But by the middle of March, or from that date to April 1, the palms will begin to get active again, and measures may be taken to start them along.

The first thing to do is to repot them, removing as much of the old soil as possible without breaking the roots. Pot firmly in as small pots as the roots will allow. Place the plants in a shaded greenhouse having a night temperature of 65 to 68 degrees; water thoroughly to settle the soil in the pots; syringe well every bright day and do not allow the plants to get dry at the root, and with such care the plants ought to make growth enough to form useful stock for decorations next winter. A good carnation soil will answer for the compost; or, if your soil is heavy, add a little sand to it and use well rotted manure as a fertilizer. Do not apply any liquid manure at this time, for the plants will not be in condition to utilize it now. W. H. T.

PLANTS FOR PORCH BOXES.

Can you tell me what vines and flowering plants can be used in porch boxes and will stand full exposure to the sun? F. W. H.

A few suitable vines are: Vinca major, both green and variegated; Senecio scandens, or German Ivy; English ivy, Asparagus Sprengeri, tall nasturtiums, Tradescantia zebrina, Ficus repens, Abutilon megapotamicum and thunbergias. Some of the best flowering plants are: Zonale geraniums, which are the best of all flowering plants for boxes; verbenas, petunias, Vinca rosea, lantanas; such begonias as gracilis, Vesuvius and Erfordii; ageratums and abutilons. Blue lobelia makes a useful hanging plant also. C. W.

FUMIGANT FOR VIOLETS.

In an endeavor to oust the fly from our violet houses we have been using tobacco stems. Although the weather has been sunny and moderate, the smoke seems to cling to the violets in such a way as to render them almost unsalable. As there is a good demand for the stock, we are wondering whether you could inform us of any quicker method of exterminating the fly, so that the violets themselves will not take so long a time to recuperate after treatment. D. E.

Tobacco stems make the worst possible fumigant for violets. In addition to making the flowers practically unsalable, there is much danger of scorching the foliage. Try nicotine papers. They are effective and cleanly, and leave no disagreeable odor behind them. The liquid can also be evaporated. Tobacco dust is far preferable to stems and does not leave any disagreeable smell on the flowers. Many violet specialists now use hydrocyanic acid gas exclusively; a weak dose once a week keeps the plants healthy and, once used, it is always used. Where an all-night exposure is given, a weaker dose proves more effective than when a 20-minute exposure is given. After the exposure, the ventilators should be opened from outdoors. C. W.

A START IN VIOLET GROWING.

As you have always helped me out of my difficulties, I am bringing them to you again. I have a small house in which I intend to plant violets next season, and, as I have never handled them, I wish you would give me a little information. I should like to grow the double varieties, and also a few of the singles if there is a good single variety that will do well with the doubles. Is Marie Louise the best double variety to grow? What kind of soil is most suitable and about what percentage of clay should it contain? The soils in this vicinity are a light clayey loam and a heavy, black loam, almost muck. Which is preferable for the violets? If I pile sods and manure this spring, can I use the compost in the fall? How deep should the beds be made and is it advisable to use drainage in the bottom? How closely should the plants be set in the beds? Would it be advisable to plant a row of sweet peas along each 5-foot bed in January for a late spring crop? At what temperature should they be kept at night? P. E. M.

Single violets succeed best in winter in a night temperature as near 40 degrees as possible. They cannot be housed early, as the plants must have one or two moderate freezings to check the leaf growth; otherwise they make a rank growth of leaves at the expense of flowers. The best variety is Princess of Wales. Double violets will not bring the same prices as the singles and are more difficult to sell if in competition with the long-stemmed, large and dark blue violet, Princess of Wales.

You can probably succeed with both double and single violets in the same house if you give the single ones the cooler end of the house. The double varieties must be given 2 to 5 degrees more heat. While Marie Louise is the best colored double violet, it is more susceptible to disease than Lady Hume Campbell, which is now more grown commercially than any other double variety.

The best soil for violets is a fairly heavy loam, inclined to be sandy, with one-fourth its body of cow manure added. If this can be mixed the fall before being used, all the better, but if done early in the spring, chopped down and mixed once before housing, it should be all right. The double varieties can be planted eight inches apart each way, but the singles need more room. If of a large size, 12 x 12 is not too far apart. Small plants could go a little closer.

Sweet peas could be started in flats or pots and planted out as suggested for a late spring crop. Use the winter-blooming Spencers. Of course sweet peas need at least six to eight feet of head room. While violets will do in six to eight inches of soil, sweet peas should have double that depth if possible. Sweet peas can have 45 degrees at night until the buds show; then the temperature should be kept at 50 degrees, with a rise of 10 to 15 degrees in the daytime. C. W.

THE GLADIOLUS

PEELING BULBLETS.

I notice in the gladiolus department in The Review for January 28 that a writer uses the words corm and bulblet as if they were synonymous. Corm is the proper name of the root commonly called bulb; the small, hard-shelled offsets are called cormels, the syllable "el" being the diminutive in the Latin.

The writer who asks about peeling bulblets (cormels) is advised that if the variety is rare and high-priced it will pay to peel the bulblets, which can be done by holding the bulblet in the left hand and taking off the point and just a strip of the shell. There is a great deal of difference in the germinating quality of different sorts, some seeming to have a harder shell than others. Ordinary varieties are treated by soaking for a day or so, but if the bulblets when first dug are put in boxes of naturally moist earth and kept in a cool place they will not get dry and hard. On the other hand, I have known dry bulblets to remain a year in the ground and come up the next spring. After the bulblet has been grown one season, no matter how little, it loses its shell and will start readily.

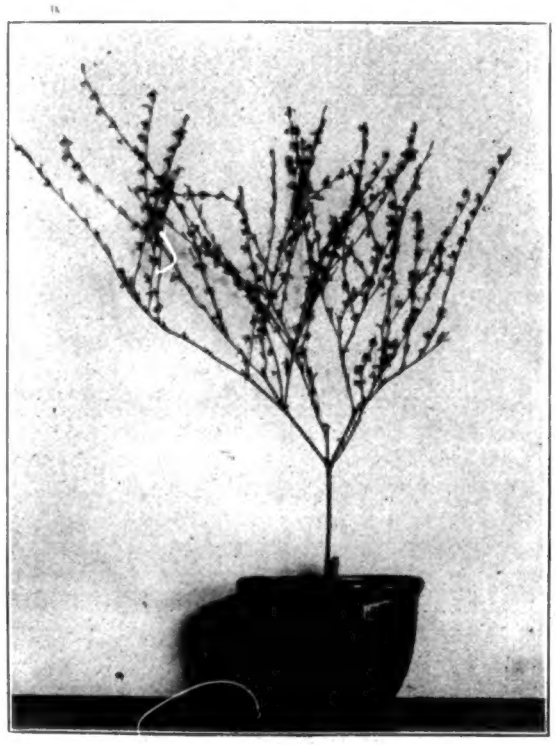
GLADIOLUS FLOWERS FOR JUNE.

I want to grow gladioli for a flower show to be held here, in northeastern New Jersey, the first week in June. If I plant them out from February 15 to 20 and keep them in a cool cellar until May, do you think they will bloom the first week in June? I have grown a great many gladioli, but never have started them so early. W. K.



If you have a greenhouse bench at your disposal, plant out the gladioli in good soil, from February 15 to 20. In an average night temperature of 50 degrees they will flower about the time named. If some come along early, you can cut them while in bud and hold them for some time in a cold cellar. I am referring now to the large-flowered gladioli, such as America, King, Klondyke, Brenchleyensis, Chicago White, etc. If you have no bench at disposal, plant three or four bulbs in 7-inch pots and flower in an ordinary greenhouse; or, if you have no greenhouse, pot off singly in 4-inch pots and plant in a warm position outdoors about April 10. Some would flower on time, but only a small proportion, I am afraid. C. W.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The American Gladiolus Society will hold two shows next August, one at Atlantic City, which will be a mammoth trade exhibit, not for competition, the idea being to create a greater interest in the gladiolus. Maurice Fuld, 1 Madison avenue, New York, has the matter in charge and would be glad to correspond with any wishing to take part.

The annual meeting and show will be held at Newport, R. I. The preliminary schedule of prizes will be issued soon. I predict the show will be a record breaker, as the premium list is the largest and best the society has ever had. The dates for holding the show will be announced shortly.

HOT STUFF.

The article in the issue of The Review for January 14 entitled "Sun Shines Sometimes" was a most valuable contribution, while that in the issue of January 21, "Fire Often, Fire Light," if followed, means the saving of thousands of dollars and better results in firing boilers. A clean, level, thin fire, light firing and often, would astonish all who have not tried it. The intense heat generated and the saving of coal from this practice is well worth consideration. Either article is worth many times the cost of your valuable paper. A. W. Reiman.

IT LOOKS LIKE STATICE.

If you were confronted with a specimen like that shown in the illustration on this page and asked to identify it, what would you call it? W. C. Kaber, of Orland, Cal., who sent The Review the photograph from which the reproduction is made, at first thought it was a statice and so did the botanist to whom he submitted a sample for identification Its name is, however, Eriogonum vimineum; Mr. Kaber christens it "Pink Mist," which, he believes, is easier and fits the plant better.

Its home is the arid valleys of California, where it blooms from July to November, when almost all other annuals have succumbed. Being thus out of the way of horticulturists and botanists, the plant is little known. While it is a wonderful drought resister, says Mr. Kaber, it yields readily to cultivation and irrigation, and with little attention plants two feet in height and about the same in diameter can be grown. Further description of the plant, given by Mr. Kaber, is as follows:

"The leaves, of which there are few, are nestled close about the base of the plant. They are round and downy, and of a silvery, greenish color. Early in the season the stems, also, are of this color, but are destitute of foliage. The photograph was made from a branch about twelve inches long, stuck into a small Japanese pot. The nodules along the fine, wiry stems are, in reality, tufts of tiny pink flowers, varying in color on different plants from pale, pearly pink to beautiful carmine rose, giving the entire plant the appearance of pink mist.

"Used as gypsophila or stevia, it is excellent; the wiry stiffness of the stems makes an ideal framework for the arrangement of other flowers, while the color lends a charm not found in anything else of the kind. Another important feature is the fact that it never droops or wilts, but simply dries up, retaining its color indefinitely. If handled carefully, it can be used to great advantage in a dry state; in fact, the photograph was made from a dried specimen."

CAREFUL CATERING TO COUNTRY CUSTOMERS

By Ed. Williams, Nebraska

A paper entitled "Floral Suggestions to Out-of-town Flower Lovers," read at the annual meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, at Lincoln, January 19, 1915.

THE flower business, more than almost any other business, necessitates catering to out-of-town trade, for home consumption is not large enough to insure success for a florist outside of the large cities. Hence, every florist who is located so that the railroad facilities are good, must expand by working up an out-of-town business. This line requires exceedingly careful handling, for the motto should be "Hang on to the old customers and the new ones will come." As a rule when a florist makes a shipment to a small town everyone in that town knows that Mrs. So-and-so received some flowers. If they are not up to standard, his future orders from that town are going to be extremely small. But if he sends good stock, properly packed, so that the blooms arrive at their destination without having been chilled and without half the heads broken off the roses or the outside petals torn off because the flowers were not tied to the box, he will in all likelihood hear from that place again.

My Method.

The method I have used to work up out-of-town trade is to secure a good agent in every town within shipping distance and allow him or her a commission on all orders, the persons ordering paying the cost, such as express, parcel post, telephoning or telegraphing. We issue a weekly price-list to all our agents, keeping them posted on prices and flowers in stock, making a notation on the varieties that are scarce, so that they may work on the flowers that are in largest supply. We also keep each agent supplied with a catalogue of illustrations of floral arrangements of all kinds, so that the customer may select the style, emblem or design, and the varieties, etc., which he or she desires. The object is to make it as easy as possible for the agent to secure the order and not take too much of his time.

Through the agent, lot shipments may be made, bringing the express charges down to a minimum. We discourage parcel post shipments whenever we can, for we know the handling of flowers is not a success when mail sacks are thrown around as they are. We do not guarantee the arrival of flowers on time by parcel post, as it is quite uncertain. For these two reasons we suggest making shipment by express when possible. Of course, local rural routes are all right for cut flower shipment, as the mail for these is not sacked.

Small Profits in Plants.

As to working off the surplus in potted plants during the spring months, we have not paid as much attention to that end of the business of late as we did in former years. We have had considerable experience with this line, and think it better if it can be eliminated. Of course, we solicit out-of-town shipments of potted plants and have a nice trade in them, but we do not work it as extensively as formerly.

In the early days we used to keep two or three teams out from May 1 until the end of June, but the expense is too great to allow a good margin of profit in disposing of them in that manner now. We tried to get an agent for plants in every town in our territory, but it is hard to find the right person. Our agents for cut flowers do not, as a rule, care to deal in plants. We get good results, however, by asking them to refer to us some one who they think would like to handle plants for us.

During the last few years we have picked out the leading papers in our territory and placed in them advertisements calling attention to our agents and stating that we carry a full line of house and garden plants, on which we should be pleased to submit prices. For this purpose we have printed in pamphlet form a price-list of all our plants. Nine out of every ten inquiries result in an order, and the cost is small, for there is no commission to be paid. Then, too, when an order comes direct, you can ship the plants out of pots, adding an extra plant or two, and the transaction is much more satisfactory all around. For these reasons I think this method is better than agents.

Counting the Cost.

Now, the cost of doing a shipping business is considerably larger than that of disposing of all your stock at home, for you are virtually doing a wholesale business. When you allow over twenty per cent to agents, therefore, you are giving too much. In securing new agents now we try to get them to accept fifteen per cent. Of course, where there is competition we have to allow more, but we have a limit. I think a common understanding that twenty per cent should be a uniform discount would be welcomed by the trade.

Ten years ago we received practically the same prices that we are

SHAWYER GOING BLIND.

I would appreciate any information regarding the general treatment of Shawyer roses, to prevent them from going blind during the winter months. I have one 300-foot house planted with Shawyer roses. Two beds are planted with own-root stock and two with grafted stock. The plants were healthy when planted last June and made remarkable growth, giving us a heavy cut until the first part of December. From then on the plants made healthy growth and were practically free from mildew, but only a small proportion of the breaks set buds, the rest of them going blind.

This stock was carefully handled. The plants received liquid manure every other week and had one light feeding of pulverized sheep manure, applied about November 1. The plants are growing on raised beds and are at this date in a healthy condition, still throwing large quantities of blind wood, even though the breaks are heavy. Milady roses growing in the next connected house are giving excellent results, though they were handled in exactly the same way as Shawyer.

W. J. T.

We had a similar experience with Shawyer in one house last year, which came almost all blind, while another house planted at the same time and under the same conditions gave us a wonderful crop. Rightly or wrongly, we blamed the temperature. The warm house was the one that ran blind, while the cooler house, where the temperature was not running higher than 53 to 55 degrees, gave us magnificent blooms. From our knowledge of the variety, I would say that the more you punish the plants the more blooms they will produce. If W. J. T. will cut the blind wood down, I think he will find the succeeding breaks will all produce flowers; at least, they did with us. It is not necessary, of course, to cut all the blind wood off the plant at the same time, but just remove a little every few days, so that the plant can adjust itself as it does when a crop of flowers is being cut, and you will find no harm will result.

PRUNING ROSA RUGOSA.

Please tell me how to treat a bed of Rosa rugosa and a bed of dwarf wild roses, planted in July, 1912. Should these be cut back to within eight or ten inches in the spring, the same as I would do to other outdoor roses? I shall appreciate any information on this.

H. M.

Rosa rugosa, if cut back hard like the hybrid perpetual roses, will make strong growths but will not flower at all. It needs only a little pruning. Simply remove any dead or dying wood and take the ends from the long canes. I do not know which wild roses you refer to, but these also need light pruning. I would merely cut away any dead and apparently useless wood from them.

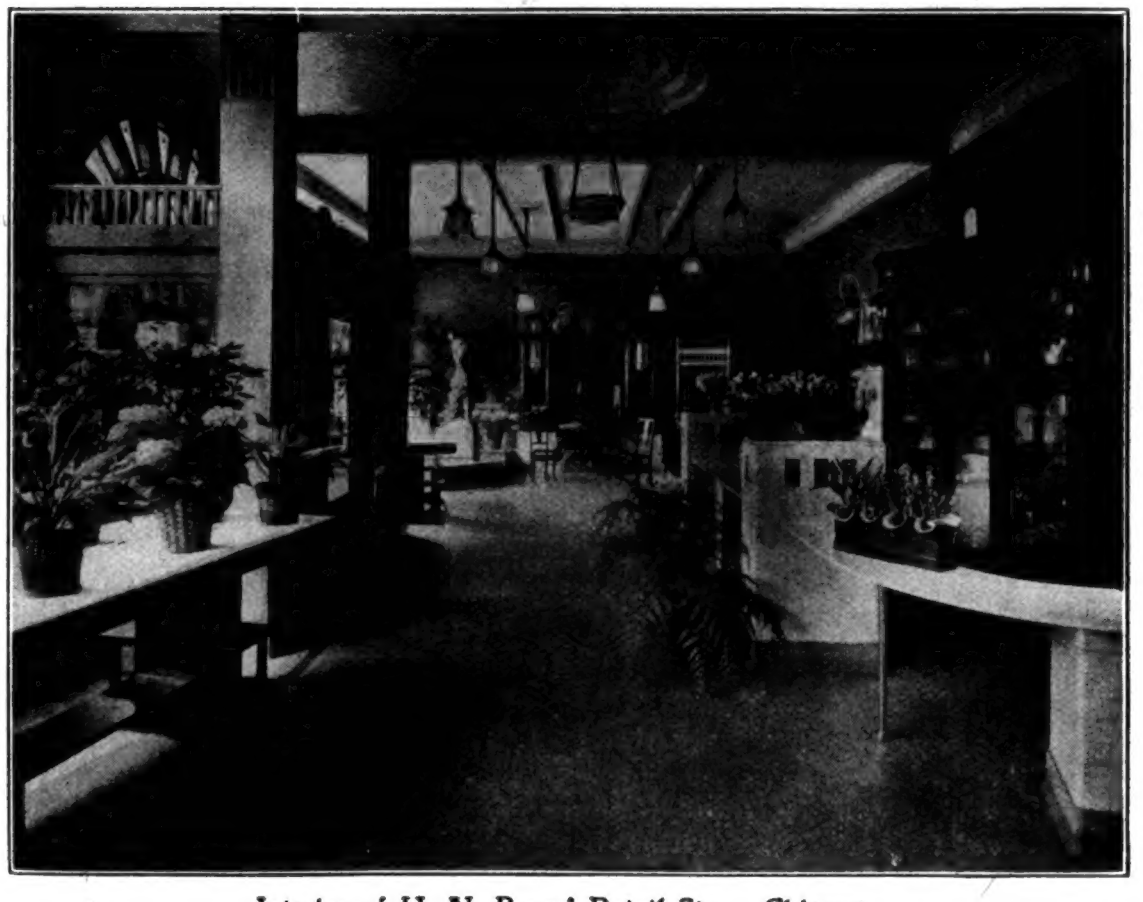
C. W.

BEAUTY ROSE PLANTS DYING.

I am sending by mail, in separate cover, two shoots from some Beauty plants with which we are having trouble. Please tell me, if you can, what causes them to turn yellow as they are doing? They are planted in benches containing good sod soil. Some of the plants are fine, strong growers, while others gradually turn yellow, the leaves wither and then the plants die.

There are three lines of 2-inch pipe under each bench. We keep a temperature of 56 to 62 degrees at night and about 70 degrees in the daytime. We have not fed the plants with liquid manure since November 20, but have given them a good mulch of rotted cow manure, with some ashes and sheep manure. We have also let the beds dry out some and have then given them a good soaking. We have had only about six bright days since November 26.

A. D. M.



When roses are planted in benches, it sometimes happens that some plants start growth faster than others that are planted next to them. In that case the larger plants will take up the moisture as they receive it, while the smaller plants, receiving practically the same amount, will stay continually wet. The soil around such plants will become sour and the roots of these plants will die. In such cases it is good policy to allow the whole bench to dry out thoroughly, only giving the larger plants just enough water to keep them from suffering. After the whole bench is entirely dry, so that, if packed solid, it will start to crack, then go over it four to six times from both sides of the bench and soak it so that the water will pour through the bottom. This will wash out any impurities contained in the soil, and after such treatment the soil should dry out fairly evenly. If found necessary, this operation may be repeated until all the plants start to make healthy growth. By this treatment it is impossible to overwater a plant, as the soil, when allowed to dry out well, will only absorb a small quantity of water and will dry out again more quickly than if given a small quantity of water at a time.

The temperature for Beauties should be kept as near as possible to 58 to 60 degrees at night, 63 to 65 degrees on cloudy days and 70 degrees on clear days.

BRUNS' NEW STORE.

As the establishment of H. N. Bruns, at 3040 West Madison street, which is shown in the accompanying illustration, was completed nearly a year ago, the term "new" is applied more with reference to its appearance than to its age. For it is always kept in the best of order, as if the opening had only occurred last week.

Mr. Bruns was a well known figure in the Chicago trade long before that time, not only as a retailer, but also as a distributor of cold storage valley pips and as the grower of Chicago Market Brand cut valley. The pips are distributed from this store and the cut valley is grown in the greenhouses to the east and rear of the store.

There are other things besides the comparative newness and perennial orderliness of the establishment that raise it above the rank and file of flower stores, things that were planned by the owner from a long experience in the business. The large windows are the first feature to catch the eye in the illustration, and they, or rather the displays in them, catch the eye of the passing pedestrian just as readily. Inside, too, everything is arranged to make the selling of flowers easy for the salesman, and the buying, as nearly as possible, a necessity to the visitor.

TROUBLE WITH EASTER LILIES.

We are sending you, under separate cover, an Easter lily and should be glad to have you tell us what is the matter with the plant, as about fifty per cent of two cases are in the same condition or worse. The bulbs seem to make good root action, but many of them are like the sample and some have made no top growth whatever.

K. & G.

This is not an uncommon trouble with Easter lilies. It may be due in part to improper treatment, but is more probably owing to the bulbs being prematurely dug and shipped to America before being properly ripened. Longiflorum lilies need no water after potting, if the soil is fairly moist. When they dry out, give them a soaking, but run them on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots and top growths are nicely started. They must have a good heat from the start, especially the giganteums; 60 degrees at night is all right. If started cool and kept moist, more or less disease is sure to develop. The bulb sent had made a cluster of leaves and the spike was just coming up. Except for the narrow foliage it would have passed for L. candidum, the ascension lily.

C. W.

AN OLD-FASHIONED POT PLANT.

I am sending you, under separate cover, a specimen plant of which we should like to know the name. We purchased the plants a few years ago, but never did anything with them until this year, when we sold more of them than of any other plants in the house.

V. E. R.

The plant is Reinwardtia trigyna, also and more popularly called Linum trigynum. It is a native of India. It is an old favorite in greenhouses and makes a charming pot plant. It is little seen now in America, but still is grown considerably for winter flowering in Europe.

C. W.

MAY BE LILIUM MYRIOPHYLLUM.

I would like to know the name of a lily, which I will try to describe, that I saw grown by a friend near the coast in Oregon. It is similar in habit of growth to auratum, but grows somewhat taller, attaining a height of seven to eight feet. It produces from fifteen to twenty flowers to the stem. The flowers are of immense size, being eight to twelve inches in diameter, and are a pure waxy white, with a light gold band, but absolutely without specks. It blooms late in August. This lily seems to multiply slowly. I would like to know if there is any treatment that might be given it to make it increase more rapidly.

T. H. W.

The only lilium I am acquainted with which seems to tally with your description is the somewhat new L. myriophyllum, a native of China. In the east, it grows four to six feet high, carrying on stout stalks occasionally eighteen to twenty-five flowers. The flowers are white, slightly suffused with pink, with canary yellow at the center and extending partway up the trumpet. It has a delicate perfume. In the east, it blooms outdoors about the middle of July. Such varieties as Japonicum, Alexandræ, Brownii and giganteum do not answer your description. The last-named grows eight to twelve feet high, but the flowers lack the size of the variety you speak of. I am speaking of the true Lilium giganteum and not of the little L. longiflorum giganteum grown so much for Easter.

L. myriophyllum can be propagated readily from seed. They start to flower in two years and in five years produce stout stalks.

C. W.

PLANTS WILTING AND DYING.

I am enclosing some leaves of cyclamens and of primulas. What is the trouble with them? Can you tell me how to prevent it? The primulas start to grow nicely; then they begin to turn brown and the plants are ruined. The cyclamens turn a reddish brown on the under side of the leaves; then the leaves wilt. Would strong feeding cause this? Please tell us how to grow strong, healthy plants.

W. F.

The leaves had been frozen somewhat before arriving, but I should say that improper soil and dryness at the root were the probable main contributing causes to the poor condition of the plants. Injudicious feeding would certainly be harmful, especially if applied in midwinter. Plants of this character need some feeding when well rooted, but only in moderate doses, and once a week is often enough during December and January. The surface soil should be stirred occasionally to keep the soil sweet and wholesome.

Neither of these plants needs a warm house; a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night is ample. Both succeed well in a somewhat light compost, containing plenty of partly decayed leafmold and loam, besides some old, well rotted dry manure and sand. In summer they are as well or better off in coldframes, with lath shades over them during the heat of the day. It would take considerable space to cover the culture of these plants, but you will find frequent notes on them in the cultural calendar of The Review.

C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

While Easter has not been a specially good holiday for the sale of hydrangeas, the sale of these being decidedly better at Memorial day, the advent of the new French hydrangeas has completely changed these conditions. The French sorts, coming in such a variety of pleasing shades, including pure white, pale pink, deep pink, lavender blue and deep blue, have taken their place among the most satisfactory of Easter plants. They will never displace the old Otaksa for outdoor uses, as they are more delicate, but they lack the coarseness of that variety, and, flowering with such wonderful freedom from even the weakest shoots, they are now among the most popular plants of the present day.

Plants intended for Easter flowering should have their flower heads now well exposed to view, and, if they are a couple of inches across, hard forcing will not be necessary. It is better to bring them along in a temperature of 55 degrees at night rather than warmer. Remember that hydrangeas want lots of water and generous feeding. If any are showing pale foliage, a pinch of nitrate of soda in the water or some soot water will soon color them up. A few specially fine varieties of H. hortensis for florists are: Bouquet Rose, bright pink; Mme. E. Mouillere, pure white; Radiant, rosy carmine, a splendid color; General de Vibraye, bright rose; Mlle. de Tremault, large pure white; Souv. de Mme. Chautard, bright rose.

This is a good season to take cuttings of non-flowering wood from any of the hydrangeas. If these are planted out in May where they can get an occasional watering, they will make heavy plants fit for 8-inch pots in September.

Hardy Perennials from Seed.

If it is desired to work up a good stock of any of the more popular hardy herbaceous perennials and an adequate number were not raised last summer or fall, there is no better time than the present to make sowings of any desired varieties. Started now, they can be transplanted into flats, moved into coldframes by the early part of April and planted out in nursery rows a month later. Some of the more useful varieties to sow at this time are: Delphiniums, lychnis, aquilegias, Shasta daisies, lupines, penstemons, primulas, pyrethrums and œnotheras. Sow in shallow flats of finely screened compost; one mostly leaf-mold with fine sand added is the best.

Canterbury Bells.

For an early Easter it is not possible to force Canterbury bells and have them in really presentable condition. It is far more satisfactory to bring them along cool and flower them from the last of April onward. Plants which were potted in the fall and have been carried over winter in coldframes or pits can be housed now. Strip off all the yellow or decaying leaves, give the surface soil a stirring and place in a cool house for a start. A temperature of 40 to 45 degrees at night is ample for a start. You can treat the plants to high temperatures, but they will not make nearly as satisfactory plants as when grown cooler. Apart from green aphis, Canterbury bells are remarkably free from pests. Occasionally thrips will attack them, but only if they are in an arid atmosphere or standing too near the heating pipes. Canterbury bells make magnificent pot plants and the flowers last far better than when grown outdoors.

Cyclamens.

With the lengthening days, the little cyclamen plants are starting to grow away nicely. During midwinter there is not much apparent activity among the plants, but from now on the rate of growth will become accelerated. Perhaps your plants are potted off; if so, look over them once a week and give the surface soil a stir, also pulling out any weeds. If in flats, do the same. Keep the surface soil open and free from scum, and, provided you have them in suitable compost, one containing plenty of flaky leaf-mold, they are sure to make good headway. On clear days give them a spraying overhead, but keep them dry while it is murky overhead. A temperature of 52 to 55 degrees will suit young plants, but 10 degrees lower is best for any flowering plants you still have on hand.

Genistas.

Genista plants for Easter must never have any real forcing, or they will not amount to much. This is a plant which must be grown cool all the time. A cold house can now receive the plants intended for Easter; anything a few degrees clear of freezing will suit them. Discontinue any clipping or pinching. This close cropping gives compact, formal looking, well flowered plants, but the racemes are smaller than those carried on more naturally grown plants and it is a question whether it is good policy for florists to continue heading in their genistas so late. Critical buyers will not take these chopped-in genistas at any price. They turn to the more naturally grown plants, which are vastly more beautiful and have a grace which is entirely lacking in the others.

Root cuttings of genistas now in a fairly cool propagating bench; one which suits carnations and chrysanthemums will prove ideal for genistas. From cuttings rooted now, nice plants in 5-inch pots can be had a year from now.

CARNATION SOIL FOR PEAS.

Will carnation soil be all right for sweet peas? E. C.

New carnation compost will suit sweet peas well. Sweet peas do best in a solid bed where they can have eighteen inches of well manured soil. I would not advise using the old carnation soil for the sweet peas. C. W.

SWEET PEA AND VIOLET SOIL.

What is the best soil for growing sweet peas under glass; also, for single violets? We have been using black hill ground mixed with pasture loam, with about one-third of well rotted stable manure. By mistake this year we included too much heavy clay soil, which seems to pack too much and prevents drainage. How can we remedy this for the present season? Will frequent cultivation help any? E. S.

Pasture loam with one-third stable manure added makes an excellent compost for both violets and sweet peas. Cow manure is particularly good for the sweet peas. The inclusion of some clayey soil should not prove particularly harmful. About all you can do is to keep the surface soil well stirred, as suggested. To improve the texture of retentive soil, road scrapings, coarse sand, fine coal ashes, etc., can be used, but since your beds are planted, of course nothing of this kind can be added. C. W.

SWEET PEAS NOT FLOWERING.

The last week in August I planted, in ground beds, some Spencer sweet peas of the following varieties: King White, Hercules, Elfrida Pearson and Florence Nightingale. They are now five to six feet high and are doing well, but show no sign of any flowers. We give them a night temperature of 50 to 54 degrees, with a rise of 12 to 15 degrees during the day. I would like to know when these varieties should begin flowering under the conditions mentioned. A. B.

The sweet peas named are splendid outdoor varieties, but are entirely unsuited to greenhouse culture, except for a spring or early summer crop. The plants you have will probably not bloom before early spring. You should have planted the winter-flowering Spencer type of sweet peas. The seed is somewhat high-priced, but the plants would have started flowering with you early in November. Be sure to grow these another season. You will find offers of them from a number of seed merchants in The Review.

C. W.

DISTANCE BETWEEN PLANTS.

How many rows of sweet peas should be planted across a 5-foot bed and how far apart in the row should the plants stand?

E. C.

On a bed five feet wide you cannot grow more than two rows and get satisfactory results. The best growers run their rows lengthwise of the houses and five to six feet apart. If you set the plants four inches apart in the rows they will be sufficiently thick. Even if you allow six inches they will easily fill the space.

EAST MICHIGAN MEETING.

Florists Visit the Boehringers.

The meeting of the Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society, Monday evening, February 1, at the establishment of Boehringer Bros., Bay City, was well attended considering the blizzard that was raging. Some of the officers were stalled on a derailed interurban car and for that reason the meeting was postponed for one week, to Monday, February 8, at the same place. This meeting is important and all are asked to be present.

The rose display was far better than expected. All the exhibits were staged and some choice roses were seen, with Killarneys in the lead. The honors fell to J. B. Goetz Sons, first; Wm. Roethke Floral Co., second; Boehringer Bros, third.

Bay City Notes.

Boehringer Bros. should be proud of their Primula obconica, as they are easily the best in the valley. Business with them has been better than expected.

Richard Irvine is again busy shipping small plants for spring sales, in which he has worked up a big trade.

The busy man is John Marsh; he has always an overdose of funeral work.

Martin Keit, who has a store on Center avenue, is more than pleased with his move; the transient trade keeps him busy.

Saginaw Notes.

Chas. Frueh & Sons are cutting some exceptionally choice carnations this winter, which are picked up before the day is over.

Grohman the Florist has booked many party orders and wedding decorations for this month.

Wm. Roethke Floral Co. is constantly kept short of stock, as business is good in its three stores.

J. B. Goetz Sons say Rose Jonkheer J. L. Mock commands the same price as Beauties.

HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

I have several hundred hyacinths in my cellar in 3-inch pots, which are showing a half-inch of growth. When should I bring them into the greenhouse to have them in flower for Easter?

F. B.

Easter does not come until April 4. Keep your hyacinths as cool as you can, short of actual freezing, until the first week in March. Place them in a cool house, and they will be in ample time. If March should prove warm, they may be a trifle early, but can easily be retarded in a cool cellar. Keep them well supplied with water.

C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Dana R. Herron, Olean, N. Y., says the temptation to hold on to good money is strong, but he has a system by which he has built up a first-class business in the mailing department entirely through the medium of the classified ad section of The Review, which, as he well remarked, was not to blame if he oversold, but rather the contrary. At the time of my visit he was figuring on a carload of glass and a White auto truck.

W. A. Wettlin, Hornell, N. Y., has made many improvements in his recently acquired suburban property of fourteen acres, which was formerly a farm. The location caught the eye of our worthy fellow craftsman and a fine residence is being erected, to be followed by a range of glass.

T. J. Brush, Hornell, in addition to being a selling agent of the White auto truck, has several of the machines in operation. He is also a celery grower of repute and offers consolation to the cut flower growers by stating that the entire yield of Golden Self-blanching on 700 acres, at Arkport, N. Y., in which he is largely interested, brought 50 to 75 cents per crate this winter, in comparison with $2 to $2.50 per crate for the same quality at the same time last year.

C. E. Gunton, manager of the G. R. Oliver estate, Bradford, Pa., says Carnation Philadelphia pleases him. It came into crop late, when prices were better, and so far it is a promising variety.

George A. Heelas, Jamestown, N. Y., believes there is some truth in the common assertion that carnations have not sold so well of late, owing to the excellent counterfeits on sale. Certain it is that the day of the sleepy eye and split calyx is past, and the raiser of new varieties, the grower and shipper of others, must eliminate these faults. The new store is attractive, and business since it was opened has far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of Mr. Heelas.

Lawrence Cotter, of Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, was reminiscent, harking back to the days when, as a member of the old guard, he grew roses that helped make Boston famous. He truly asserted that it is not quantity but quality that counts, and the grower who makes quality his aim is bound to succeed in the long run.

Eliot Worden, Jamestown, says his new house almost paid for itself the first season and he figures on rebuilding the old range at the first opportunity. He has a snug local trade.

Benjamin Dorrance, Dorranceton, Pa., commented that the fates decreed a phenomenal rose crop for the holidays, when 30,000 blooms brought smaller returns than the cut of 22,000 of similar quality in the previous year. The crop is now off, but the plants are vigorous.

Gentlemen:-

Last week we ran an advertisement in The Review on Golden Red Heart Baskets and Cupid's Golden Arrows. We cannot help but write you in reference to same, as we are pleased to tell you we received more results (and when we say results we mean orders) from this advertisement than we have ever received from any single advertisement in any trade paper as long as we have been in business.

We wish to compliment you on the wide distribution and the number of readers you have.

Very respectfully yours, about 50 degrees. Will these plants bloom for Easter if left in this house and not watered too much? Should we cover them with coal ashes? As we want these plants in bloom for Easter, we should like to know the best way in which to do this. S. B.

You have planted your bulbs late; too late, in fact, to expect much from them. They would start far better if kept about 10 to 15 degrees cooler and covered with some coal ashes or sand. They will need seven to eight weeks in the soil before they are rooted and started sufficiently to be brought to the light, and to flower them for Easter you should place the plants in the greenhouse about March 10. You may be able to get something out of them, but you cannot expect any such flowers as you would have had from bulbs potted at the correct time, viz., in October or early November. C. W.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Market conditions continue good; there is a steady, active call for stock that easily takes up nearly all the offerings. Shipping business is good.

Roses and carnations are a little more plentiful than last week. The supply of lilies continues large and besides Easter lilies includes callas and rubrums. Valley has a fair market. Double violets do not fare well, but single violets and sweet peas are already enjoying an active call for St. Valentine's day. The list of small bulbous stock includes narcissi, Roman hyacinths, tulips, jonquils and freesias.

Green stock, especially smilax, is fine and plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's regular meeting will be held February 8, at the Hotel Gibson.

C. E. Critchell was the first wholesaler in the market to offer tulips this winter.

L. H. Kyrk has been getting in some fine smilax from Water Valley, N. Y.

Roger Peterson, of J. A. Peterson & Sons, was among the Cincinnatians in Buffalo last week.

Visitors include Mrs. L. A. Fennel, of Cynthiana, Ky.; C. E. Ruch, of Richmond, Ind.; H. A. Moller, representing the American Foil Co., New York; G. Van Bochove, of Kalamazoo, Mich.

C. H. H.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

A scarcity of all kinds of flowers is being experienced by florists in this vicinity. Spring bulbous stock is coming in slowly. The first of the Dutch hyacinths made their appearance on the market last week. A fine crop of lilies is predicted for Easter.

Florists' Dance.

The florists' annual ball was a great success. The hall was packed to its fullest capacity, and was tastefully decorated with smilax, bay trees, palms and crotons. The Lady Florists' Club decorated the dining room and furnished the luncheon, which was greatly enjoyed.

In the guessing contest, C. N. Ruedlinger won the dozen hotbed sashes offered by Philip J. Foley, of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. He guessed Mr. Foley's weight as 349 pounds, which was correct.

The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Desmond and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wirth. Miss H. B. Whitted had charge of the luncheon.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Club will give its first annual ball February 14, at the West Side Commercial Club. Tickets will be 50 cents.

The Gates-Judd wedding, which took place January 27, was of much interest to florists. Miss H. B. Whitted had the decorations and Perl Bros. the bouquets. The rooms were decorated with smilax, palms and white lilac. The bouquets were works of art, of orchids and valley. C. L. L.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a great assortment of weather in the last week, varying all the way from zero to the present thaw, with snow and rain, which began two days ago. These weather vagaries have had a bad effect on trade. There are plenty of flowers, as the quantities of bulbous flowers make up for the shortage in most other lines. The only really noticeable shortage is in Beauties, and somehow we do not seem so badly off without them. All other roses are particularly fine and there are just about enough of them to keep prices firm. There is some good lilac, which for some reason does not move even at low prices. Tulips and daffodils must be sold cheaply to move any quantity of them and the cold weather gave the violets another bad week.

Various Notes.

Samuel McClements is spending a few days at Atlantic City, recuperating from his recent illness and getting in shape for the filling of a number of large orders he has on his books.

Wm. M. Turner, the Wilkinsburg florist, was coasting with a party of friends on Friday night, January 29, on a large bobsled holding fifteen people, when, in trying to avoid running into a vehicle, they were thrown into a ditch. Four of them were taken to the hospital, seriously injured, and the others were badly shaken up.

Fischer & McGrath, of New Castle, Pa., report trade as being excellent. They have had a large run on funeral work. Mr. Fischer's residence was slightly damaged by fire January 26, but the fire department promptly extinguished the blaze.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, Pa., will increase the size of his store by building an addition in the rear and will make other changes that will greatly improve its appearance.

The Pittsburgh representatives at the carnation convention returned home January 30, well pleased with the convention, and they report having had a good time. Clarke.

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

Guests of the Dorners at La Fayette.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held its regular monthly meeting, February 2, in La Fayette, inspecting the establishment of F. Dorner & Sons Co. The delegation was met at the station and rolled out to the greenhouses in taxicabs. The carnation range, with its houses devoted to this year's introductions and seedlings, was certainly a sight to behold. The house of Good Cheer is all that the name implies, being a veritable sea of buds; it surely will prove a money-maker. Pink Sensation took everybody's eye. Blooms of this variety will easily bring $2 per dozen during the winter season in any good-sized city. White Wonder, a leader in whites and introduced by this firm some years ago, showed up well. Seedlings of every color and habit of growth were in full bloom. The sight was bewildering. Among the seedlings was a bench of No. 271-10, a leather-petaled medium pink; a tango red cross between Rosette and No. 31-08, a deep cerise that looked red under artificial light; No. 53-11, a pleasing light pink; No. 54-11, crimson, just the right shade, with 42-inch stem. Champion, disseminated in 1913, is a red White Wonder.

The propagating houses were as clean as a new pin. In fact, the whole place looked as polished as the gold star on the breast of Theo. Dorner, who is head of the La Fayette police force. The rose range had been entirely rebuilt since the occasion of the last visit, and is of Moninger construction. Hoosier Beauty was the big attraction, although some fine pink seedlings held the eye. Fine grafted and own-root stock of Hoosier Beauty filled the benches and will be ready for shipment March 1. To supply La Fayette's retail demand, several houses are devoted to miscellaneous stock. Gloire de Chatelaine begonia made quite a hit with the visitors. F. E. Dorner said it is easy to handle and satisfies the customers, keeps well in the home and is a continuous bloomer. A bench of winter-blooming antirrhinum seedlings were coming on, having been benched from 4-inch pots after the early mums were cut, and will be in full bloom for Easter, thus cutting two crops from the same space.

In the workshop the visitors took out their pencils and made notes as to the method in which the tools and other florists' supplies are conveniently placed, all of which had been previously worked out and prominently exemplified the Dorner efficiency.

The Business Session.

The entire party was taken to the city and banqueted at the La Fayette Club, the entire house being at the disposal of the florists. After the luncheon, the business session was called to order by ex-President W. W. Coles, in the absence of W. J. Vesey, Jr. The increasing or decreasing popularity of the carnation was taken up and discussed by Irwin Bertermann, Herman Junge, I. Rosnosky, W. W. Coles and Fred Dorner. An invitation to meet March 2 in Portland, Ind., was extended by W. Frank & Sons and was accepted.

After the meeting adjourned the party visited the new retail store conducted by Miss Emily Dorner, whom the florists highly complimented for her efficient management and artistic arrangement of stock.

OBITUARY

William H. Egee.

The account of the tragic death of William Henry Egee, in the Philadelphia column of The Review January 28, covers in brief, with its accompanying line, the description of a busy life, full of activity and of usefulness. To it should be added a few words of his love for his chosen calling and of his unfailing courtesy to all. Mr. Egee's unfailing "Young lady, what can I do for you?" with emphasis on the last pronoun, delivered quite naturally even to those who could no longer by any possibility lay claim to youth, won him friends everywhere. So, too, did his bills "for professional services" to those requiring an opinion on an ailing house plant, following a special visit and a most careful diagnosis. His friends will miss him sadly. Phil.

F. B. Stowe.

F. B. Stowe, at one time part owner of the Maywood Nursery Co., Maywood, Ill., and later proprietor of the Phoenix Nursery, at Delavan, Wis., passed away suddenly January 25 at Eureka Springs, Ark., where he had gone for his health. The funeral was held January 29 at Maywood, Ill.

William R. Keay.

William R. Keay, of Lowville, N. Y., died Friday night, January 22, of congestion of the brain, at the age of 51. He was born in Scotland and came to this country twenty-six years ago. He had been a resident of Lowville for sixteen years. He is survived by his wife, three sons, David, in the United States navy, and John and William, of Lowville; and four daughters, Mrs. Jerry Boland, of Herkimer, and Anna, Genie and Agnes Keay, of Lowville.

Otto Lantz.

Otto Lantz, 34 years old, of Newcastle, Ind., committed suicide January 23 by drinking poison. No reason has been discovered for the act. He was unmarried and made his home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lantz.

Mrs. Julia Noelke.

Mrs. Julia Noelke, widow of Charles Noelke, who for fifteen years conducted a retail store at 2224 Seventh street, New York city, previous to his death December 4, 1912, died January 29 at her home, at 415 West One Hundred and Forty-sixth street. She was a daughter of the late Samuel Higgins.

W. F. Steinbach.

W. F. Steinbach, in business at Richmond, Va., shot himself at his home January 21 and died later at the Memorial hospital. No reason for the act is known.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The city, hotels and flower stores were full of excitement last week because of the many visiting florists attending the convention of the American Carnation Society. There were the usual groups visiting the stores on tours of inspection, jolly greetings accompanied by cordial shakings of hands, renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. All stores were made to look their prettiest for the visitors.

There is an abundance of all kinds of stock, including roses, carnations, sweet peas, lilies, orchids and valley; also such bulbous stock as narcissi, tulips and daffodils. Forget-me-nots, freesias, pansies, single violets, yellow daisies, stevia, cornflower, mignonette and snapdragon are to be had. Excellent white lilac and azaleas were seen. There is an abundance of all kinds of flowering plants.

Various Notes.

The downtown florists had special window displays during the convention, which were interesting by way of contrast. The branch store of W. J. Palmer & Son had a handsome window of carnations and sweet peas in separate vases, with a background of azaleas. The Lenox Flower Shop used large vases of carnations with baskets of gardenias and assorted flowers. J. Benson Stafford had an artistic display of spring flowers. S. A. Anderson had an elaborate window of French baskets filled with growing plants of azaleas, tulips, hyacinths, etc., with white lilac in full bloom forming a background. Huge cornucopias of daffodils were hung at frequent intervals. At the Rebstock branch, Dutch and colonial bouquets formed the main feature.

Charles Felton deserves a great deal of credit for the designing of the decorations for the banquet of the American Carnation Society. Vice-president S. A. Anderson worked hard for the success of the convention and banquet, and the result was most gratifying. Having the ladies present added a great deal to the pleasure of the company.

Stamford, Conn.—The annual entertainment and dance of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society will take place in Mechanics hall February 16. The program will consist of vocal and instrumental music, vaudeville features, etc. A buffet lunch will be served, to be followed by dancing. Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE carnation convention demonstrated that all the numerous coddlers of new flesh pink varieties have cut out quite a task for themselves in beating Pink Delight.

GROWERS of cut flowers for the wholesale markets will not build many greenhouses this season, but the country florists, especially in the middle west, will keep right on building the same as usual. Trade in the grain states never was better than now.

Now that Christmas is far enough in the past to give the right perspective, it seems clear cut flowers did not suffer any more than did begonias. A great many stores refused to handle begonias this Christmas, resulting in some of the growers getting badly stuck, but a great many more stores will pass them next season and a lot of growers will be careful not to overproduce. The trouble is the public expects too much of begonias.

ONLY ONE REGRET.

In this year of off business there seems to be only one method of selling that is working as steadily as ever. It is the classified section of The Review. Like this:

Enclosed find check for $1.50 in payment for recent geranium ad in your paper. It did the work in quick time. We had replies from Philadelphia, Omaha, St. Joseph, Quincy, Ill., and a number of other places. In fact, we received about five times as many orders as we could fill before we could get you word to kill our ad. We have but one regret, and that is the necessity of returning good money for want of plants.—Colorado City Floral Co., by E. L. Endicott, January 22, 1915.

CHEER FOR CUT FLOWER MEN.

"You say you would rather sell plants than cut flowers at Christmas? Well, let me tell you I don't agree to that at all." The speaker was E. Wienhoeber, who is one of Chicago's oldest retailers, one of the largest, and whose opinion frequently is sought and always is valued for its conservatism.

"Let me tell you it was only the scarcity, high price and low quality of cut flowers that gave the plants their start. Now it will be different. The days of holiday high prices are over. And did you have more trouble with your cut flowers than with your plants at Christmas? How about the begonias and azaleas? People expect too much of plants and when we make them good on complaint we encourage them to expect more. We can put $200 to $300 of cut flowers in our machine and deliver on one trip. How about the big, bulky, hard-to-wrap plants?

"We never sold so many cut flowers as this Christmas, but we shall sell more another time. All the trade needs is the assurance that good stock can be had at reasonable prices and the Christmas cut flower business will jump. You can't get $5 a dozen retail for roses in any great quantity, but put us in position to offer good Killarney at, say $3, and we can sell a wonderful lot of them and would rather do it than sell plants."

S. A. F. BOARD TO MEET.

The board of directors of the Society of American Florists will hold its Lenten meeting at the Hotel La Salle, in Chicago, early in March. It is the rule for the board to meet in the convention city, but at its last session, held in August, it was the consensus of opinion that it would be inadvisable to try to call the board to San Francisco. Chicago has been selected as the most convenient point and the call will reach the members of the board within a few days.

The meeting will be of unusual interest and importance for several reasons, but most of all for the fact that it will be the first one participated in by the representatives of the affiliated societies. Those who are entitled to votes are:

The junior ex-president—Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis.
The president—Patrick Welch, of Boston.
The vice-president—Daniel MacRorie, of San Francisco.
The secretary—John Young, of New York.
The treasurer—Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo.
The directors—A. F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.; J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati; Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.

THE LIGHTING SYSTEM FOR YOU.

The traveling commission man, above all others, needs a lamp to guide him to the best opportunities, and is therefore a good judge of lighting systems, metaphorically speaking. So many florists use The Review as their individual lamp to light up their road to business success that an advertiser who puts his offer in the paper steps into a veritable limelight. The strength of the illumination is what the following tries to express:

I am surely well pleased with your valued publication. It is a lamp unto my feet. It enables the tourist merchant and wayfarer to locate by intuition the object of his pursuit. It is the meat and marrow, the backbone and right arm of the profession. I certainly ought to know, having lived mostly on percentage since I subscribed for it.—C. F. Blair, Wichita Falls, Tex., January 23, 1915.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market is easier. Last week business was excellent; demand was sufficiently brisk to clean up stock in nearly all lines and the week's total for most of the wholesale houses was the best of the season to date, excepting Christmas week, of course. Then came a day of snow, two of rain and a cheerless ground-hog day. The weather conditions were such as always result in diminishing demand; so bad a Sunday as the last day of January invariably means an inactive market Monday. Shipping trade this week is again the backbone of the market. Even shipping trade has fallen off, but not nearly so much as the city business. The general opinion is that it is primarily the result of the bad weather, and that supplies of stock have not increased enough to account in any large part for the change in the situation. It is expected that the market will revive with the return of good shopping weather.

Rose crops are coming on again. The increase in supply is not yet great, but the worst of the scarcity is over; the shortage was only of a few days' duration this year. Short roses continue scarce and difficult to locate, but there are enough long, fancy roses to meet the demand. The fact is that even the best stores are reluctant to pay more than 8 cents for any considerable part of their day's purchases; they want roses at 4 cents to 6 cents and buy lightly of the higher grades. In general the quality of the roses is excellent. Beauties

SEA MOSS

THE LARGEST STOCK IN AMERICA

Sea Moss, also called Japanese Air Plant, is one of the items affected by the war—it is so scarce that we do not know where we can replace our stock when this lot is sold. Appreciating the scarcity we ordered heavily and our latest imports constitute the largest supply in America—we believe the largest supply in the whole world. The quality is fine. Extra large bunches. We advise ordering a season's supply—you may not get another chance soon.

are not in large supply; several important growers are cutting lightly and those that have the heaviest crops are cutting a large percentage of deformed flowers, good only for cheap funeral sprays.

The general easing of the market has resulted in a relapse in carnation prices. The supply is adequate for all requirements except those of the man who wants to buy just a little cheaper than he did yesterday—he can accomplish his purpose, but it requires some legwork.

Violets are extremely abundant and in light demand. Cattleyas continue plentiful. There is more valley than the market requires. The week has seen a large increase in the supply of jonquils and daffodils have become fairly plentiful. Tulips also are much more abundant and the lower qualities are selling cheaply. It is a fact, however, that bulbous stock has sold unusually well and at excellent prices thus far this season. Freesia has had a specially good run. Paper Whites are an exception; they are difficult to move. Romans are more abundant than heretofore.

Sweet peas are coming in more heavily than at any previous date this season. This has become the favorite corsage flower and the good Spencers, even if on quite short stems, are selling well.

The green goods market shows no new feature. There is an abundance of everything on the list.

Belle Washburn's Debut.

The reception given Carnation Belle Washburn at Buffalo, where it won the S. A. F. silver medal, has decided Bassett & Washburn to disseminate the variety January 1, 1916. C. L. Washburn says he believes this variety is the forerunner of a new type of carnation, one that will not have to be replanted each season. The flowers shown at Buffalo were cut from plants now in their second year. The firm reports that the variety gives twenty-five per cent more flowers the second year than are had the first season, and the quality also is better.

Bassett & Washburn are asking for bids on the erection of five more greenhouses at the Greggs Station range. These houses are to be 28 x 300 and are to be rushed for early planting to roses. The plan is then to put up five more houses of the same size for autumn planting to carnations. The Greggs and Hinsdale ranges now are of about equal size, but the Hinsdale plant will grow steadily smaller as the old houses are vacated and demolished.

Various Notes.

The quartette laid up last week by carbuncles and other similar affections are again on duty, except C. W. McKellar. John Poehlmann wears a neat patch covering one cheek, but A. L. Vaughan and T. E. Waters look nearly as good as new.

Jacob Mergen, 2025 West Twelfth street, has received many expressions of sympathy this week as the result of the death of his son, Henry, which occurred January 30. The deceased left, besides his father and mother, a widow and three children. The funeral took place February 2, interment being at Oak Ridge.

Weiland & Risch are grafting on 100,000 Manetti stocks this season. They use no own root roses on their place. The only white rose planted next season will be Double White Killarney.

Until recently the A. L. Randall Co. has had its supply department divided in sub-departments, a man in charge of sales on each important item or group of items. Recently, however, each department man was given a certain territory in which to handle sales on all lines. The new plan has been working long enough to indicate that it is a decided improvement, calculated to considerably increase the sales as each man becomes acquainted with the individual needs of the buyers in his territory.

So much opprobrium has been heaped on the Hadley rose that it is pleasant to hear John Poehlmann say his company is well enough pleased with the variety so that the planting will be increased next season.

CATTLEYAS

FOR ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

We offer Cattleyas that are extra fine. They are grown right here at home, where we can get them fresh and unbruised by rehandling—send them to you in as good shape as though you cut them in your own greenhouse. A big crop is on. We are sure you never handled better quality. Prices very cheap—a fine chance to sell orchids low and still make the usual margin of profit. Write us about it if you can use a quantity. It will pay you to push them for St. Valentine's day.

Single—VIOLETS—Double

Our Violets are fine. We have the choicest pick of the Hudson river doubles, big, fine, dark blue flowers; also the fragrant western singles, large, fine flowers. We can quote very attractive prices on lots of 5000, 10,000 and up.

FREESIA
Purity, the pure white kind that sells.

SWEET PEAS
Fancy Butterfly, a large supply.

TULIPS
All colors, good stock, low prices.

JONQUILS
Can supply in almost any quantity.

LILIES
We always have them.

DAFFODILS
You can get them here.

AND PLENTY OF HIGH-CLASS VALLEY

We have them NOW CARNATIONS All Colors Fine Stock

A fine lot of MEXICAN IVY and ADIANTUM

Don't for a moment forget that Randall's is headquarters for Roses—no larger supply, no more complete assortment, no better stock, no more reasonable prices—no place where you can get better or more certain satisfaction.

Erne & Klingel report an excellent sale for Adiantum Croweanum. A shipment from New Jersey, received February 1, had the tips frosted.

Twenty-four houses have been given to Beauties this season at the establishment of Peter Reinberg, but Superintendent Emil Reichling says the number will be considerably reduced next season, as room is to be made for from 35,000 to 40,000 Mrs. Russell. A part of the space will be obtained by cutting down on Richmond, which has been grown in large quantity for several seasons.

The atmosphere of unusual good cheer apparent this week in the store of Zech & Mann is partly due to the fact that Miss Carrie Zech, daughter of the senior partner and sister of A. The trade was strongly represented in Referee Eastman's Bankruptcy court in the Monadnock block February 1, when inquiry into the case of the H. A. Fisher Co., of Kalamazoo, was begun. The examination of George Fisher, who was the buyer for the bankrupt, occupied the greater part of the day. The wholesale florists who had been subpœnaed were told to return February 3, at 2 p. m.

Announcement was made January 30 that, commencing February 1, Frank F. Benthey would make his headquarters with Kennicott Bros. Co., selling the roses of the F. J. Benthey establishment at New Castle.

ida and Cuba. Arthur Weatherwax will be in charge of the store.

Peter Reinberg has been under the doctor's care for several days, suffering with a severe cold.

The Schiller north side store was opened two years ago yesterday, February 3, 1913, and has fully justified the undertaking.

The trade interests on East Sixty-third street are well taken care of by J. H. McNeilly and A. F. Keenan, each of whom operates two retail stores within a stretch of four blocks. Mr. McNeilly's west store, where one of the Fisher brothers is employed, seems to be rapidly increasing the quantity of stock handled.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, did not plant Matchless last season, but has received 10,000 rooted cuttings from the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., to go on the benches for 1915-16.

Out in Rogers Park there are many prosperous, contented growers. Nick Thinnes is one of them. He has five acres of land on which the greenhouses and dwelling stand, for which he recently was offered $5,000 per acre, but it did not tempt him. Besides the living for the family, he always cleans up better than interest on $25,000, sometimes $2,500 in a good year.

J. A. Budlong bought two lots of Ophelia rose plants last March, one lot from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, and the other from the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, 1,800 plants in all. They have given so good an account of themselves that three full houses will be given to the variety for next season.

A. Lange has received considerable free advertising in the real estate sections of the daily papers as the result of his lease of space in the new Stevens building. The building still is some time from completion, but most of the space is sold to those catering to women's interests.

The contract for the decorating for the cement show has been given to the George Wittbold Co. Boxwood and bay trees will be used.

Henry Wittbold had the job of decorating the Coliseum for the automobile show.

Visitors: I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.; Ralph M. Ward, New York; G. Van Bochove, of Kalamazoo, Mich., returning from a trip to Florida, where fishing was good; H. C. Reeser, of Springfield, O.; C. W. Scott, New York.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Reports from the wholesale and retail trade appear to be quite satisfactory. Business has been good and prices on cut flowers have advanced over those of last week, except on the better grade of roses, which are plentiful. There is a scarcity of short and medium roses and the wholesalers find it hard to fill orders for these grades. The quality of the roses is better than usual for this time of the year. Funeral work is responsible for the shortage of lower grade roses. Carnations are coming in somewhat heavily, but are well taken care of at fair prices.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Business has been fairly good, the biggest item being funeral work, which has been heavy for the last two or three weeks. A few social gatherings and informal dances have also assisted in increasing sales.

Flowers have been plentiful, and good prices have prevailed. Pot plants do not move as fast as they should. The town seems pretty well filled with azaleas, cyclamens, primroses, lilac and cinerarias. American Beauties are scarce and prices are high, running from 10 to 60 cents each. Killarneys, Richmonds and Wards are in fine shape, prices varying from $6 to $12 per hundred. Carnations are plentiful and sell well at from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Violets are plentiful and move well at 40 to 50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are fine, and a good supply was taken care of at from 40 to 60 cents for the common and 75 cents to $2 for the Spencer varieties. Callas, Harrisii and rubrum lilies move fairly well at $6 to $10. Jonquils and tulips are going well at $3 to $4, and freesias and Romans are offered at $3. Valley is good and sells for $3 to $4. Narcissi, yellow and white, have decreased in supply, and are offered at $2 and $3.

since last week, though the outcome seems favorable to Mr. Poulin.

The florists of this city are looking forward to St. Valentine's day, and expect this to be the greatest one in a number of years. All are preparing for this occasion with the best expectations. Coöperative advertising, window displays and the like are being used, and all are confident that a record-breaking St. Valentine's day will be the result.

Krueger Bros. expect a fine crop of sweet peas for St. Valentine's day.

Geo. Bayer & Son have a fine lot of violets at the present time, and look forward to St. Valentine's day with great expectations.

Max Spanner has taken care of a fine lot of orders during the last week, for several large funerals, one of the leading orders being for the Bartecki funeral.

F. A. Imoberstag is filling his houses with a fine collection of miscellaneous spring stock.

Barney Karsor reports that his business has fallen off to some extent since the holidays, but he is looking forward with great anticipation for spring trade.

Metz & Bateman report business fine, especially in the line of corsages and wedding decorations. G. B. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was like old times. Prices were steady at the higher range. Shipments continue light. The outlook is for a week or ten days of the present level of values. Everything is off crop. Soon there will be an abundance of roses, and these seem to dominate the situation.

American Beauties are scarce and high; 75 cents each was general for the selected. So all roses were made to join the procession. Nothing worth while sold under $3 per hundred. The novelties were all higher and there were not enough to go around. Some Hadleys sold as high as Beauties.

Four dollars per hundred seems to be top for the best of the carnation novelties. The ordinaries sell at $1 per hundred. Fine stock can be had at $2 to $3. Laura Weber is growing in popularity. Mrs. Ward and Matchless hold their stand in the front rank. McKinley day was cold, 10 degrees above zero. This may have had a depressing effect on sales, which were not up to expectation, from the retail standpoint.

Cattleyas are abundant. Prices continue at the low level of the last two weeks, the highest obtainable being $25 per hundred. Cypripediums have fallen to $1 per dozen. Oncidiums have risen slightly, but the cattleyas are certainly a great disappointment to our large local growers.

Longiflorums sell at from $5 to $8 per hundred. Most of the arrivals are cleared at $6 per hundred. From $1 to $3 per dozen seems to be the range for gardenias. Valley is lower, and rubrums and callas have declined. All else remains at last week's quotations. Sweet peas are fast increasing, and 35 cents per hundred seems to be high tide for violets.

Various Notes.

February 8, the New York Florists' Club will hold its usual meeting. President Bunyard has sent a circular letter to every member urging attendance. The permanent home for the club is the important consideration of the evening. This will be carnation night and some fine stock and novelties will be on exhibition. The club's annual dinner will be held at the Hotel Astor, Saturday evening, March 20. The international flower show runs from March 17 to 23, so that out-of-town visitors will have the opportunity of enjoying the affair. Charles Schenck is chairman of the dinner committee.

The flower show committee meets every Saturday at the Grand Central Palace. Everything is progressing favorably and a great success is now anticipated. The leading retailers are perfecting a plan of exhibiting that should be the drawing feature of the show.

The new Retail Florists' Society is holding weekly meetings, the object being to promote harmony and coöperation.

street, this week. The quarters are roomy and convenient.

Charles Kelly, bookkeeper for M. C. Ford, is still confined to his home but is hopeful of early recovery.

The many friends of John Gunther, of Gunther Bros., have manifested great sympathy for himself and family in the loss of his daughter, Dorothy. Many floral tokens at the funeral, January 30, attested the sorrow of his brother florists.

Albert Constant Demeusy, son of the carnation grower at Flatbush, was married February 2, his bride being Miss Margorie Converse, of Brooklyn.

Anna Papademetri is reported in the daily papers to have bid over $12,000 per year for the flower stand under Brooklyn bridge, and for the renewal of her lease, for which two years ago she paid $50 monthly.

John Young speaks highly of the selling qualities of the Reuter rose, Prince E. C. d'Arenberg.

W. H. Siebrecht again this season is the only grower of Acacia pubescens for the New York market.

March 1 is announced as the opening date for the MacNiff auctions in their enlarged quarters.

H. E. Froment will remove to 148 West Twenty-eighth street in the early spring.

Robert Tesson, of St. Louis, is a visitor this week.

Arthur Herrington has been appointed manager of the spring show.

Irving Goldstein, formerly with the Greater New York Co., Brooklyn, now is head salesman with Guttman & Raynor.

the decorating committee of the pure food show at the auditorium this week, which is sufficient guarantee of the success of that part of the show. He is also a member of the banquet committee, which entertains the prominent guests.

Carnations will be the main thing at the meeting of the Florists' Club February 18. A number of new varieties will be on exhibition, which means that no one interested in carnations can afford to miss it. H. K. R.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Taken all in all, the beginning of the shortest month of the year finds a slightly larger supply of carnations and of roses. Carnations especially have been an important factor in the week's trading. All good flowers have brought from $30 to $40 per thousand, selling much more rapidly than did a smaller number in the week before. The price is not so good as for the corresponding week of last year, but, general business conditions considered, it is quite as good as could fairly be expected. Roses have shared in the demand to a lesser degree at about the same prices as last week, the only difference being that the shorter grades of roses are decidedly preferred to the longer, which keeps prices down.

There is an improvement in sight in the orchid market; the supply of cattleyas promises to fall nearer to the demand than it has for a long time past. Violets continue to sell at extremely low prices. Gardenias seem to have waned in favor. Easter lilies are scarcer and higher in price. Forget-me-nots and wallflowers have arrived. The lovely Acacia pubescens is here again. Lilium magnificum is an important decorative flower where pink is desired. Primula malacoides adds variety to the primroses. Smilax has been in demand for the balls. Of the spring flowers, Golden Spur, freesia and the best of the sweet peas have fared pretty well, but tulips go slowly and Paper Whites are still awfully cheap.

Prices generally are lower by at least fifteen per cent on all varieties of flowers than they were at this time last season. The tone of the market, however, is distinctly better than a month ago.

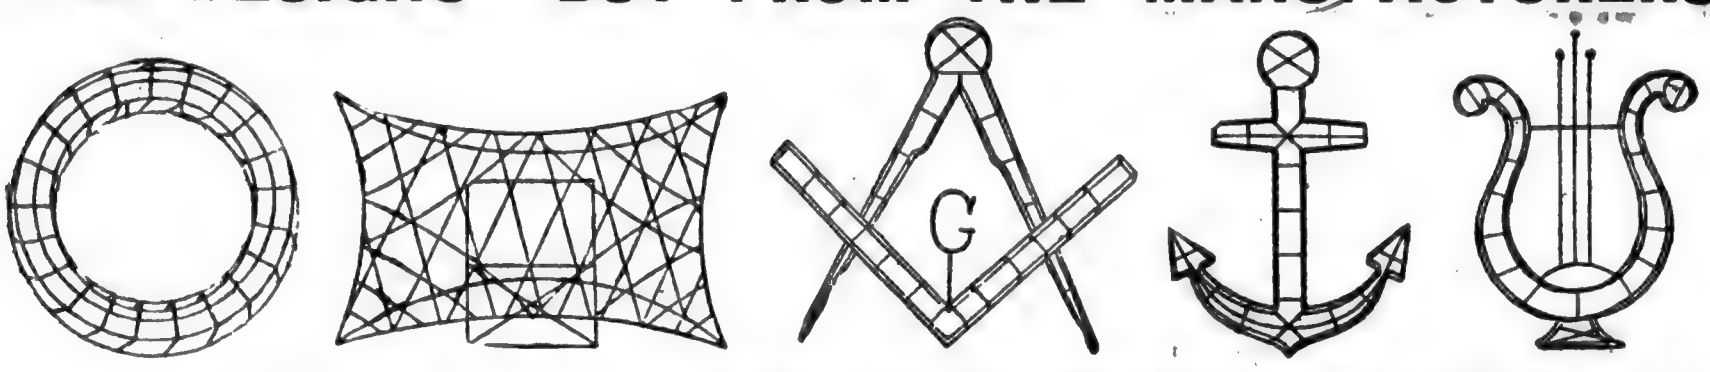
see well-grown stock. Then there is the added pleasure of seeing a quantity of such delicately graceful palms in all sizes, from the fernery filler to the specimen. Then again, it is something to know that nowhere else in the wide, wide world can you see such another lot. Think of it! No need of going to Patagonia or even to the Isthmus of Panama; you can just go to Riverton and see the largest stock of cocos in the world today. The thing that is especially fascinating about the cocos range is the prevalence of the "Reserved" label. This label always appears on perfect stock, no matter in what size. It means that specimens, perfect specimens, can only be made by growing on perfect plants and not by taking leftovers, if there are any for that purpose. This is why the plants look so wonderfully well when they reach the pedestal stage; this and of course the skillful culture that carries them through every stage of growth.

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock believes that despite the unsatisfactory Christmas conditions, the season will be a fair one.

Herbert W. Johnson, Jr., lost his Mercer car by fire at Haddonfield, N. J., this week.

Edward Reid paid a flying visit south as far as Norfolk, returning January 28. Mr. Reid says the new store of Blick Florist, on Granby street, Norfolk, is the peer of any flower store in the country.



J. J. Habermehl's Sons arranged unusually elaborate decorations for the Assembly ball at the Bellevue-Stratford January 29. Pink Lilium magnificum was freely used, together with much smilax and many plants.

Robert Q. Shoch returned from the south last week, filled with admiration for the plucky way in which the southern florists are meeting and overcoming the adverse conditions that have prevailed there.

H. Wilson Garrett has purchased a handsome property at Oak Lane, Pa., where he proposes building a store and residence that will be a credit to the community.

A. L. Fortunes says that the demand for greens should be at its height this month.

William Swayne, of Kennett Square, is sending fine Delphinium Belladonna to W. J. Baker.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer says that St. Valentine's is rapidly becoming one of the important flower days.

President George Burton occupied the chair at a storm-reduced meeting of the Florists' Club February 1, devoted to the discussion of S. A. F. and national show affairs. Hugh B. Barclay showed well-grown carnations and lilac. Phil.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at the town hall January 27. There was an attendance of 200. Members of the banquet committee, Wm. Till, P. J. Gilmore, Paul Maillard, Axel Magnuson, James Morton and M. Mackay, decorated the hall and tables beautifully, and the menu left nothing to be desired. E. H. Wetterlow presided at the postprandial exercises and extended a cordial greeting to all present. Thomas J. Grey responded for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in his usual humorous strain. Piano selections were furnished by E. A. Rand, readings by Miss Area Farron, while Prof. Brignate, sleight of hand humorist, entertained for half an hour with mystifying tricks. The Rev. W. H. Rider, D. D., was the principal speaker of the evening and made an eloquent address, after which dancing was enjoyed until early morning.

The market is in a quite satisfactory condition. The weather, with a temperature close to zero and practically no sun, has shortened up some lines of stock. Carnations are, perhaps, the most glutty of all flowers just now. American Beauties are not plentiful, but the specials are fine. Other varieties of roses are good, but they have shortened up considerably, bringing the growers a little better prices. The demand for Ward, Taft, Sunburst and My Maryland is good. Valley is overplentiful. Violets, which are large and fine, were disposed of January 30 by special sales at 35 and 40 cents per bunch retail. Jonquils are not coming in so fast and are easily disposed of. Tulips, chiefly yellow, do not sell so fast as usual. Sweet peas sell well. Acacia is not selling fast, probably owing to its high price. Paper Whites, Romans and primula blossoms have been noticed in some stores, daintily arranged in baskets. Orchids move steadily, but there is no big demand. There are plenty of green goods of all descriptions, and a good display of potted plants.

Various Notes.

Salter Bros., at the east side store, are showing some fine lilac bushes and hardy azaleas. Their west side store is displaying fine cyclamens and Dutch hyacinths arranged in baskets.

David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is sending us some fine orchid-flowering sweet peas.

James Vick's Sons had an attractive booth at the Western New York Horticultural Society's annual meeting, January 27 and 29.

The Rochester office of Lord & Burnham Co. reports a marked increase of the 1914 business over that of the previous year. The majority of orders have been for larger and better houses. Prospects for 1915 are daily looking better. H. J. H.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business this week has been fair. There is plenty of good stock to take care of all demands. The supply of roses and carnations is heavy and the quality of the stock is good. Violets, valley and sweet peas are first-class. Golden Spur is finding a good sale, with just about enough coming in to supply the demand. Tulips, hyacinths and daffodils are beginning to come in.

WARREN SHINN, Collector

Woodbury, N. J.

The quality is as good as can be expected this early in the season. Paper Whites are fine, but the market is still overstocked. Callas and Easter lilies are good and find a ready sale.

There is also a good stock of plants, which are selling fairly well. It is an agreeable surprise to note the way Primula malacoides is selling this year. It was hard to dispose of them in former seasons, but this year everybody seems to want it. There is a shortage in good araucarias. Some extra fine pots of Freesia Purity are seen.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine has been attending the convention of the American Carnation Society in Buffalo. He is now visiting in New York.

Alphonse Hoyer recently lost one of his brothers, who died at St. Joseph hospital of blood poisoning.

Miss Avery Edwards, who has been ill for several days, is again at her desk in the office of the Park Floral Co. R. L.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,
508 S. Dearborn St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

The Market.

Stock has shown considerable improvement during the last week. Business, while quiet, seems to be showing some improvement generally, and while there is much room for additional increase, the present is not nearly so bad as it might be.

Roses have increased in supply and are more plentiful than they have been. Short grades are still scarce, but long stock is in sufficient supply to offset this shortage. Of course, long stock is bringing better prices, but it is only necessary to pay a fair price to get plenty of roses for all orders. Fancy roses are in small supply; in fact, they are practically out of the market at this time. Those varieties that are not off crop are being propagated heavily, and the supply is down to a minimum. Killarney seems to be the only exception and this is in good supply.

Carnations have increased in quantity, and the quality remains quite good. Sales of this stock seem to be a little healthier and prospects are better than they have been since Christmas.

The supply of violets has fallen off to a great entent, but the quality of the stock has shown no deterioration. Single violets are scarce and the demand far exceeds the supply. Prices have advanced as the supply has decreased, and the revenue from sales is not a great deal less.

Valley is still plentiful, and sales are slow. Spring stock is coming in stronger every day and is moving fairly well. Daffodils are slow in making their appearance and are just beginning to be seen on the market.

Various Notes.

Roy F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., was in Milwaukee Thursday, January 28. While here Mr. Wilcox took a trip to the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co., where he found the stock in fine condition.

P. L. McKee, of the J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago, made a short stay here Thursday, January 28.

Loeffler & Benke, of Watertown, Wis., are consigning some Butterfly sweet peas to the Milwaukee market that are exceptionally fine. No trouble is experienced in disposing of all shipments.

Gimbel Bros.' flower department, which was installed last October, has met with success thus far a great deal beyond expectations. There is always some novelty on hand to create interest. At present there is a display of Austrian pottery, which is attracting no little notice. The vases are of odd design and the shapes are almost weird. Keeping them filled with tulips, daffodils and other spring flowers adds materially to the display. H. J. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While it cannot be truthfully stated that there is anything like a boom in cut flower circles, conditions are much more satisfactory than during the first part of January. This is due to lighter receipts, more than anything else, as demand has not been robust. Roses have not cleaned up quite so well as a week ago. Long-stemmed Beauties have made up to $8 a dozen. These are scarce and sell well. Select Ophelia, Killarney Queen, Russell and Hadley make $16 to $20 per hundred. Killarney and White Killarney have each sold well, but short-stemmed stock drags a little more.

Carnations are doing better than they were, but $3 is about the limit on price. Few bring $4 and ordinary flowers go at $1.50 to $2, which are not profitable midwinter prices. Violets continue comparatively cheap. In bulbous flowers there is a larger supply and more variety. Murillo tulips are in and Dutch Golden Spurs are plentiful. Freesia is abundant and much cheaper. Marguerites sell well; all the best flowers make $2 per hundred. There is a large supply of sweet peas. The grandifloras drag, but the Spencers sell well. Callas are abundant, as are lilies. There is some extra fine mignonette in the market. Cattleyas go slowly; the best make $4 per dozen with difficulty. In the way of miscellaneous flowers there are wallflowers in good supply, snapdragons, white buddleias, lilacs, pansies, dimorphothecas and plenty of stevia.

Club Meeting.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston never had a larger or more enthusiastic audience on any of its ladies' nights than was the case January 28, in spite of the fact that a number of prominent members were at the Buffalo convention. The attendance was 410, which surpassed last year's record. As is usual on installation nights, regular business was shortened as much as possible. L. G. Van Leeuwen reported that the landscape class numbered twenty, the average attendance being seventeen. The question of the annual banquet was brought up. It was voted to hold one, date and details being left to the executive committee. It was voted to donate prizes to the amount of $50 for the coming exhibition of the American Rose Society.

The president appointed D. Finlayson and James Wheeler a committee to escort the newly elected officers to the front, each being greeted with a round of applause, and delivering short addresses pledging their best efforts for the club's advancement. W. J. Kennedy, the retiring president, received an enthusiastic reception, which was well merited, as no previous president worked harder for the club's advancement. H. H. Bartsch, the new president, made an excellent address expressing his gratitude for the honor bestowed upon him. He also spoke appreciatively of his appointment as a director of the S. A. F. He said he would use every effort to uphold the club's prestige and all who know him have no doubt that he will do so, as the new president is a real hustler. He received a round of cheers on taking his seat. Owing to the illness of James Methuen, the vice-president-elect was unable to attend. Peter Fisher, the treasurer, was absent at Buffalo and his financial report will be heard February 16.

Secretary W. N. Craig in his report stated that the largest attendance at a meeting in 1914 had been 372, smallest attendance 104, average attendance 155. During last year thirty-nine new members had been admitted and five died. The present membership is 468. The club has 105 members in the S. A. F. During the year 7,757 pieces of mail were sent out.

President Bartsch appointed the following committees for 1915: Exhibits—James Wheeler, chairman; Robert Cameron, William Sim, T. H. Westwood, F. E. Palmer, Donald McKenzie, S. J. Goddard, Charles Sander, Eber Holmes, Julius Heurlin, W. H. Elliott, Alexander Montgomery, Henry Penn, Kenneth Finlayson, A. A. Pembroke and Duncan Finlayson. Entertainment—George W. Hamer, chairman; W. J. Collins, W. H. Judd, John McIntyre, H. M. Robinson, Joshua Lawson, W. R. Thornhill, George H. Noyes, J. J. McCarthy and Harold Edgar.

Following the regular business an entertainment was enjoyed, the performers being Miss Kitty Singer, instrumentalist; Chas. Tasker and Miss Jean Tanner, soloists, and Miss Dorris Pearl Tribbee, elocutionist and fancy dancer. All the selections were vigorously applauded. Following the entertainment a collation was served, after which dancing was enjoyed to the strains of Combie's orchestra until the small hours. Everyone present voted the occasion a most delightful one.

Exhibits are not looked for at the January meeting, but Edward Winkler had a nice vase of Carnation Morning Glow, F. W. Fletcher had his splendid strain of freesia and the T. J. Grey Co. had a fine dish of mushrooms from its special spawn.

Various Notes.

P. J. Van Baarda, the popular representative of Joseph Breck & Sons Co., is convalescing nicely from an operation for appendicitis performed at the Boston Homeopathic hospital.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, is sending in as fine Freesia Purity as I have seen this season. His myosotis also is excellent. Among carnations he is growing Pink Delight, White Wonder, White Enchantress, Rosette, Beacon and Benora and all are of fine quality.

We are all proud of the wonderful showing made at Buffalo by our New England exhibitors. The competitive classes gave them twenty-six firsts and twenty-five seconds, all other exhibitors being allowed only six firsts and seven seconds. In addition several medals and certificates came this way, the total awards surpassing the most sanguine expectations of the exhibitors.

Galvin's splendid new store on Park street is nearly completed. The tile floors are laid and ice chests completed. The painters are nearly through and the new store will be occupied February 6, the formal opening coming a few days later.

Mr. and Mrs. William Penn are spending their winter vacation at Atlantic City, N. J. H. S. Rogers is officiating as buyer during Mr. Penn's absence.

John W. Foote is well pleased with Carnation Yellow Prince, which is doing exceptionally well with him. Beacon and White Wonder are his other favorites, and all are well grown.

The Fruit Hill Greenhouses, of Providence, are sending to W. H. Carr daily shipments of Buddleia Asiatica, which has made quite a hit here this season.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold its annual carnation and novelty night February 16. This always draws out a big attendance. There will be short addresses on business phases of carnation culture by several specialists.

Charles C. Ball, of Wakefield, since severe weather has set in and the ground became tightly frozen, reports the loss of several thousand dollars' worth of plants and flowers, due to a leak of illuminating gas from one of the city mains. He will take action to recover damages.

The J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Auburn, R. I., is getting some magnificent Beauties on 6-foot stems.

W. J. Kennedy has been elected president of the Massachusetts State Employees' Benefit Association, which comprises 1,000 members. He will look after all legislation at the state house, for which and other duties appertaining to his office he is well fitted.

Edward MacMulkin has opened a new store at 381 Boylston street.

A. E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, is handling some nice yellow and Mrs. Sander marguerites. His Pink Delight and white seedling carnations are good.

William Miller, of West Lynn, who retired from the florists' business some years ago, is one of the most active men of his age in New England. He is a member of the Appalachian Mountain Club and takes walks and makes climbs which would terrify younger men. He is in his seventy-fourth year, but would pass for twenty years younger.

The death of Charles W. Parker, of Marblehead, January 23 in his eighty-fourth year, removed one of our grand old men of horticulture. He had been a prominent member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for twenty-five years and served as president for two years. The society is fortunate in securing a splendid portrait of him for its gallery of presidents.

Albert Batley & Son, of Maynard, in addition to carnations, are sending a splendid lot of callas to market.

Harry Quint has opened his fine new store at the Hotel Brunswick and is well pleased with business.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. has an attractive display of bulbous flowers in pans in its windows. Business in seeds is well ahead of a year ago.

In a preliminary announcement the local S. A. F. reception committee reports a surplus of $800 and is wondering what to do with it. Better put it in the bank at interest and use it for suitable entertainment when the next S. A. F. national show comes here.

The T. J. Grey Co. reports seed business as starting up nicely. There has been a strong call for cold storage valley and mushroom spawn.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, has had many visitors the last ten days, to see his splendid display of freesias, of which he has a special and carefully selected strain, larger and purer than Purity and the finest commercial freesia I have seen. He has over 100,000 bulbs planted out. A large portion are now blooming and are worth a long journey to see. This also is the home of Nelrose antirrhinum, which is seen in fine condition; also, Phelps' White, a fine pure variety.

Many additional special prizes are being secured for the coming exhibition of the American Rose Society opening March 18. I hope the local growers will rise to the occasion and take some of the enthusiasm of their carnation brethren. W. N. C.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market handled a big trade last week. A shortage of stock caused a scramble among the retailers and the market was cleaned up often. The cold weather slackened up transient trade. There was a considerable business done in funeral work, but outside of this there was nothing rushing at the retail stores. All the local growers seem to be off crop in roses and carnations, as the supply on some days does not equal the demand. January 28 some of the consignments came in frozen. Sweet peas and violets are abundant and bring fair prices. Orchid-flowering sweet peas have the call. Violets, too, meet with a fair demand. Roses are extremely scarce; the demand greatly exceeds the supply. Carnations are not quite so scarce as the roses, but were cleaned out frequently. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily. Paper Whites, freesias, jonquils, valley, Von Sions and lilies are meeting with a good demand. Greens are plentiful and in demand.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's dance, which took place in Westminster hall, January 27, was not the big success that was expected, as the extremely cold weather kept many from attending. About fifty couples braved the weather and all had a splendid time.

Joseph Wideck, the well known west end retailer, reports that the stork paid him a visit recently and left a fine baby girl, who was received with great joy.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, were visitors last week. Mr. Reukauf displayed a fine lot of samples at the Hotel Jefferson.

Joseph Haemmerl, the Marcus avenue florist, is supplying the local trade with fine blooming plants. His cyclamens and primulas are of specially fine quality.

C. Young & Sons Co. furnished the decorations for the annual ball of the Imperial Club, January 29. This is one of the social events of the year. Several thousand carnations were used in the decorations. Beauties, also, were used in profusion.

Vincent and Frank Gorly have been doing the buying in the wholesale district of late. On some days Marion Uhlschmidt, manager of the east side branch, is also needed. The reason for this, Vincent says, is that three of a kind are hard to beat.

The midwinter school graduation exercises, which took place last week, caused a good demand for flowers. Some of the west end and downtown retailers report a busy day for this occasion.

The Metropolitan Floral Co., according to Alex. Geranios, head of the company, has outgrown its present quarters. They are planning to enlarge their present quarters in the coming summer by taking part of a neighbor's store.

William Bouche, landscape gardener at 6621 Kingsbury boulevard, says he has a busy season before him, as advance orders will keep him busy until late in spring.

The Robert Thomson Co., the local firm of greenhouse builders, has contracted for a number of new houses and the rebuilding of old houses among the county florists. Work on these will begin early in spring.

Local wholesale florists say they will be well supplied with extra violets for St. Valentine's day, as their consignors are now in full crop. Advance orders for this day are already large.

The Pilley Packing & Flue Brush Mfg. Co., at 612 South Third street, has had a large shipping trade among the florists since advertising its flue brush and scraper in The Review.

W. C. Young, Jr., who has charge of the west end branch store of C. Young & Sons Co., will be married February 9. The name of the lucky young lady could not be learned.

J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., came here February 1 to spend a few days with the trade.

William Vogel, assistant to Oscar Kuehn, at Smith's wire shop, is back at his post. He had a long spell of sickness, but is looking none the worse for it.

Mrs. Young, wife of Charles Young, of C. Young & Sons Co., was taken to the Deaconess hospital for an operation, which was successful. Mr. Young informs us that Mrs. Young is doing finely.

The news came over the wire January 28, from J. F. Ammann, the St. Louis Florists' Club's delegate to the American Carnation Society's convention at Buffalo, that St. Louis was selected as the next meeting place of the society. Mr. Ammann was elected vice-president. This news was received with great rejoicing by the members of the Florists' Club. Mr. Ammann will tell the club at the next meeting all that occurred at the Buffalo gathering and how the next convention of the Carnation Society was secured for St. Louis.

profit, as stock is cheap. The main difficulty is in getting a sufficient quantity of roses and carnations, as these flowers are decidedly off crop. There has been quite a call for locally grown American Beauty roses, but these are dwindling in number and the quality is falling off rapidly. The best evidence of the shortage in the carnation crop is the fact that a large quantity of these are finding their way into the market before they have had an opportunity to develop fully. Snapdragon also is quite scarce. Other flowers are overplentiful. Fine sweet peas, even of the Spencer varieties, go begging at as low as $5 per thousand. No one seems to want narcissi and quantities are thrown away. There are so many violets that the street men are kept well supplied, and jonquils, lilacs, mignonette, and now tulips keep the market pretty well filled up.

Various Notes.

Robert Shoch, who covers this territory for the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, visited the stores last week.

Edward S. Schmid has been confined to his home for the last ten days, suffering from a severe case of the grip.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING

VIOLETS

BY GEORGE SALTFORD.

The cultural directions are clear and concise and every detail of successful growing is covered in this neatly printed, freely illustrated pamphlet of 48 pages.

It is said that this book, more than any other agency, has contributed to the wonderful expansion of the Hudson River violet industry the past three years.

...THE...

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

WORD from Ollioules leads to the belief that the 1916 crop of Romans will not be smaller than in recent years.

I. S. HENDRICKSON, representing John Lewis Childs, has returned to Floral Park after a swing around the circuit of larger cities as far west as Chicago, calling on large buyers of gladiolus bulbs.

OF Chicago seedsmen, S. F. Leonard and John C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., and Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., will be in New York next week, attending the canners' convention.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has directed the Southern Pacific railroad to refund $5.75 to the C. C. Morse Co., San Francisco, on account of overcharges on seeds shipped from San Francisco to Oklahoma.

ONE of a series of leaflets on culture published by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, contains "The Story and Culture of the Red Sunflower," by Wilmatte P. Cockerell, of Boulder, Colo., originator of the variety.

ONE result of the conflict in Europe will be to encourage other countries to increase their production of seeds heretofore principally obtained from Germany, with the effect, no doubt, of turning a larger part of the German crop to America.

E. L. PAGE, president of the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., has purchased the entire business established in 1852 by the Henry Philipps Seed & Implement Co., which, owing to financial difficulties, was obliged to make an assignment. A new company will be organized with a capital stock of $50,000 and the business carried on under the name of Page-Philipps Seed Co.

IN their joint report to Congress on the ocean freights situation, Secretaries McAdoo and Redfield quoted a letter from H. Frank Darrow, of New York, stating that in his exportation of grass seed he was compelled this year to pay $1.50 per hundred pounds, while in former years he paid from 35 to 50 cents per hundred pounds, on the French line, sailing from New York to Havre.

GLADIOLUS bulb market—there is none, according to some of the large producers, and it is about the same way with canna roots. Of course there is some small business going on, but the buyers of quantities to sell again are holding off. Low prices do not tempt them; quite the contrary, it is the cutting of prices that scares them off, fearing the lack of stability will result in loss of profit.

It seems likely the reports of damage to valley pips en route via Rotterdam are exaggerated; if the losses were as large as some of the tales one hears they would be serious.

Ralph M. Ward, New York, was in Chicago last week, headed for the Pacific coast. He says lily bulbs are selling better than ever, present prices encouraging the trade to take hold.

For the man who knows what he wants, illustrations and descriptions are not necessary, while price lists are meaningless to the planter who does not know the game. So the catalogue writer tries to play both ends.

True, the average seed stock and catalogue contain twice as many varieties as are desirable, but with others offering them what is a seed seller to do? Can the list be cut down without a combination in restraint of trade?

The German seed growers are making shipments almost as large as though nothing had happened. Neither Erfurt nor Quedlinburg is anywhere near the war zone and the German system of saving everything of value has led to careful husbanding of all seed crops. There are delays in transportation by both routes.

RECEIPTS OF VALLEY PIPS.

The steamer Ryndam, from Rotterdam, which arrived at New York January 27, brought a consignment of 142 cases of valley pips for McHutchison & Co. On the following day the Sommelsdyk, from the same port, brought 684 cases for C. F. Meyer, Inc., and the Oscar II, from Christiansand, 599 cases for Maltus & Ware, making a total of 1,425 cases. Added to the 7,566 cases previously received, this makes the total to date 8,991 cases.

WHY PEAS ARE PLENTY.

Months ago it was reported in this column that canners were not buying peas; that the seedsmen who cater to this special demand were having trouble finding buyers for spot peas and a great deal of difficulty in arousing interest in futures. Of course the situation was the direct result of the practically full deliveries made on 1914 growing contracts, although there was some talk of canners' discouragement due to having a large part of the season's pack still on hand. It has developed that the pea pack in 1914 was smaller than in 1913 and that there is an actual scarcity of the finest grades, the surplus being the grades that always constitute too large a part of the pack. It can not be, therefore, that the canners are preparing to cut down their output to any appreciable extent in 1915. We must look elsewhere for the reason for their lack of interest in peas for seed. The fact seems to be that for several successive years the canners received less than full deliveries on their contracts. During these years they acquired the habit of overcontracting; if 1,000 bushels were needed contracts were made for 1,500 or even 2,000 bushels. In 1914 there was

We are the largest handlers of Cannas in the world. Our prices on Cannas will bear comparison with any house in the Canna business.

Our Cannas are true to name—two and three and sometimes four eyes—are sound, dormant, and are packed 250 in a box. Two can be "cleated" together and shipped as one. One box of 250 sold at thousand rate; it is cheaper for you to buy a box of 250 than 200 at 100 rate. Write for special prices on quantities.

If any Cannas are not found here, it may be understood that they are superseded by the foregoing. If selection is left to us we will substitute or send only the best for all purposes.

the first good crop in several years and practically full deliveries were made. The result was that nearly all canners received more peas than they need for 1915; some half again as many; some enough also for 1916. And therein lies the discouragement for the seedsmen; there surely will come a change some day, but it probably will take either a short crop or some little time for the business in canners' peas to get back on its previous basis.

MORE HOLLAND BULBS.

On the steamer Ryndam, from Rotterdam, which reached New York January 27, were several consignments of Dutch bulbs, all of but few cases, and on the following day the Sommelsdyk, from the same port, brought another small consignment. At a date when, in previous years, all shipments of Holland bulbs were at an end, they are this season dribbling along and, though but a few each week, are making a total far above all previous seasons. The consignments on the above steamers were as follows:

SWEET PEA SOCIETY DAY.

Lester L. Morse, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, has been advised by James A. Barr, director of congresses at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, that June 4, 1915, the date of the society's Pacific coast exhibition, at the exposition grounds, has been officially designated as American Sweet Pea Society day by the department of special events of the exposition.

THE FIGHT AGAINST FREE SEEDS.

Representative Young, of North Dakota, led the annual futile attack on the congressional free seed distribution appropriation in the agricultural appropriation bill. During the general debate on the bill Mr. Young made a speech advocating the abolition of the distribution on the ground that it was useless, as the farmers could buy the same kind of seeds at the country store. He advocated instead the distribution of new and rare valuable seeds. Mr. Young pointed out that it cost $252,000 yearly to send out the free seeds. He referred to reports of recent secretaries of agriculture for a number of years recommending its discontinuance, but noted that he did not find the recommendation in the report of the secretary this year. "That may be," said Young, "that he has ceased to have any hope or faith that Congress will ever discontinue the distribution of garden and flower seeds."

"Do I understand you to say that this money is thrown away?" asked Rep. La Follette, of Washington. "Does not the gentleman think it brings the government a little closer to thousands of people who otherwise would not realize that the government is doing anything for them? Thousands of school children are furnished seeds by members of Congress for planting in their trial gardens. The requests of different kinds sent to members of Congress for seeds show that the money is not entirely thrown away or wasted. It is an education to some people."

Mr. Young said it was not fair to say that the flower and garden seeds which are sent out are without value to those who receive them, but the point he made was that each one who receives a package of seeds gets only what he could buy for a quarter at the nearest town or village. The money would be more wisely spent if the distribution was confined to new and rare seeds.

"Does the man receiving the seed think they come from the government or from the congressman whose name is on the package?'' asked Representative Platt, of New York. Mr. Young said the receipt of a small package of seeds does not excite a man much. Seeds would not inspire a greater devotion to his country. On the contrary, the thoughtful citizen is apt to consider it an unnecessary and unwise expenditure.

Representative La Follette asked if the distribution by congressmen was not politically a liability instead of an asset? Young said it was a liability. Mr. Young said an increasing number of men in his district were considering the distribution either a waste of money or a senseless proceeding viewed from the standpoint of its being a substantial aid to agriculture. He said he would vote against the item in the bill carrying any appropriation for the free seed distribution but would vote for the distribution of new and rare seeds. ''It is time to lay hands on this venerable impostor, this miserable farce and costly humbug,'' said Mr. Young in closing.

Representative Page, of North Carolina, moved to strike out the appropriation, but the motion was lost, 29 to 66.

BIGGEST SPINACH PLANTER.

The first shipment of the season of spinach from the farm of the Walker Properties Association, of Austin, Tex., was started north early in January and the event was fittingly celebrated with a banquet. The shipment consisted of a full carload and was valued at $1,200. This car was the first of fully 200 which it is expected will be sent during the season, as compared with 107 carloads last season. Within a week two and three carloads will go out in a shipment. The Walker spinach farm is the largest of its kind in the country and its product finds a ready market in northern cities. The present price is from $4 to $7 a barrel. For the coming year over 5,000,000 cans of spinach have already been contracted for from the Walker packing plant.

INCREASE

Your profits by growing good things; things that give greater returns from the same space; things that mean profit and not loss. My original Silver Pink seedling snaps are among the good things, if not the greatest of the busy producers. We have figures of tests showing from three to five blossoms to one of any snapdragon. Now, they are just as easy to grow as other kinds, and cost less.

WHY NOT

Clear out some poor-paying space and send your order today? To quickly move a block of fine plants we will add free 10 plants to each hundred, 100 to each thousand. Our price is only $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000 for choice seedling stock. Don't use cuttings of this variety.

We also offer plants of yellow, $5.00 per 100; Garnet, $8.00; Nelrose, $6.00.

You will also want a big lot of seedling Silver Pink ready for spring sales. They are fine for bedding or garden, being medium tall, and a veritable flower bush all summer. You can have a big stock at small cost. Liberal trade pkt., $1.00; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash. Send for complete list of snapdragons, our specialty.

Sample of what we daily get: "Enclosed find check for 3 pkts. S. P. Snaps. We bought one pkt. last year, and it was the best dollar investment we ever made."—Jagger & Halsey, West Hampton, N. Y.

THE PRINCIPLE OF ADVANCEMENT.

Organize your business so that it will be filled with the principle of advancement; and so arrange the scale of payment for your employees that each man may advance a little regularly if he wishes to do so. Sell a good quality of flowers to people who will derive a benefit from them. Charge not more than a reasonable price and do not beat anyone in business. People buy flowers because they expect to get more value from them than the cash spent for them, and it is your duty to give them this value in every transaction. The florist business today is in a state of infancy—it is a stepladder sufficient to reach the low level on which the business is now conducted. The time will come, however, when exorbitant prices will be unheard of, and when the profit will be on the volume instead of soaking it onto the few. American florists will wake up some day to the grand opportunity before them—called "Advertising;" and then, and not until then, can you hoist the long ladder by which you can climb to the roof of prosperity. Meanwhile and forever Easter Lilies will be demanded in larger quantities. Good Easter Lilies are very profitable to the florist, and a good thing to always have on hand. Horseshoe Brand Cold Storage Giganteums are the cause of the best Easter Lilies grown—don't you want to plant a case now?

farm seeds and some special varieties of fruit are most prominent.

Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.—"The Dingee Guide to Rose Culture," prepared in this firm's usual high-class style and comprising a 69-page rose list, followed by seventeen pages or more of plants, bulbs, shrubs, vines and seeds. The illustrations are excellent and some of them are beautifully colored. The index of roses is a valuable feature. A page is devoted to a presentation of the advantages of own-root roses for garden use.

C. B. Gates, Mentor, O.—A special wholesale list of gladioli, offering a selected assortment of eighteen varieties, with prices by the hundred and thousand.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.—"The Glory of the Garden," a 16-page gladiolus catalogue, especially well printed and illustrated. The introductory pages contain an article on "How to Grow and Care for the Gladiolus." Among the illustrations are colored pictures of such varieties as Peace, Faust, War, Dawn and miscellaneous sorts. The alphabetical list is followed by more than a dozen groups or collections of "what is most typical and best of the various classes of gladioli."

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.—Two catalogues, wholesale and general, both accurately compiled, well printed on good paper and bound in plain but tasteful covers. The stock listed consists of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, orchids, ferns, palms and other ornamentals, greenhouse and bedding plants, perennials, vines, shrubs, evergreens and sundries. The general catalogue contains seventy-six pages, with clear descriptions and an abundance of good illustrations; the wholesale list is condensed to thirty-six pages.

W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, Ill.—General catalogue of seeds, bulbs, roots, plants, trees, shrubs, lawn and garden requisites. By means of the small but clear type and the careful adjustment of text and illustrations, a surprising amount of matter is packed into this 96-page book without giving it an unduly crowded appearance. The nursery department comprises fruits as well as ornamental stock.

Meyer-Stisser Co., Baltimore, Md.—Fifth annual edition of "Garden Book," containing lists of seeds, bulbs, flower and vegetable plants, fruit trees and other nursery stock, fertilizers, tools and sundries; sixty-four pages and colored cover. Among the valuable features of the book are the planting calendar and the spraying table.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely, Scranton, Pa.—"Seeds for Farm and Garden," a neat, accurate, illustrated trade catalogue of vegetable, farm and flower seeds, insecticides, fertilizers, implements and other requisites; thirty-two pages and cover. Among the specialties are mixtures of lawn grass seed in bulk.

Willamette Dahlia & Floral Co., Portland, Ore.—A 32-page catalogue of dahlias, cannas, gladioli, phloxes, begonias, bedding plants and perennials; includes two new dahlias of the firm's own origination.

Ross Bros.' Seed House, Wichita, Kan.—A 112-page, illustrated catalogue of "Acorn Brand" seeds, with lists, also, of bulbs, flower and vegetable plants, garden implements, raffia and reeds, poultry supplies, spraying chemicals, etc. Contains a planting calendar for the latitude of Wichita.

Mount Holly, N. J.—John E. Elbertson has purchased a building lot on Broad street.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Loomis, Cal.—Mrs. Eleanor B. Roddan has leased her business, conducted under the name of the Loomis Carnation Co., to B. S. Bassett, proprietor of Bassett's Floral Gardens.

Olympia, Wash.—H. Ernest Rees has given up his lease on the greenhouses of Mrs. Jane M. Billings, which he held for two years, and has opened a store at 107 Fifth street, to be known as Rees' Flower Shop.

Glendale, Cal.—C. H. Woolsey, of 1629 Riverdale drive, has opened a flower store in the new theater building on Grand boulevard. He was formerly in the greenhouse business in Rockford, Ill., but since coming here a few years ago has confined himself to growing nursery stock on his Riverdale drive property.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is little new to chronicle this week. Heavy rains in the last few days have put an end to most of the outdoor flowers and good stock is at a premium. Roses are scarce and the prices are better. Orchids are plentiful; so are violets and valley, and the scarcity of roses is helping out the plant trade a little. The azaleas that missed the Christmas market, principally because the varieties were not suitable for forcing, of course did poorly and have been a drug, but those allowed to come on more slowly and naturally are now coming in and selling fairly well. Greens are plentiful and cheap.

Various Notes.

Verhelle Bros., of the Kentia Nurseries, Santa Barbara, have purchased the large salesyard at 1420 State street, which gives them, in addition to their own place, one of the finest salesyards in southern California and a splendid position, close to the Arlington hotel and the park.

R. W. Fulton, of Henry & Lee, has been calling on the trade in Los Angeles. Mr. Fulton has not been in the best of health of late and has been recuperating at sunny San Diego, but he looks well now and says he is prepared for a strenuous season's business. He is leaving for northern and eastern points.

Our old friend, George W. Smith, of Smith & Dieterich, has a quiet humor all his own, as one of the popular eastern knights of the grip now knows. "Can I see you this afternoon?" says the latter. "Why—I'll be out this afternoon; call tomorrow morn—no, call this afternoon."

C. H. Woolsey, formerly of Rockford, Ill., says he is perfectly satisfied with his new venture at Glendale, where he opened some time ago. Glendale is one of the most attractive of the foothill towns around Los Angeles and Mr. Woolsey is on Broadway, the principal street. With his former experience back of him and the additional energy that must accrue to him while living in that delightful section, success is a foregone conclusion.

Thanking you for the excellent results we have had to date from our ad. in The Review.—
HOLLYWOOD GARDENS,
Per V. A.
Jan. 12, 1915. Hollywood, Wash.

H. W. Turner has had a large force of propagators and potters working on his young stock for a long time, but in some of the most popular lines it still seems impossible to keep up with orders. Prima Donna is one of the roses on the shortage list, as the demand for it is not local only but all over the United States. When we consider that September Morn has all the good points of its parent, Prima Donna, in addition to its superb coloring, then we wonder what will happen in about two years from now, when growers generally wake up to this jewel. Local wise men are buying the flowers in order to propagate it from the fine, long, tempting stems, but the price of the flowers and their popularity with buyers make this rather a risky investment.

The L. A. Floral Co. is one of the busy concerns of the town just now, one of Fred Sperry's principal troubles being to make a big demand and a short supply of the Welsh carnation harmonize.

Miss Hurtt, of San Bernardino, is on the visitors' list this week.

Three orchids, a bunch of violets and other flowers, besides the usual accompaniment of greens and fancy box, for $2, is surely giving the customer good value and this is what one of our up-to-date retailers is doing. It shows good buying facilities and sound business acumen, but it surely does knock the tar out of the impractical scribes who get in print anent the high prices of orchids in the Angel City.

The Tassano store is a busy place these days, with the three brothers all taking a hand. There is some talk of an increase in the glass and lath house area in Glendale.

The El Reah Greenhouses, at Hollywood, have to come down, as the site has been purchased for the erection of a school. There are several fine specimens of rare plants here and it is to be hoped that they will be moved to congenial quarters before the land comes into the hands of the Philistines. The street to the west of it, though now covered with houses, is named Cherimoyo avenue, this being the site of probably the first orchard of custard apples ever planted in southern California. The original idea when this place was started was to grow pineapples for market. H. R. Richards.

OAKLAND, CAL.

The Market.

Business remains rather quiet. There seems to be, however, no great surplus of flowers. Funeral work is the mainstay. Counter trade has held up fairly well. Roses of better quality and of larger variety are in. These have been the favorite flowers of the season. Carnations are producing in greater quantity as the days get longer. So far there has been no loss of stock. Daffodils, narcissi and freesias are in heavy crop, with a gradual decline in price. The standard varieties of tulips and hyacinths in pans have proved the best sellers of the season. Violets are almost a glut on the market.

Various Notes.

H. Plath is sending a fine lot of hyacinths and tulips in pans to this market.

The Florists' Club of San Francisco has arranged with the Golden Gate park commissioners for space to be used as the Convention garden for the August gathering of the S. A. F.

Arthur Cann, of San Jose, was a candidate of the divorce court last week.

The Thorsted Floral Co. held an orchid show at its store this week. The entire interior was a forest scene, several trees being erected to show the orchids in their natural state. About 500 cattleyas were used, in addition to the many choice plants of phalænopsis, cypripedium, oncidium, lælia, odontoglossum and lycaste. Cibotiums, aspleniums and polypodiums were used profusely to give the general tropical effect. It was generally admitted to be the best individual show ever attempted on the Pacific coast. E. R. C.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Continuous cold has prevailed for over ten days, with the wind coming from the east and northeast and with temperatures below freezing all of the time except in the middle of some of the sunniest days. The result is that carnations are scarce just at a time when they are needed for social affairs. The effect of the weather is less noticeable on roses, which are coming in more abundantly and are of first-class quality. The local-grown supply is not sufficient and the deficiency is being made up with California stock. Cut and potted tulips are in great demand; Vermilion Brilliant, alba maxima, Proserpine and Mon Tresor are among the best sellers. The supply of Paper Whites and Romans has increased, but is still short of the demand. Potted and cut Golden Spur daffodils are appearing in limited quantities and are in great demand. Genistas and azaleas are among the best selling blooming plants. Freesias, both potted and cut, sell well.

There is a noticeable increase in social activities and the demand for all sorts of cut stock is really more than equal to the supply. The sale of potted stock is increased by this shortage and there is complaint among the retailers

SUPERIOR-GROWN ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys—an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color, is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season. We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

who have no glass that they are unable to buy high-grade potted plants, as the wholesale growers were cleaned out by the holiday demand and did not prepare for a continuous supply of the better grades. There is a great abundance, perhaps too great, of small, low-priced potted stock. The season for cyclamens is past its prime, though some splendid plants are still shown. The demand for cinerarias is not brisk, though some attractive specimens are to be seen everywhere. Decorative and foliage plants have a fair sale.

Various Notes.

Walch Bros., pioneer growers, have retired from active business and have leased their range of glass near Fulton to Frank Koch, who will grow a variety of stock for his father's store at Second and Alder streets.

Clarke Bros. have had the earliest supply of Golden Spur daffodils. They were grown from bulbs which came from the Isle of Guernsey and are somewhat earlier than the Holland variety.

The Martin & Forbes Co. is showing some local-grown Czar violets, which find a ready sale on account of their fragrance and good keeping qualities.

Otto Lemke is building an addition, covering about 600 square feet, to his range at Lents. The addition will be used as a propagating house. He grows carnations and greens principally, with enough pot plants and other stock to fill local retail orders. He wholesales his main cut, which is considered of excellent quality.

The first Dutch hyacinths have appeared. They were forced by William Hoffman.

Rahn & Herbert Co. is cutting some good Killarney and White Killarney roses.

August Zitzewitz has reset the most of the piping and put in raised benches in the W. T. Wood range of glass at Lents. He is growing mostly carnations and greens, with a few odd benches of other stock, such as snapdragons, Adiantum Croweanum, mignonette, double alyssum and a little bedding stock. His mignonette is from seed grown by the Martin & Forbes Co., of a variety improved from the original John May stock. Mr. Zitzewitz is a successful grower and, although he is somewhat handicapped by lack of boiler capacity, his benches look well. S. W. W.

Today everything we have to buy pertaining to our business has increased in value; wages have practically doubled, and coal has risen in about the same proportion. The only solution to the problem is to do a larger volume of business. But why give all your profits away? Ours is a legitimate business, and we should have value received. If we florists would get right down to figures and find out what it costs to do business, what returns we should receive per square foot of glass on our investment and what our returns actually are, we should know whether our business is bringing the returns we are entitled to, or whether the same money would do better for us out at interest. either make a success of the business or be able to quit before he goes broke.

Every article has a value; we will agree to that. The question is how to get it. It costs so much to grow a plant or a flower. You have to grow so many plants in a given space or cut so many flowers off plants grown in a certain space, to get the proper returns from it. It takes so much coal to heat that space, so much labor to care for it; there is so much money invested in it. If we would get our business on a standard basis, so that we could tell by glancing at our books whether we had made a dollar or lost one, we would all be better off. The florist who figures out all these details is the most successful one today.

Taking inventory is a thing that I dare say not one out of twelve florists does. Why not? How can a florist tell where he is at if he does not? Suppose the bank should want a statement; he would say, "Well, I have so-and-so; my greenhouses and my land are so-and-so." Extremely intelligent! He ought to be able to say, "Yes, sir, I will have it here in a short time. I can get it off my books, for I have everything at my finger-tips, exactly what I have in stock." I would like to ask a few of the florists present what their returns were for the last year per square foot of glass, but I am not going to, for I am afraid they would hesitate to tell me. Or should I say that they could not answer me intelligently?

Utica, N. Y.—Fire started recently in one of the greenhouses of Peter Crowe, 450 Genesee street, presumably as a result of water getting into the lime box. The blaze was discovered and checked before it had gained much headway.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE officers of the Georgia Horticultural Society elected for the coming year are: President, Robert C. Berckmans, of Augusta; vice-president, B. W. Hunt, of Eatonton; secretary, T. H. McHatton, of Athens.

THE death of F. B. Stowe, well known to the trade through his connection with the Maywood Nursery Co., Maywood, Ill., and the Phoenix Nursery, at Delavan, Wis., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

NEW ENGLAND ASSOCIATION.

Officers Elected.

At the fourth annual convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association, held at the Narragansett hotel, Providence, R. I., January 26 and 27, the following officers were elected:

President, Charles H. Greaton, of Providence.

Vice-president, George C. Thurlow, of West Newbury, Mass.

Secretary, Daniel A. Clark, of Fiskeville, R. I.

Treasurer, V. A. Vanicek, of Newport, R. I.

Executive committee, C. R. Fisk, of Worcester, Mass.; A. P. Horne, of Manchester, N. H., and John R. Barnes, of Yalesville, Conn.

Springfield, Mass., was selected as the meeting place for next year's convention.

Live Sessions.

There were some excellent papers presented, which created discussion of still greater interest and value. Harlan P. Kelsey, of Salem, Mass., assailed the practice of burning surplus nursery stock, upheld by W. W. McCartney, treasurer of the Elm City Nursery Co., Woodmont, Conn., in his address on "Effects of the European War on Nursery Business."

"That is the worst economic blunder that has ever been made in the world," said Mr. Kelsey. "In every other line of wholesale and retail business there are sales of surplus stock at cheap rates. There are too many people in the soup line to burn anything that is produced. Create a market for the stock. You can sell shrubbery stock to poor people at low prices, people to whom you would not sell otherwise, and, consequently, you do not curtail your market."

Considerable diversity of opinion was expressed on the subject. Mr. McCartney maintained that nursery stock was more permanent than most other stocks, and the market was thus less elastic than for many lines of goods. Others expressed the opinion that a love for plants ought to be created and intensified and that when this is done the surplus stock would be taken care of.

A. E. Robinson, of Lexington, Mass., seconded Mr. Kelsey, saying that not enough ornamental shrubbery was being produced to burn it up, and that a love for shrubbery could be created in this country, a love which already exists in Europe.

Please cut out of my ad for Privet the 18 to 24-inch, as I am all sold out of that size. The Review certainly does bring the answers.
CHARLES L. SMITH,
Oct. 13, 1914. Pennsgrove, N. J.

In his address on "Standardization in Sizes of Nursery Stock," E. W. Breed, of Clinton, Mass., advocated unified methods of description in all catalogues. As a result of this address a committee will be appointed by the incoming president to consider the paper and report at the next meeting, and to confer with a similar committee from the American Association of Nurserymen.

On the evening of January 26 the annual dinner was held. Afterwards the members were entertained at a theater party at Keith's, in charge of the executive committee.

The Program.

The program of papers and addresses, as presented, was as follows:

PROPOSE QUARANTINE ON PINES.

Because of the danger to American nursery stock, a public hearing was held February 2 at the Department of Agriculture at Washington to discuss a proposed quarantine on the importation of all pines from Europe. During the last year imported pines have been found to be infested with the European pine-shoot moth. In Europe this is one of the principal insect enemies of pines and is especially destructive in nurseries, young forests and ornamental plantations. It kills or injures the young twig growth and deforms the tree to a serious extent.

In this country the insect seems to be still confined to the European pines in Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia. Strenuous efforts are already being made to stamp it out, and it is believed that these will be successful if no further importations of infested stock are permitted.

The white pine blister rust has already resulted in the exclusion of all 5-leaved pines from Europe and Asia. The proposed quarantine will extend this prohibition to all classes of pines from Europe. No restriction is proposed on the importation of pine seed.

REMEDIES FOR DAMPING OFF.

Soil Disinfection Recommended.

Commercial sulphuric acid has been found by the United States Department of Agriculture to be an effective remedy for the loss of pine and spruce seedlings from damping off. It is quite common for the soft tissues of these young seedlings to decay so rapidly soon after sprouting that they sometimes disappear before the nurseryman knows that there is anything the matter with them. So common, indeed, is loss from this source that many nurserymen import their seedling stock from Europe. This, however, is not only troublesome, but dangerous. The white pine blister rust has already been introduced into this country in this way, and continued importations of seedlings are certain to result in the establishment in the United States of other foreign pests.

For this reason the department attaches much importance to the recent investigations of possible disinfecting agents which will rid the soil of the parasitic fungi which cause damping off. Of these agents the most satisfactory for commercial use in the majority of cases has been found to be sulphuric acid. Treatment with this acid not only reduces losses from damping off but increases germination.

The number of seedlings in treated beds may be from one and one-quarter to ten or even twenty times as great as in untreated beds, depending on how serious the disease is in the untreated beds. At most nurseries, moreover, the treatment also decreases the number of weeds and causes the pines to make a better growth during their first season. At one nursery, jack-pine seedlings have grown three times as

MRS. C. W. WARD

AS A BREAD-AND-BUTTER VARIETY

What Mr. Fritz Bahr, the famous writer of "The Week's Work," in the Florists' Exchange of January 9, 1915, says about this variety:

"With a good many of the retail growers, throughout the middle west in particular, the great merits of Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward have just been recognized and appreciated. It is one of the best of its color that we have today. Every retail grower should provide room for at least a few, and fairly well grown stock will sell at a higher price than any other of the standard sorts on a glutted market."

We have 40,000 cuttings of this variety ready - - - - - $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000

For other varieties see Classified list in this paper. All stock guaranteed.

J. D. THOMPSON CARNATION CO. - - - JOLIET, ILLINOIS

high in acid-treated beds as in untreated beds.

The treatment is not expensive, for commercial sulphuric acid can be purchased in quantity at low rates. At one nursery where careful accounts were kept it was found that the entire cost of the treatment, including labor, materials and extra waterings, was less than $5 per thousand square feet of bed. On the other hand, the saving in the cost of weeding alone, which the treatment made possible, amounted to $5.30 per thousand square feet.

Application of Acid.

The sulphuric acid is dissolved in water and applied to the beds with a paraffin-coated sprinkler just after the seed is sown and covered. From one-eighth to three-eighths of a fluid ounce of acid should be used per square foot of bed, dissolved in enough water to make one and one-half or two pints of solution. At some nurseries it is also necessary to water the beds once or twice daily during the germination period to prevent chemical injury to the seedlings. Individual conditions, however, must determine for each nursery whether or not this frequent watering is necessary and exactly how much acid should be used per square foot of bed.

Sulphuric acid is now in regular use on the seed beds at nurseries in four western states, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico. Considerable quantities of carbonates, however, are contained in some soils in these states, their presence being indicated by vigorous effervescence or bubbling when a strong solution of acid is applied. Where this is the case sulphuric acid is not likely to be effective. In one nursery in Kansas zinc chloride and copper sulphate have been found satisfactory substitutes when used in the same way as sulphuric acid. For zinc chloride one-half ounce avoirdupois is used per square foot; and for copper sulphate three-eighths of an ounce or less. The chloride is less apt to injure seedlings, but is more expensive than the copper sulphate. Despite its greater cost, however, it is possible that the zinc chloride may be preferred both to sulphuric acid and to copper sulphate even on soils which do not contain carbonate.

In some northern nurseries where soil disinfection has not been resorted to, fall sowing has been found to control damping off fairly well. At all nurseries where the soil remains frozen during the winter, it is worth while to test sowing just before the soil freezes. Excessive moisture should be avoided in unsterilized seed beds.

Nurserymen who wish to test these remedies should write to the U. S. Department of Agriculture for specific advice adapted to their particular localities.

MATCHLESS was certainly a winner at the show. The claim of the originator is being proved over and over again. It was "matchless" at the show and it will be "matchless" with the grower.

MRS. WARD was shown in abundance and there was hardly a poor vase of it to be seen. This variety certainly improves with age.

PHILADELPHIA—While beaten by Mrs. Ward on the show table, we think it was a pretty close rival and with the grower it is superior to Ward in many ways.

ENCHANTRESS was there with about all her family. She is still looking well; and all her offspring, excepting Rose, appeared in very good condition. She thinks that even if she has to take back seat on the exhibition table, she is still "dear to the hearts" of many a grower and finds much satisfaction in that.

WHITE WONDER was shown in excellent shape and many growers will have nothing else, but our experience with it proves it less profitable than White Enchantress.

CHAMPION looked good at the show but Beacon was hard to beat. We hope Champion will prove a better sort and easier to grow than Beacon.

PINK DELIGHT and GLORIOSA if..... they did not have such poor reputations among the growers(?) It is certainly evident that some growers can do them and do them well.

GORGEOUS and DAGMAR.....Oh my! How the people admired them. They looked as if some of the growers must have to use step-ladders to disbud them.

VERY MANY of the new varieties showed up in excellent form and we will be very much surprised if some of them are not heard from later.

YOU WILL see our adv. giving varieties and prices in the Classified Columns and if you are needing any of these varieties we are sure we can please you.

MATCHLESS IS STILL UNBEATEN

At the Buffalo Show, MATCHLESS came through in the usual manner and swept the boards. In the Sweepstakes in Class A, it defeated thirty-eight vases of all varieties. In the white, the only two vases of MATCHLESS were placed first and second. Thus it is again conclusively proved that in quality, size and fragrance, MATCHLESS tops them all.

AND BESIDES THIS

MATCHLESS will produce more than any Carnation of its color, will bloom more continuously and keep better. It is absolutely non-bursting and the easiest carnation to grow in existence.

Carnation Breeders Indianapolis, Ind.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

A slight improvement was noted in market conditions last week, helped out largely by the increased amount of funeral work, which has been well distributed. While roses are generally off crop, there are plenty of carnations, narcissi, violets, freesias and other flowers. The season of cut prices in violets has set in and department stores and others are offering bunches of twenty-five for 15 cents.

One of the features of the week was the exhibition of orchid plants in bloom in the windows of all of the larger downtown florists. They consisted mostly of cattleyas and were from the greenhouses of Edgar L. Nock, at Edgewood. They were fine plants and the display has caused quite a demand for orchid blooms.

Various Notes.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club had arranged to hold an installation of officers at the January meeting, but a complication of circumstances made it advisable to defer the ceremonies until the next meeting. Secretary William E. Chappell read a historical sketch of the association, which was organized January 20, 1896.

Alexander H. Johnson has been appointed executor of the estate of George Johnson, with bonds of $20,000.

The Flower Growers' Depot handled nearly 10,000 carnations January 30, at 36 cents per dozen.

Large numbers of carnations were disposed of January 29, to be worn in honor of William McKinley.

T. J. Johnston & Co. had the decorations for the annual ladies' night of Nestell lodge of Masons at the Masonic Temple.

The decorations for the Nicherson ball at the Churchill House last week were by O'Connor.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was a business visitor to New York last week.

George Stillman, of Westerly, is sending out his new catalogue on dahlias.

Albert Holscher, who has been confined to the house for several weeks by a couple of accidents, is about again.

John Burke, of Burke & Burns, is reported to be seeking a location on Empire street as soon as the extension has been cut through from Westminster to Weybosset street.

This Ought to Be OF INTEREST to YOU

that local growers have placed the largest individual orders for my new Carnation "ALICE," offered to the trade this season. Some have doubled and trebled their orders on successive visits.

The color is an exquisite shade of clear, soft pink, midway between Enchantress and Gloriosa. Habit of plant, ideal, strong, very early and a continuous and without doubt the most productive commercial variety I have offered to date.

Prices—Per 100, $12.00; per 1000, $100.00; per 2500, $237.50; per 5000, $450.00; per 10,000, $800.00.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

This week's story is practically a repetition of the last report. Roses and carnations are still scarce. We have had several days of cloudy weather, which has, no doubt, shortened the cut. Beauties are scarce and it was necessary to substitute in some instances. The price on double violets has come down and singles can be bought cheaply, with few buyers. Lilies moved well during the week, at good prices. Paper Whites are still a glut and freesia is selling cheaply. Prices on roses and standard varieties of carnations have gradually risen until at the present time they are up to the prices of last year, which is highly gratifying to the growers, as low prices have prevailed for so long a time some of them despaired of ever reaching the normal figure again.

Various Notes.

The first Dutch hyacinths of the season were seen in Samuel Feast & Sons' store last week.

Walter R. Siebrecht, of New York, paid a visit last week to Thomas Barker, manager of the Baltimore Cut Flower Co., which is the successor to the branch formerly operated in this city by the W. R. Siebrecht Co.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Lehr, of Brooklyn, will be sorry to learn of the death of their daughter, Elizabeth Louise, aged 7 years, January 29, of scarlet fever. The youngest child, about 2 years of age, was ill of membranous croup and its life was despaired of, so that Elizabeth was brought to Baltimore, to Mrs. Lehr's mother's residence, where she was taken ill and died suddenly. The other child is recovering, although it was necessary to insert a tube into its throat and it is not yet out of danger.

Harry J. Quick, is seriously ill at his home, Wedgecliff, with pneumonia and at the present time is in a dangerous condition.

The poultry show held by J. Bolgiano & Son at their store closed January 30 and was a success in every respect, being attended by many thousands of poultry fanciers from far and near. An admission fee of 10 cents was charged and donated to charity.

John Rider is sending some good Gorgeous carnations to the Leo Neissen Co.

It is nearly time for the election of officers for the ensuing year by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, but as yet no candidates have been heard from. The next meeting will be held February 8. W. F. E.

We Offer for Immediate Delivery
Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES
Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg
Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Trade is keeping up nicely and, while stock is scarce in some lines, there is enough of something else that can be substituted. Carnations are a little scarce and they are cleaned up early as a rule. Quite a few splits are coming in, but they are used in funeral work. Beauties have been quite scarce. Other roses are fine, considering the cloudy weather we have had lately. Narcissi are plentiful enough to go the rounds. Romans have been in good demand and, while they were in good supply, they have been cleaned up for funeral work. Dutch hyacinths are making their appearance. Tulips are to be seen, but not in any great quantity. Sweet peas are more plentiful and find a ready sale. Violets are moving nicely. Jonquils are scarce as yet, not nearly enough to go the rounds.

Potted plants are moving well and among the best sellers are the primroses, cyclamens and azaleas.

Various Notes.

Fred Bauman, who has been handling cut ferns, has leased a room on West Broad street and will handle cut flowers in addition to his other business.

Florists Organizing.

All the local florists were invited to attend a meeting at M. P. Champlin's, Wednesday, February 3, for the purpose of forming a social organization of members of the trade. This was the outcome of a social evening January 2, when G. E. Kopper, proprietor of the Rosendale Nurseries and Flower Shop, entertained M. P. Champlin, Otto Selke, Wm. E. John, Henry Eberhardt, the manager of his store; George Mathews, his grower, and Walter Eberhardt. The evening proved so enjoyable and profitable that it was proposed on the spot that a florists' club be formed. From present prospects a successful organization is hoped for.

LINCOLN, NEB.

State Society Meets.

The Nebraska State Florists' Society held its fifth annual meeting January 19 at the Lindell hotel, with a good attendance. The following officers were elected: President, Irwin Frey, Lincoln; vice-president, Lewis Henderson, Omaha; secretary, C. H. Green, Fremont; treasurer, C. H. Frey, Lincoln; directors, W. E. Davidson, Holdredge, and Harry Pence, Falls City.

The following papers were read:

"Advantages of Coöperation Between the State Florists' Society and the Society of American Florists," J. J. Hess, Omaha.

"The Flower Store," Oscar Enslow, Lincoln.

"Modest Floral Decorations for the Home," Lewis Henderson, Omaha.

"Floral Suggestions to the Out-of-town Flower Lover," Edward Williams, Grand Island.

Report from the state vice-president of the S. A. F., Irwin Frey, Lincoln.

"Floriculture Applied to Park Planting and Lawn Decoration," C. H. Green, Fremont.

"How to Beautify the Country Home at a Small Expense," Irwin Frey, Lincoln.

"The Planting and Care of Herbaceous Ornamentals," J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.

A banquet was served at the hotel after the meeting, which was one of the most enjoyable features of the gathering. Ed. Williams served as toastmaster and called for speeches from each one present. Among the visitors was J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Iowa.

C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, has a fine display of blooms, among which was his new red carnation, Nebraska, which was awarded the society's diploma.

E. C. Pruner, of Chicago, showed, among other flowers, Carnation Pink Sensation, which was also awarded a diploma.

HAVERHILL, MASS.

Hyman Yaffe, who has conducted an up-to-date flower store on Main street for over three years, reports business as highly satisfactory. Christmas and New Year's trade was well above the average.

C. H. Kaulbach, on Main street, also had an excellent trade at the holidays and has been kept busy with funeral work and other orders since.

Frank Leith had a splendid lot of Christmas azaleas. He has several thousand giganteum lilies which look even and promise to be in good shape for Easter. Mr. Leith, whose houses are located in Dustin Square, grows bedding plants heavily, handling annually nearly 25,000 geraniums.

Greenhouse Heating.

GALVANIZED HEATING PIPE.

Can you state whether there is, anywhere in the United States, a greenhouse that is heated with galvanized iron steam pipes and is getting good results from such pipes? This question is submitted by the head gardener of one of the large public institutions in Salt Lake City and he would appreciate an early reply. B. P. C.

I am not able to cite specific cases where good results are obtained from radiation composed of galvanized iron pipe, and would say that it does not afford as effective heating surface as black pipe. The surface is not only smoother, hence furnishing a smaller amount of radiation than black pipe of the same size, but the covering given in galvanizing the pipes of itself does not convey or radiate heat as rapidly as black iron pipe. I have no exact figures showing the relative radiation of the two classes of pipes, but a pipe coated with lampblack will radiate more than twice as much as tarnished lead and more than eight times as much as one of polished silver. From this it can be seen that galvanized pipe does not form efficient radiation.

BOILER CAPACITY ABOUT RIGHT.

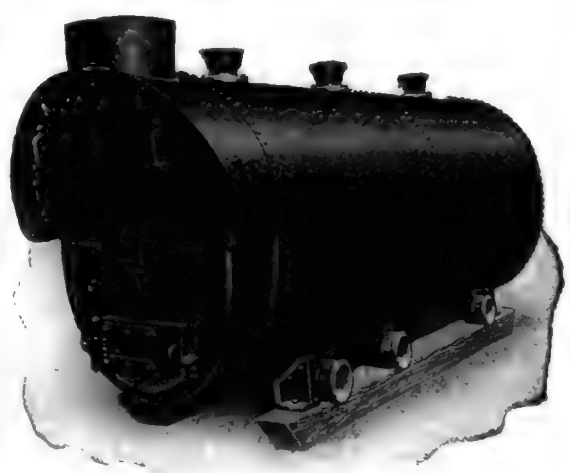
The boiler that I am using is thirty-six inches in diameter and ten feet long, with twenty-eight 3-inch tubes. The boiler is of the horizontal tubular type and the grate bars are 36x42 inches. Using ten pounds of steam, could I heat 8,000 square feet of glass to an average temperature of 62 degrees in zero weather? Would there be any surplus boiler capacity? I am returning the water to the boiler by means of a trap. I am located in east-central Ohio. I do not wish to crowd the boiler too much, as I do not think it pays to do so. T. E. F. C.

The boiler described would rate at something above twenty horsepower, and at a maximum would heat about 2,000 square feet of radiation. To heat 8,000 square feet of glass to 62 degrees in central Ohio, from 1,400 to 1,600 square feet of radiation should be used, according to the construction of the houses and the amount of exposure. While this leaves a small amount of surplus boiler capacity, which might be utilized by careful firing, the results will be more satisfactory and the heating will be more economical in every way if no extra duty is placed on the boiler.

BETTER USE 2½-INCH FLOWS.

We are putting up a greenhouse 31x80. The wall on one side consists of two feet of concrete and four feet of glass; on the other side, three feet of concrete and three feet of glass. The height to the ridge is sixteen feet. Both gables are glass. I should like to know how many lines of 2-inch pipe will be needed to heat the house with hot water to a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. I am located in northern Massachusetts.

W. G. H.



From the description of the house, it is evident that it contains about

The Value of a Thermostat
LET A FLORIST TELL IT
HERE is what a greenhouse man said in a letter to The Review: "The value of a thermostat in a greenhouse may possibly interest you, so I take the present opportunity of explaining its advantages. Three weeks ago I installed a Standard thermostat, made by the Standard Thermometer Co., putting it in my rose house, 200 feet from the residence. After sundown each day I set the low contact hand at 57 degrees and the high contact hand at 65 degrees. The black temperature hand, to record 60 degrees, plays between these figures. Should the temperature rise or fall, the alarm bell, just over my bed, rings loudly. I consider this instrument a boon to any florist with a medium-sized range, for it dispenses with the services of a night fireman. With correct firing, I can keep a steady temperature of 60 degrees at night in the rose house and also in four other houses, in all about 5000 feet of glass."—Thomas E. Towerson, Spring Station, Ky.

THE SYSTEM WITH Morehead Back to Boiler SYSTEM A PROVEN VALUE
You'll find every progressive florist has some plan or other in mind for improving his greenhouses. And one of the most important features of any greenhouse is the steam system. That's why the most progressive florists have installed the Morehead System—the system that means perfect drainage—even temperature—condensation returned to the boiler above ground—in addition to numerous other advantages. But you will want the complete information. Our engineers have enabled many a florist to increase his greenhouse efficiency where before he thought it wasn't possible. Let them help you.

4,000 square feet of glass or its equivalent. To heat it to 55 degrees when the temperature is 15 degrees below zero outside will require about 1,200 square feet of radiation.

In case 2-inch pipes are to be used for the flows as well as the returns, about twenty-one runs will be required, of which five should be flow pipes and the others should serve as returns. I would prefer, however, to put in 2½-inch pipe to serve as the flow pipes, and for three 2½-inch flow pipes I would use fifteen 2-inch returns. Run one flow pipe three or four feet below the ridge and place one on each plate.

CRUDE OIL AS FUEL.

We have been considering the proposition of using crude oil as fuel for our boilers. Can you give us any information as to the cost of oil for such a purpose, as compared with coal? Do you know of any greenhouse ranges that are successfully operated with oil as fuel. E. J. S. & S.

When crude oil can be obtained at a price per barrel not to exceed one-half the cost per ton of a good grade of run-of-mine coal, it will be found an economical fuel, since we should also take into account the saving in the cost of firing and of handling the coal and ashes. Crude oil is quite extensively used for heating and power purposes.

THREE CALIFORNIA HOUSES.

Kindly give me some information about the piping of my greenhouses. I have three connected houses, each 25 x100, six feet high to the eaves and twelve feet to the ridge. The outside temperature in this part of California seldom falls lower than 35 degrees above zero and I want to keep the temperature of the houses at 50 degrees. What size of hot water boiler would be needed? Would it be best to put the boiler in a pit? The houses are new and run east and west. D. E. P.

Each of the houses can be heated by means of six 2-inch pipes. One may be placed upon each wall plate as a flow, and connected with two returns. I would use a boiler rated at about 2,000 square feet of radiation and would place it in a pit or cellar, so that it would be below the returns. If this cannot be readily done, a generator should be attached.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading.

There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., 135,000 2-inch dirt bands.

393% MORE FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7⅝ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

"I raised tomato, cabbage, eggplant and pepper plants in the pots bought of you. They accomplished their purpose of keeping the roots of the plants separate and in their own spaces TO PERFECTION. From about 2700 tomato plants I picked 1140 MARKETABLE CRATES of tomatoes which brought me $600."
D. B. Moses, Purchase, N. Y.

"We grew about 800 tomato plants in your paper pots for our uncle in Rock Creek, Ohio. There is a canning factory there.

Our uncle says they were by far THE BEST PLANTS SET OUT IN ROCK CREEK last spring. We sent them 16 miles on a platform dray, rather than take a chance on a delay in freight, and the teamster told us he had a dozen chances to sell them on the way down.

We got the Paper Pots so our uncle need not send any pots back. The experiment was satisfactory.

We are MUCH IMPRESSED WITH THE FACT that Paper Pots give so much more root space than other pots.

We hope to use some 4-inch pots for starting 'cukes' and 'toms' for greenhouse work this spring. One firm does greenhouse work only."
Gallup Bros., Ashtabula, Ohio.

"The crop from the plants grown in your dirt bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."
J. M. Gage, Market Gardener, Willimantic, Conn.

"I used the Rochelle dirt bands for early tomatoes and cucumbers with VERY GREAT SUCCESS. I had an IMMENSE CROP of both tomatoes and cucumbers and both started picking fully 15 DAYS BEFORE THE USUAL TIME in this section."

Wm. Schruers, Gardener, Oil City, Pa.

"We grew early cabbage, tomatoes, eggplants and peppers in your Dirt Bands. Also used some for carnation cuttings.

All worked very satisfactorily and they DO NOT REQUIRE THE ATTENTION THAT SMALL POTS DO.

We certainly like Dirt Bands."

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business in general is good. There have been a number of funerals during the last week. Everybody got a share of the work. A succession of dark days has made flowers of all kinds scarce and high-priced. There has been an exceptionally good demand for roses and carnations. Tulips are more plentiful than they have been. Bulbous stock of all kinds has sold well.

Various Notes.

Joseph V. Peirce is cutting some splendid Killarney roses. His Lady Hillingdons also are doing well, considering the weather.

Richard Nofftz reports business not so brisk as it might be.

Julius Rusitzky, of the Flower Mart, has been doing an excellent business in cut flowers.

The store of William P. Peirce, on Pleasant street, is soon to be enlarged. The addition will give him another large show window. Mr. Peirce is doing a lively business, as usual.

Post & Gray furnished the palms used in the decoration of the hall for the Knights of Columbus ball, January 27.

S. E. Shaw, of Kempton street, is sending in some first-class Spencer sweet peas. He has given up the growing of vegetables almost entirely. Mr. Shaw is just completing a new 40x100 house, which he will plant to sweet peas this week. W. M. P.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, January 20. As the monthly prize was to be awarded for the best flowering plant, a good many well grown plants were exhibited. A. Weeks captured first prize with a fine specimen of Chorizema cordatum splendens. Some good primulas and cyclamens were shown by J. Elliott, T. Morris, W. M. Jamison and G. McIntosh. H. Nicholls was awarded a certificate of merit for seedling Dracæna Glenview, a cross between amabilis and terminalis. A lively discussion followed the examination of exhibits, taken part in by J. Bradley, J. Mooney, T. Morris, Wm. Scott and other members of the society. T. A. L.

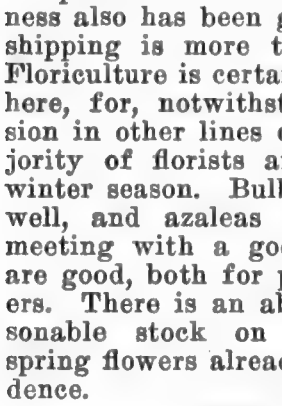
The Market.

The last week of January was characterized by cold, sunshiny days, which lent vigor to both the buying and growing ends of the business. Sunday morning, January 24, started with a run on funeral work, which continued throughout the week, combined with a demand for flowers for the sick and an abundance of decorative work for parties, receptions and dinners. Wholesale business also has been good, as out-of-town shipping is more than usually heavy. Floriculture is certainly holding its own here, for, notwithstanding the depression in other lines of business, the majority of florists are reporting a fine winter season. Bulbous stock is selling well, and azaleas and cyclamens are meeting with a good demand. Prices are good, both for plants and cut flowers. There is an abundance of all seasonable stock on the market, with spring flowers already taking the precedence.

Various Notes.



Miss Rhoda Doswell, of Geo. W. Doswell & Son, entertained, January 27, a club of young women known as the Birthday Anniversary Club, at dinner in the English tea room. The decorations, which were attractive, were carried out in a great variety of flowers fashioned into English nosegays, which were given to the guests as favors.

Among the many handsome floral offerings sent to the opening of the new Palace theater last week were baskets of Richmond roses, and tall basket vases of American Beauties and Lilium Harrisii, sent by the Auger Flower Shop, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Doswell & Son and the Flick Floral Co.

John D. Arentshorst, representing Baartman & Koning, bulb growers of Sassenheim, Holland, called on the trade last week and reported business in the United States as good. Other visitors during the week were: George Maunz, of Reed & Keller, New York, and Sidney Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Max have returned to their home in Mobile, Ala., after spending several months with Mrs. Max's father, Judge W. J. Vesey, and family. R. F.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty.

The Market.

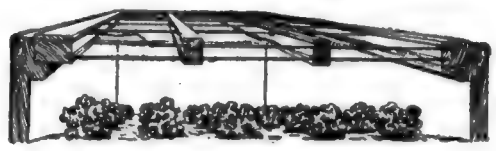
Snow every day last week, with the mercury hovering around zero, kept the florists busy in this vicinity, while the coal man was seen with a broad smile on his face. Trade is not what it might be, as there is little doing in any line except funeral work, of which all seem to have their share. Stock is not any too plentiful, except in the bulbous line. Roses are off crop. Carnations get cleaned up nicely; so do lilies, which are in good demand. Pot plants, such as primroses, cyclamens and azaleas, move well.

Various Notes.

The Heiss Co. reports that on some days business is rushing, but at other times there is little doing.

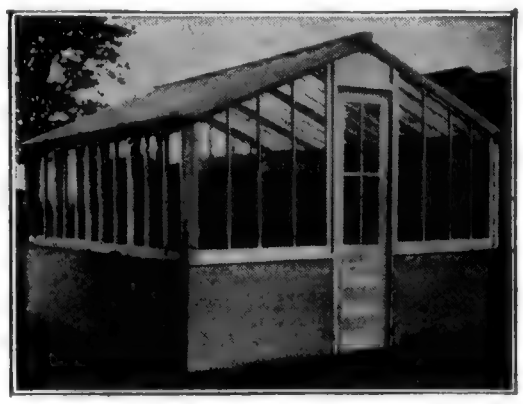
The Miami Floral Co. reports business fair. Their roses are between crops.

Geo. W. Frisch & Son, who have a stand in the market house, report business fair. They grow principally pot plants.



The grip seems to have been severe on the florists in this city. Miss Katie Young, George Bartholomew, James Ewing, of the Miami Floral Co., and others are victims, but at present they are all on the road to recovery.

Mrs. B. Hendrichs, formerly in business at 808 East Fifth street, has been confined to the house all winter.



George W. Bartholomew had the misfortune to lose his delivery horse last week. G. W. B.

The first annual floral and landscape gardening exposition of the Miami valley will be held in the Exposition building, the old First Baptist church, on Main street between First and Second streets, in this city, March 1 to 6. W. Allen Barber, the manager, states that the enterprise has the indorsement of the local associations and the commercial organization, and that some space already has been engaged. The floor plans are ready and Mr. Barber will be pleased to forward, to anyone interested, the plans and contracts for space.

Early plants make the profitable garden

You cannot possibly have vegetables ready for the early prices or flower beds to bloom right unless you use hot-beds and cold frames for starting and expediting them.

Now is the time

Sunlight Double Glass Sash make the earliest and strongest plants at the least cost of labor and money. They are complete without mats or shutters. As they are never covered the plants get all the light and warmth that the sun affords and are secure against the cold night and day.

Expert gardeners and florists, men who know from experience, look upon the Sunlight Double Glass Sash as the standard of efficiency in gardening.

TIME TO TACKLE TAX RETURNS

Failure to file an income tax return on or before Monday, March 1, is punishable by a fine of from $20 to $1,000. All florists who received an income of $3,000 or more during the year ended December 31, 1914, must fill the report, no matter what the amount of their exemptions. Have you started on yours?

WHEN, a year ago, florists faced for the first time the problem of making out an income tax report, they found they had a puzzling proposition on their hands. It was with relief, as a number of them have said, that they read a detailed explanation of the way to go about it in The Review for February 19, 1914. Those who have seen the blanks for the returns to be filed this year have found them so different from those of a year ago that they are glad of further enlightenment. So The Review, taking the same person as last year, is giving herewith a specimen tax return for the guidance of those whose prosperous condition demands that they make out a report.

Not only the persons who make out the reports, but also Uncle Sam, who receives the returns, had much to learn about this new form of tax. This fact accounts for the difference between this year's return and that of last year. Like Mr. Newpapa about his baby, Uncle Sam has had to learn by experience, but he is learning fast.

Points of Difference.

The principal point of difference in this year's report is the prominence given to friend wife. In 1914 the instructions stated that her income might be included with her husband's or she might make out a separate report. Evidently the collectors of internal revenue thought the married ladies were not taking as prominent a part in income tax paying as they should, for this year friend wife is given a separate line on every entry, although she still has the privilege of making out an individual return.

In addition, some entries are this year divided into two separate items, and on some more details are asked for. The object is to obtain greater exactness in the figures, for it is a general failing, it appears, for those who fill out returns to be overconservative when they make their estimates in round numbers.

Making the Report.

All those who received an income of $3,000 during the year 1914 are required to file a return. If there is any doubt about it, the best plan is to play safe by making the report, as the government officers are not likely to be as lenient this time as they were last year, and the various information being obtained by the authorities through more detailed corporation reports, etc., is giving them clues as to who the moneyed persons are.

Form 1040, revised, is the blank required. On page 1 are some general questions which may be filled out first, but in figuring the income, page 2 is the place to begin. The pages reproduced herewith show how A. F. Lorist did it this year, using but one blank for himself and his wife.

The $96 he received for contributing weekly news-letters to The Review and the $60 received for lecturing form the $156 entered on the first line of page 2. His wife has no income that can be classed as a salary or wage. Neither of them receives anything that can be entered under "professions and vocations." A. F. Lorist runs a retail store in a town of some size, and his total receipts for the year were, according to his books, $20,104, for business was not quite so good as in 1913. To this he adds $980 he cleared on a real estate transaction. In this transaction his wife shared, so that the sum of $530 is entered on her line.

Profits on Real Estate.

It should be noted that in reckoning profits in real estate transactions, the cost of property purchased before the incidence of the income tax, March 1, 1913, includes the price paid for the property, the expense of the purchase and also of the sale, and the carrying charges of interest, insurance and taxes actually paid before March 1, 1913. Of property purchased since that date the cost shall be the price paid for the property, the expenses of purchase and subsequent sale, and the actual price paid for betterment or improvement, if any, the carrying charges having, of course, been deducted in the tax report.

From the rooms over his store he received during the year $360 rent. As interest on notes he received $60; on mortgages, $75, and on his bank account, $23, making a total of $158. His wife's interest on her bank account is $18. On money invested in bonds he received $300. His wife received $180 in interest on bonds on which the tax was collected at source; so this sum is entered in column A, while her husband's income from bonds, which was not taxed at source, is entered in column B.

From Fiduciaries.

As stated last year, A. F. Lorist receives $72 a year as his share of the income from property, which, according to his father's will, is not to be divided until two nephews of the taxpayer, orphans before their grandfather's death, shall be of age. These nephews are not yet 21, and our taxpayer has this sum to include in this year's report. Fiduciary means, in commoner language, a trustee, executor, or the like. Of this $72, $20 is dividends on stock of a domestic corporation which pays an income tax. Therefore, this sum is entered farther down, on line 26, while the rest, $52, which comes from another source, not taxed, is entered on line 18.

The greenhouses on the edge of town did not have so profitable a year in 1914 as in the preceding period, and the profits which fall to A. F. Lorist as a partner in that enterprise are only $1,600. These are net profits, not total receipts. Part of this amount was invested in improvements in the greenhouses before it ever reached our taxpayer's hands, but it must all be entered as income just the same. The Canadian corporation, in which the neighbor who had moved across the border interested him, paid $240 in 1914, which is entered on line 20. During the year he perfected a piece of greenhouse apparatus, the idea for which had been buzzing in his head for some time, and patented it. From the construction concern which is making use of this improvement, he received during 1914 royalties amounting to $342.60. Finally, on line 25, he enters $110 received in dividends from a corporation which pays a tax on its income.

In completing the page, he adds up the columns A and B, then enters the total of the two on line 24, and, including the amount received in dividends, enters his total income at the foot of the page as $25,150.60.

General Deductions.

At the top of page 3, he puts down the expense, $16,120, of carrying on his store during 1914. Next he enters $380, interest on a loan from his banker. The taxes on the store property were $165.76. His wife, in whose name the home property stands, paid $144.18 in taxes. A barn on the home property burned down August 6, 1914, when it was almost completed, but before insurance had been obtained. This is entered on his wife's line under losses. The report this year requires the details of the occasion of the loss.

Book accounts found to be worthless and charged off during 1914 amounted to $494. His wife held the note of a man who in 1914 went into bankruptcy; her loss on the note was $387.56. Both these items must be accounted in detail on the lines following their entry. In a like manner, the depreciation of property must be given in detail in addition to the entry of the lump sum. He figures a five per cent depreciation on his brick store building, erected in 1909 and valued January 1, 1914, at $5,800; ten per cent on the greenhouses in the rear of his store; twelve per cent on his store fixtures and furnishings, and twenty per cent on his new White truck. Some concerns estimate the depreciation on their trucks at twenty-five per cent, but the White Co. finds twenty per cent sufficient on its cars. His total deduction for depreciation is, therefore, $1,312. The total deductions, entered at the foot of page 3, are $19,203.50.

The totals of each of pages 2 and 3 are entered on page 1, on lines 1 and 2, and the difference computed. From this amount, the net income, are deducted the entries on lines 23 and 27 of page 2, and the specific exemption, in this case $4,000, as the taxpayer is a married man and lives with his wife. The remainder is the taxable income, in this case $1,637.10. One per cent of this amount, the tax, is entered at the foot of the page, and the work is done.

If anyone should compare the schedules filed last year and this year by A. F. Lorist, he must remember in so doing that last year's tax was only on the income of the last ten months of 1913, while this year's is on the entire twelve months of 1914. While, therefore, his income seems to have increased, if allowance is made for the greater length of the period covered it will be found to have decreased, which seems to have been the case with most florists during 1914.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

MORE THAN A MONEY MATTER.

How a retail business may become, even in a department store, something more than merely commercial transaction is shown by the present successful flower section in the Milwaukee department store of Gimbel Bros. For this there are practical reasons. The first is the young and energetic manager, A. H. MacDonald, who for the last eleven years has been gaining experience with various middle-west retailers.

His department, covering seventy-five feet of floor space, is at the main entrance of the store. In the large display icebox, one section is given over to the exhibition of made-up baskets and corsage and Dutch bouquets; the rest is filled with the best flowers, particularly novelties.

There is also a refrigerator display window in the lobby of the main entrance, reckoned as one of the most valuable in the store, occupied exclusively by flowers. This is changed daily, giving prominence to something different each day. Those who know Gimbel Bros. and Milwaukee, will readily realize that thousands of people observe these displays each day. Those who do not buy there, I am told, go to their own florist and ask for something similar.

At first the buyers always asked the price per dozen and the usual many uncalled-for questions. As confidence was lacking, the customers would wait until their orders were filled. But in two months things were different. Mr. MacDonald had worked up a telephone trade and had an appreciative patronage, and now the department is in the same class as other leading retailers.

Another reason for this result, besides that of having gained the patron's confidence, is the prompt delivery service. All near-by deliveries are made as first calls by the regular wagons; all others are made by boys. Before spring there will be an automobile for the exclusive use of this department.

Although the department has been in operation only four months, it has a good demand for the following roses: George Elgar, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Russell, Hadley and Fireflame. Mr. MacDonald is pleased with the fact that he has never felt a need to resort to the dollar box, as his policy is "Art, quality and reasonable prices."

LOUISVILLE AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

The entire decorating contract of the Louisville automobile show, something of which may be seen in the accompanying illustration, was handled by E. G. Reimers & Son Co., of that city. Taking the bare armory, with a floor space of 200 x 300 feet and not a column, this firm supplied everything from the 7-foot imitation iron fence which divided the exhibits to the festoons strung with colored lights and bearing at intervals 100-watt tungstens.

King Cotton was the feature of the show, so far as the decorations were concerned. The whole balcony was lined with spruce trees and large cotton plants, from which hung wild smilax dotted with cotton bolls. The tall posts holding the festoons were wrapped with cotton from a height of six feet upward and bore a large cotton plant on top. The festoon wires were covered with smilax and cotton bolls and carried 900 lights in all.

The exhibits were separated by imitation iron picket fence, ranging from four to seven feet in height. This was covered with southern smilax. At the end of each dividing fence was a large rustic stand filled with palms and foliage plants. The general effect, that of a southern garden and cotton field, excited much comment.

FLOWER DAYS BY LAW.

A bill is before the Tennessee State Legislature, recommending the celebration of the second Sunday of May as Mothers' day, the first Sunday in June as Fathers' day, and the first Wednesday in November as Chrysanthemum day, all to be celebrated with appropriate exercises in the public schools and by the wearing of the designated carnations on Mothers' day, roses on Fathers' day and the placing of chrysanthemums on graves on Chrysanthemum day. Mr. Lewis, a Nashville newspaper reporter, is giving the matter general publicity in the press of the state. The bill, if passed, will not make these legal holidays, but merely recommend their observance. F. B.

AT A MACON MARRIAGE.

The low price of cotton evidently does not interfere with the prosperity of the Idle Hour Nurseries, at Macon, Ga. The illustrations on the following pages show parts of a $2,000 order, recently executed by the concern, for the Dempsey-Wright marriage. To Dan C. Horgan is due the credit for the decorations. All of the stock used came from the greenhouses of his concern. An idea of the quantity used may be gained from the fact that 500 orchids were distributed in the various arrangements.

The bride's bouquet was of orchids and valley, the maid of honor's of white roses and violets, and the bridesmaids' were of pink roses and valley. Of the decorations of the house, the following, clipped from a local newspaper, gives a brief but clear account:

"The drawing room, where the ceremony was performed, was, if possible, even more strikingly beautiful than the other rooms. The decorations here were entirely in green and white. The mantel was banked with orchids and lilies, and the improvised altar, arranged in the form of an enormous shell, was made of orchids and valley and myriads of tiny lights. An aisle leading to the altar was formed by Easter lilies and white ribbon. In the next room the walls were hung with gold wall pockets filled with pink carnations and roses. All the mantels were banked with ferns, roses and lilies. The hall was gorgeously decorated with tall vases of American Beauty roses, and around the foot of the circular staircase were quantities of red azaleas, the entire stairway and landing being hung with smilax and studded with American Beauties.

"In the dining room the table was exquisite, with a centerpiece of orchids, which appeared to be growing naturally in a tree stump. In the room where the gifts were on display, the walls were hung with baskets of Killarney roses and white hyacinths. Between all of the rooms portieres of smilax, valley and hyacinths were held back by ropes of orchids.

F. T. D. MEETING.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association will have a meeting of directors at the La Salle hotel in Chicago, March 2, at 10 a. m. Members are invited to attend this meeting if possible. Albert Pochelon, Sec'y.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Unless creditors show cause to the contrary, William Stewart, trustee for James W. Shearer, bankrupt, will sell to F. A. Hutchings, of this city, for $3,000, or to anyone who will pay more, the greenhouses and land on Broome street February 13. The property includes four parcels of land on which the greenhouses are situated and the contents of the houses. It has been inventoried for $7,400 aside from the contents. The property is sold subject to mortgages amounting to $2,000 and a claim of $420 yearly to Frank Shearer, father of the bankrupt and formerly head of the firm of F. Shearer & Son, who is now over 70 years old. The bankrupt estate was inventoried at $21,174.60 at the time of filing the petition.

Salem, O.—Application for a receiver for the greenhouses formerly owned by him was made by Joseph E. Bonsall February 2 in an action filed against V. Austin Cowgill, charging violation of the terms of a contract entered into at the time the houses were sold to the latter four years ago. Judge Moore appointed J. E. McNeelan receiver, to take immediate charge of the property. Mr. Bonsall states that at the time of the sale Mr. Cowgill agreed to operate the greenhouses to the best of his ability, particularly the rose houses, but that he has placed Fred Meyerhofer in charge of the greenhouses and leased the property to J. J. Gunn & Son, with the result that the property is rapidly deteriorating in value. He asks for a judgment of $10,000 against Cowgill and that the greenhouses and real estate be sold at public sale to satisfy the claim.

THE ILLINOIS MEETING.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its tenth annual convention at Urbana March 2 and 3. There will be an exhibition. The program is as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 2 P. M.

Welcome: Dr. E. Davenport, Dean of College of Agriculture.
President's address: H. E. Smith, Danville, Ill.
Report of secretary: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.
Report of treasurer: F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.
Report of advisory committee: W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.
Report on fertilizer work: F. W. Muncie, Urbana, Ill.
Report on pathological work: G. L. Peltier, Urbana, Ill.
Unfinished business.
New business.
General discussion.
Nomination and election of officers.
Adjournment.
After the meeting the state experimental greenhouses will be open for inspection. The research and instructional staffs will be on duty and will be pleased to answer all questions.

SMOKER

A smoker will be held at 8 p. m. Secure tickets at the secretary's desk.
Welcome: Prof. J. C. Blair, Head of the Department of Horticulture.
"What the Division of Floriculture is Trying to Do," H. B. Dorner, Assistant Professor of Floriculture.
"Landscape Gardening," R. R. Root, Assistant Professor of Landscape Gardening.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3

The day will be spent in an inspection of the greenhouses and other university buildings.

GERMINATING PLUMOSUS SEED.

Will you kindly give us some instructions on the germinating of Asparagus plumosus seeds? We seldom get more than fifty per cent of them to grow. After they are germinated we have no further trouble. We sow in flats, in three inches of sandy loam, and cover the seeds to a depth of about one-fourth of an inch. Before sowing, we soak the seeds for twenty-four to forty-eight hours. After sowing, we put the flats in a sand pit which is used for the propagation of coleus. This pit is in good light, with no direct sunshine, and has a slate bottom, with pipes beneath. The bottom heat is 70 to 80 degrees. The flats do not stand directly on the slates, but there is about one inch of sand in the pit. Then we surround the flats with lights of glass and also place glass on top, to keep in the moisture. Of course we ventilate occasionally. E. M. A.

The treatment described in the foregoing letter does not seem to be seriously wrong, except that the covering of the flats with a case of glass is not necessary for these seeds, and might cause fungi in the soil to a sufficient degree to rot some of the seeds and thus to lower the percentage of germination. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees is sufficient for asparagus seeds, and it is quite possible that you have kept them rather too warm and moist. Some growers sow in shallow benches in a warm house, in preference to putting the seeds in flats.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

State Vice-president.

President Patrick Welch has appointed J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., state vice-president of New Jersey in place of Joseph A. Manda, who declined the appointment. John Young, Sec'y.

Membership Contest.

The president desires to notify all persons interested in the prize contest that the rules to govern the same are changed to read as follows:

1. Anyone desiring to enter the contest must first register by sending his or her name and address to the secretary, John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, as early as possible, who will forward application blanks immediately.
2. The contestants must forward to the secretary as received a list of the new members secured, accompanied by fee of $5 for each annual member and $30 for each new life member. Each annual member shall count one; each life member shall count six.
3. The secretary will publish a list of the new members thus secured, and of the contestants thus securing them, in the trade papers weekly. July 31, 1915, at 6 p. m., the candidate having the largest number of names to his or her credit shall be declared the winner. (Contest closes at 6 p. m. sharp at the secretary's office in New York city. Applications for membership sent by mail and received after that hour will not be counted.)
4. The prize to be selected by a committee of three, two appointed by the president of the society and one by the winner. The president's gold watch and chain, value $150, is the prize, but if the winner prefers, the same value will be offered in something else—that is optional, $150 in gold, if preferred.

John Young, Sec'y.

BOSTON'S MIDWINTER SHOW.

The annual midwinter flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, February 6 and 7, was an excellent one and filled the main exhibition hall. The carnation men were out in force and put up a superb lot of flowers, competition being keen. Boston never has staged flowers of grander quality. Awards were:

Fifty mixed carnations—S. J. Goddard, first; A. A. Pembroke, second.

Twenty-five blooms, private gardeners only—Geo. Page, gardener to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, first and second; Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark, third.

Fifty white—C. S. Strout, first; A. A. Pembroke, second, each with Matchless.

Fifty light pink—A. A. Pembroke, first; S. J. Goddard, second, each with Gloriosa.

Fifty rose pink—C. S. Strout, first, with Mrs. C. W. Ward; M. A. Patten & Co., second, with Philadelphia.

Fifty flesh pink—John A. Nelson, first; C. S. Strout, second, each with Pink Delight. A grand lot of flowers were shown in this class, all being Pink Delight.

Fifty deep pink—A. A. Pembroke, first, with Gorgeous; C. S. Strout, second, with Rosette.

Fifty crimson—C. S. Strout, first, with splendid Pocahontas; A. A. Pembroke, second, with fine Princess Dagmar.

Fifty scarlet—C. S. Strout, first, with Champion; S. J. Goddard, second.

Fifty white variegated—A. A. Pembroke, first; John A. Nelson, second, each with Benora.

Fifty yellow variegated—A. A. Pembroke, first, with Yellow Prince.

Albert Roper secured a silver medal for Miss Alice Coombs, which he showed in fine shape. M. A. Patten & Co. received honorable mention for Sunbeam, a promising flesh pink seedling.

Single violets—Esty Bros., first; William Sim, second.

Flowering plants were numerously shown and of splendid quality.

Six Begonia de Lorraine—Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first; W. W. Edgar Co., second; Alexander McKay, third.

Six 8-inch pots of freesias—George Page, first; H. Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, second; E. H. Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, third.

Eight Primula Sinensis—Martin Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, first; Martin Sullivan, second; William Thatcher, third.

Eight Primula stellata—William Thatcher, first; Martin Sullivan, second.

Eight Primula malacoides—Martin Sullivan, first; A. J. Newell, gardener to E. S. Draper, Hopedale, Mass., second; George Page, third. There were eight entries.

Eight Primula obconica—Martin Sullivan, first and second; William Thatcher, third.

Eight Roman hyacinths—William Thatcher, first; Martin Sullivan, second; Duncan Finlayson, gardener to Larz Anderson, third.

Mantel Decoration by the Idle-Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga.

Six polyanthus narcissi—William Thatcher, first.

Six pots calanthes—William Thatcher, first.

Three orchids, other than calanthes—Duncan Finlayson, first; J. T. Butterworth, second; William Thatcher, third.

Specimen orchid—Duncan Finlayson, first; J. T. Butterworth, second; William Thatcher, third.

William Martin, gardener to N. T. Kidder, received honorable mention for a seedling amaryllis. William Thatcher, for Dendrobium primulinum, received a certificate of merit and Duncan Finlayson a similar award for Cymbidium insigne x C. Wiganianum. George Page showed a beautiful specimen of Acacia heterophylla, also fine Erica melanthera and other plants. W. W. Edgar Co. had a fine group of rhododendrons, genistas, Darwin tulips, etc. A. J. Newell showed Begonia Sutton's Crimson Bedder. H. Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, had a nice group of flowering and foliage plants, and Walter Angus a collection of camellias.

There was a splendid show of fruit and vegetables. The Boston Market Gardeners' Association had thirty-five bushel boxes of choice hothouse vegetables, which made a show in themselves. W. N. C.

Shearer & Son, who is now over 70 years old. The bankrupt estate was inventoried at $21,174.60 at the time of filing the petition.

Salem, O.—Application for a receiver for the greenhouses formerly owned by him was made by Joseph E. Bonsall February 2 in an action filed against V. Austin Cowgill, charging violation of the terms of a contract entered into at the time the houses were sold to the latter four years ago. Judge Moore appointed J. E. McNeelan receiver, to take immediate charge of the property. Mr. Bonsall states that at the time of the sale Mr. Cowgill agreed to operate the greenhouses to the best of his ability, particularly the rose houses, but that he has placed Fred Meyerhofer in charge of the greenhouses and lease the property to J. J. Gunn & Son, with the result that the property is rapidly deteriorating in value. He asks for judgment of $10,000 against Cowgill and that the greenhouses and real estate be sold at public sale to satisfy the claim.

THE ILLINOIS MEETING.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its tenth annual convention at Urbana March 2 and 3. There will be an exhibition. The program is as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 2 P. M.

Welcome: Dr. E. Davenport, Dean of College of Agriculture.
President's address: H. E. Smith, Danville, Ill.
Report of secretary: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.
Report of treasurer: F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.
Report of advisory committee: W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.
Report on fertilizer work: F. W. Muncie, Urbana, Ill.
Report on pathological work: G. L. Peltier, Urbana, Ill.
Unfinished business.
New business.
General discussion.
Nomination and election of officers.
Adjournment.

After the meeting the state experimental greenhouses will be open for inspection. The research and instructional staffs will be on duty and will be pleased to answer all questions.

SMOKER

A smoker will be held at 8 p. m. Secure tickets at the secretary's desk.

Welcome: Prof. J. C. Blair, Head of the Department of Horticulture.

"What the Division of Floriculture is Trying to Do," H. B. Dorner, Assistant Professor of Floriculture.

"Landscape Gardening," R. R. Root, Assistant Professor of Landscape Gardening.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3

The day will be spent in an inspection of the greenhouses and other university buildings.

GERMINATING PLUMOSUS SEED.

Will you kindly give us some instructions on the germinating of Asparagus plumosus seeds? We seldom get more than fifty per cent of them to grow. After they are germinated we have no further trouble. We sow in flats, in three inches of sandy loam, and cover the seeds to a depth of about one-fourth of an inch. Before sowing, we soak the seeds for twenty-four to forty eight hours. After sowing, we put the flats in a sand pit which is used for the propagation of coleus. This pit is in good light, with no direct sunshine, and has a slate bottom, with pipes beneath. The bottom heat is 70 to 80 degrees. The flats do not stand directly on the slates, but there is about one inch of sand in the pit. Then we surround the flats with lights of glass and also place glass on top, to keep in the moisture. Of course we ventilate occasionally. E. M. A.

The treatment described in the foregoing letter does not seem to be seriously wrong, except that the covering of the flats with a case of glass is not necessary for these seeds, and might cause fungi in the soil to a sufficient degree to rot some of the seeds and thus to lower the percentage of germination. A temperature of 65 to 70 degrees is sufficient for asparagus seeds, and it is quite possible that you have kept them rather too warm and moist. Some growers sow in shallow trenches in a warm house, in preference to putting the seeds in flats.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

State Vice-president.

President Patrick Welch has appointed J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., state vice-president of New Jersey in place of Joseph A. Manda, who declined the appointment. John Young, Sec'y.

Membership Contest.

The president desires to notify all persons interested in the prize contest that the rules to govern the same are changed to read as follows:

1. Anyone desiring to enter the contest must first register by sending his or her name and address to the secretary, John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, as early as possible, who will forward application blanks immediately.

2. The contestants must forward to the secretary as received a list of the new members secured, accompanied by fee of $5 for each annual member and $30 for each new life member. Each annual member shall count one; each life member shall count six.

3. The secretary will publish a list of the new members thus secured, and of the contestants thus securing them, in the trade papers weekly, July 31, 1915, at 6 p. m., the candidate having the largest number of names to his or her credit at all be declared the winner. (Contest closes at 6 p. m. sharp at the secretary's office in New York city. Applications for membership sent by mail and received after that hour will not be counted.)

4. The prize to be selected by a committee of three, two appointed by the president of the society and one by the winner. The president's gold watch and chain, value $150, is the prize, but if the winner prefers, the same value will be offered in something else—that is optional, $150 in gold, if preferred.

John Young, Sec'y.

BOSTON'S MIDWINTER SHOW.

The annual midwinter flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, February 6 and 7, was an excellent one and filled the main exhibition hall. The carnation men were out in force and put up a superb lot of flowers, competition being keen. Boston never has staged flowers of grander quality. Awards were:

Fifty mixed carnations—S. J. Goddard, first; A. A. Pembroke, second.

Twenty-five blooms, private gardeners only—Geo. Page, gardener to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, first and second; Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark, third.

Fifty white—C. S. Strout, first; A. A. Pembroke, second, each with Matchless.

Fifty light pink—A. A. Pembroke, first; S. J. Goddard, second, each with Gloriosa.

Fifty rose pink—C. S. Strout, first, with Mrs. C. W. Ward; M. A. Patten & Co., second, with Philadelphia.

Fifty flesh pink—John A. Nelson, first; C. S. Strout, second, each with Pink Delight. A grand lot of flowers were shown in this class, all being Pink Delight.

Fifty deep pink—A. A. Pembroke, first, with Gorgeous; C. S. Strout, second, with Rosette.

Fifty crimson—C. S. Strout, first, with splendid Pocahontas; A. A. Pembroke, second, with fine Princess Dagmar.

Fifty scarlet—C. S. Strout, first, with Champion; S. J. Goddard, second.

Fifty white variegated—A. A. Pembroke, first; John A. Nelson, second, each with Benora.

Fifty yellow variegated—A. A. Pembroke first, with Yellow Prince.

Albert Roper secured a silver medal for Miss Alice Coombs, which he showed in fine shape. M. A. Patten & Co. received honorable mention for Sunbeam, a promising flesh pink seedling.

Single violets—Esty Bros., first; William Sim, second.

Flowering plants were numerously shown and of splendid quality.

Six Begonia de Lorraine—Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, first; W. W. Edgar Co., second; Alexander McKay, third.

Six 8-inch pots of freesias—George Page, first; H. Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, second; E. H. Wetterlow, gardener to Mrs. Lester Leland, third.

Eight Primula Sinensis—Martin Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, first; Martin Sullivan, second; William Thatcher, third.

Eight Primula stellata—William Thatcher first; Martin Sullivan, second.

Eight Primula malacoides—Martin Sullivan, first; A. J. Newell, gardener to E. S. Draper, Hopedale, Mass., second; George Page, third. There were eight entries.

Eight Primula obconica—Martin Sullivan, first and second; William Thatcher, third.

Eight Roman hyacinths—William Thatcher, first; Martin Sullivan, second; Duncan Finlayson, gardener to Larz Anderson, third.

Mantel Decoration by the Idle-Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga.

Six polyanthus narcissi—William Thatcher first.

Six pots calanthes—William Thatcher, first.

Three orchids, other than calanthes—Duncan Finlayson, first; J. T. Butterworth, second; William Thatcher, third.

Specimen orchid—Duncan Finlayson, first; J. T. Butterworth, second; William Thatcher, third.

William Martin, gardener to N. T. Kidder, received honorable mention for a seedling amaryllis. William Thatcher, for Dendrobium primulinum, received a certificate of merit and Duncan Finlayson a similar award for Cymbidium insigne x C. Wiganianum. George Page showed a beautiful specimen of Acacia heterophylla, also fine Erica melanthera and other plants. W. W. Edgar Co. had a fine group of rhododendrons, genistas, Darwin tulips, etc. A. J. Newell showed Begonia Sutton's Crimson Bedder. H. Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, had a nice group of flowering and foliage plants, and Walter Angus a collection of camellias.

There was a splendid show of fruit and vegetables. The Boston Market Gardeners' Association had thirty-five bushel boxes of choice hothouse vegetables, which made a show in themselves. W. N. C.

Bisbee, Ariz.—Harry Seeley will shortly open a high-class florists' store. He recently made a trip to Phoenix, where he made arrangements for a supply of stock from the Dunbar Rose Gardens.

CARNATIONS

POTTING UP THE CUTTINGS.

Progress of the Propagators.

By this time the cuttings put into the sand during early January will be striking roots and the grower should be prepared to take them out just as soon as they are ready to pot. There is practically no nourishment in the sand and the longer a cutting is left in the propagating bed after it is rooted, the worse it is for it.

There has been as much progress made in the handling of the propagating bed as in any other department of carnation growing, during the last few years. Instead of the rooted cuttings being soft, weak little things, the expert propagator takes out of the sand young plants that are well inured to the sun and ready to take hold right away in the new soil. This is done by gradually inuring the cuttings to the sun, beginning as soon as the rootlets start, with at first an hour or so in the morning and evening and increasing each day as rapidly as the cuttings are able to stand it, until by the time they are ready to pot the bench is given the full sun through the entire day. The same course is followed with the watering. As soon as the roots start, the water is gradually diminished, so that by the time the cuttings are ready to pot, the sand is just moist enough to sustain growing plants in good condition. When taking the cuttings out of the cutting bed the sand should drop from the roots readily when given a slight shake, without tearing off the roots. There will be practically no loss from cuttings that are handled in this way and they will need shading from the sun only a few days after being potted.

Pots and Soil.

We use 2-inch pots for anything that is potted up to February 20, shifting into a larger size in March. After February 20 we pot into 2½-inch pots and leave in that size until planting-out time. We prefer growing our young stock in pots to any other method we have ever seen or tried. This is largely a matter of preference, however, as we know of other successful growers who use the box method. Others, again, use the dirt bands with good success. It is like many other things in which, if you make the most of whatever method you employ, you will have good success.

Use good soil for the young plants, but do not make it too rich for the first potting. After the plants are established, you can use richer soil for the shift, but even then a rich soil is not needed. The carnation likes a sandy soil and if your soil is inclined to be heavy, a dash of sand in each barrow of compost will improve it.

Those who grow a variety of stock will be able to find space for the young plants without trouble, but those who specialize closely on the carnation will sometimes be perplexed to know where to put them. The natural tendency is to throw out the bed that gives the least promise for the future, which, under certain conditions, is the wise thing to do. One must not fail to consider the cause of failure on this particular space. If the variety is at fault, well and good; the young plants will likely do first-rate there. If, however, the plants failed because the bed is unsuited for growing first-class stock, then it is no place for the young plants. Many growers fail to keep in mind that the young plants of this year will be their blooming stock of next year and that they should have the best of care from the start. Right now is when you are laying the foundation for your success or failure next season.

Bench for Young Stock.

Do not set the pots on the old soil, not even if you spread a layer of sand on it first. We see this done frequently, and usually to the guilty one's sorrow. The soil in the pots will be infested with angleworms coming out of the old soil, and later on it will be impossible to dump out the young plants satisfactorily. Take out all the soil, whitewash the boards and spread an inch of clean sand in the bench to set the pots on.

If you have a cool house in which you can grow your young plants, they will be the better for it. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees will suit them exactly. If, however, you are obliged to grow your young plants in the same houses with the blooming stock, as many of us must do, no trouble should be experienced, if you will be careful to keep the young stock in the cooler part of the houses. Also, be sure that the young plants get good light and the full sun.

Watering should be done carefully for a time after potting. Give a good watering the first time, to settle the soil around the roots, but after that water only moderately until the young roots show at the side of the pot. After that, water may be given more liberally, but the soil should never be soggy. The same course should be followed after shifting into larger pots.

Still Time to Root Cuttings.

If you failed to get enough cuttings for your needs, in the first batch, or if your strike was not satisfactory, it is not too late to put in more cuttings. Cuttings put in sand now will make the best of stock, if properly taken care of. As the sun grows stronger, the chances for success in rooting the cuttings diminishes, unless you are prepared to give close attention. No time should be lost now, in getting the propagating finished up as soon as possible.

GLASS MARKET STANDS FIRM.

Exporting Instead of Importing.

The truth of the adage "It's an ill wind that blows no one good" is shown in the effects the European war is having on the American window glass trade. And as the time for the erection of new greenhouses and the repair of old ones draws nearer, the glass situation assumes more than a passing interest to florists.

During the year preceding the opening of hostilities in Belgium, that country alone exported 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 boxes of window glass. Of this, a large per cent was consumed by the American market. Since August 1, however, there has been practically no glass production in Europe, and no shipments at all from Belgium, the leading window glass manufacturing country of the Old World. On the other hand, the American manufacturers are exporting glass to China, Japan, England and Canada. The exporting of American window glass to Asiatic countries is altogether unprecedented, as Europe has heretofore supplied them. Of course, American glass has for years found some market in Canada, but nothing to compare with that of the last few months. The demand from Australia also is large, but there seems to be much difficulty in securing shipping space to this country; and, in addition to this, many manufacturers complain that the ocean freight rates are all but prohibitive. As an index to the situation, it is interesting to note that there are at present 25,000 cars of general merchandise, not yet unloaded, in New York, awaiting shipment to European and Australian ports. The sales representative of one of the largest glass manufacturers in the United States assured The Review that more than a few of these cars are loaded with window glass. The exports to South America are also proportionately large, but they are attended with none of the difficulties besetting the Australian trade.

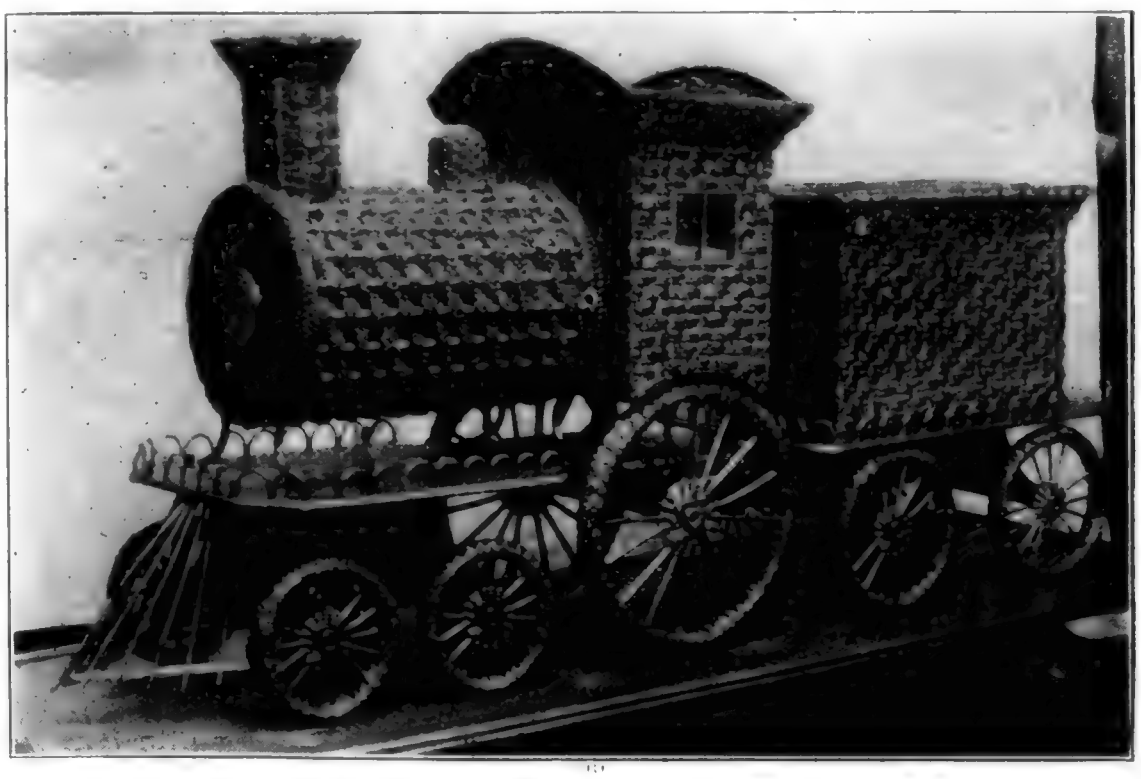
The Effect on Prices.

The effect of the war on the prices of glass has been to establish a more uniform price the world over, rather than to cause any marked variation from the prices of last year. For though there has been a rise of perhaps two and one-half per cent in the larger sizes, there has been a corresponding fall in the price of the smaller sizes. The manufacturers are exporting the sheets without cutting them up and getting about 5½ cents f. o. b. the factory, while 16 x 18 f. o. b. Chicago is selling at about 5 cents per foot. In other words, the factory gets close to a penny a foot more for the sheets than it would get by cutting into greenhouse sizes. The general impression is that there will be no important change in prices before April 1 and that whatever tendency there is points to another decline in greenhouse glass rather than to any advance. This is due, according to the opinion of one manufacturer, to the larger output of greenhouse sizes by the machine-blowing plants. The average factory cuts greenhouse sizes only as a sort of by-product of the process of cutting larger sizes, but nevertheless about fifteen per cent of the output is in the 16-inch sizes.

The Promise of Stability.

Because of the large volume of imports last spring and during the early summer, and the consequent reluctance of the American manufacturers to cause what they feared might be an overproduction, the stocks that will be in the hands of the jobbers when the hand manufacturers cease operations in the spring will be lower this year than in any one of the twenty preceding it.



The fact that gives the strongest assurance of the stability of the market is that a majority of the manufacturers are looking forward to an era of unprecedented prosperity in the glass trade. Of course many jobbers, being more or less interested in imports, dissent from this view; but, all things considered, the manufacturer should be relied on to sound the true note.

ROMANS AND VALLEY.

The first few months of 1915 will see a larger supply of Roman hyacinths and lily of the valley than ever before has been known in the history of cut flower growing in America. There was an unusually large importation of French Romans last autumn and the supply of valley pips this season promises to be the largest ever, due to America being Germany's only open market. Consequently the retailers will have an excellent opportunity to use Romans and valley in designs like the one shown in the accompanying illustration, a wreath of white on a background of adiantum.

A FLORAL LOCOMOTIVE.

The members of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A. decided January 28 that they wished to make a suitable gift indicative of their calling to the Reverend Billy Sunday when the visited, January 30, the Tabernacle where he is holding his meetings in Philadelphia. They decided on a locomotive eight feet long, three feet high and two and a half feet wide, perfect in its details so far as the eye could see. This was made by

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. in their factory in a day and a half. It was adorned with American Beauty roses and sweet peas, and filled with choice fruit. The photograph reproduced on page 15 will show you the effect when complete, which is so realistic that a not extraordinarily lively imagination will be required to hear the toot-toot that denotes the real thing. EARLY PROPAGATION.

Stock for Exhibition.

It is time for the grower who figures on doing any exhibiting to be propagating his chrysanthemum stock. It is assumed that the stock plants have been in a cold, airy house and that they now have a nice batch of good, healthy cuttings. We have found it pays us to have an entirely separate batch of stock plants to propagate from. We grow them outdoors in the summer, keeping them on the dry side, not permitting them to flower and not feeding them in any way. These stock plants are lifted late in November, and immediately after they are placed inside they begin to throw up a batch of fine, healthy cuttings, which are ideal for growing along for next year. The method usually employed, of carrying along stock plants that have been grown for flowers, from year to year, tends quickly to degenerate the stock, and while it costs money to grow plants one year, simply for the sake of propagating, we have found it pays us to do so.

The commercial grower to whom time and space are valuable commodities will not figure on propagating at this time to any considerable extent, although, if he has a batch of plants he wishes to increase, he would do well to begin getting his first lot of cuttings in the sand, as the tops can be taken from these later and they will give him nice cuttings, which will root a great deal more quickly and freely than the cuttings from the old plants. The mum does not need any bottom heat, although we always keep our sand at a temperature of about 55 degrees and then the process of rooting is not so slow. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that the suckers that come up directly from the soil are much the best cuttings and that, as a rule, cuttings forming on the old stem should be avoided, as they are liable to run into bud as soon as they begin to grow.

Early-Flowering Varieties.

There are many florists who have not become acquainted with the early-flowering type of mum, and yet I question whether there is any other type that will bring as much money to the grower, satisfy his customers so well and be out of the way in time to make room for other stock before the severe frosts come. The florist who has any local business in plants can sell this type to his customers with every assurance that they will give good satisfaction, flowering six weeks or a month before the pompons and continuing from the second week in September until quite late in November. Our early-flowering mums bloom outdoors without any protection whatever, and in the fall are visited by hundreds of people who take notes of colors and types, so they may intelligently order plants for themselves another year. Not only do they give satisfaction outside, but they grow indoors in pots and supply ideal blooms for early fall weddings.

The early-flowering varieties do not produce cuttings so readily as other sorts and, if they are outdoors now, they should be brought in at once, in order that a sufficient quantity of stock can be worked up.

It is a fact not generally known that most of the singles are also entirely hardy, and can be recommended with every confidence that they are perfectly satisfactory for garden work. There has been a tremendous movement in the last few years in favor of plants that will bloom around the house, owing largely to garden clubs and improvement societies, and florists in almost any gardening center will do well to watch the signs of the times and stock up well with outdoor mums and other plants that can be grown with a minimum of time and trouble.

Chas. H. Totty.

WILL EELWORMS INJURE MUMS?

Will you kindly tell us whether the eelworms that attack geraniums, carnations, roses, etc., will attack chrysanthemums? We find that poinsettias and Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are immune from these pests. A. G.

I have never seen eelworms on chrysanthemums in this state, New Jersey, though it is entirely possible that, under certain conditions, the worms might prove annoying to mum growers in other parts of the Union. Conditions in A. G.'s state, New Mexico, may differ radically from those of New Jersey, so it is quite likely that some grower nearer to A. G.'s locality can give a more satisfactory answer to his inquiry. C. H. Totty.

USE OF PULVERIZED MANURE.

Can you inform me whether it is possible to grow first-class chrysanthemums by using pulverized cow manure instead of rotted cow manure? If so, how much pulverized cow manure should be used as a starter for benches 5 x 100 feet? W. H. B.

I think it entirely possible to grow good chrysanthemums by the use of pulverized cow manure, but would suggest that the manure be mixed with the soil before planting time. Personally, I have never used the pulverized manure, but have heard other growers speak highly of it. In preparing our soil with the cow manure we use four loads of soil to one of the manure, but I understand that the pulverized article, being dried, is considerably reduced in weight and in bulk. In such a case, one load to even six or eight loads of soil should be sufficient to start the plants in good shape. During the month of September, when they are finishing up their buds, there is, of course, nothing to beat liquid fertilizer. There is no reason why pulverized material should not be good for the soil in the spring planting. Chas. H. Totty.

SUN PERCH VS. MOSQUITOES.

To the correspondent who inquired in a recent issue of The Review as to the best means of exterminating mosquitoes in water tanks I suggest, why not try sun perch? B. C. Auten.

OBJECTS TO CHEROKEE STOCK.

In The Review of January 28 F. A. D. writes that he wants to grow rose stock for fall budding of Cherokee rose. He does not say whether single or double, but I presume single, for lack of better knowledge. We consider Cherokee roses of no use in California. The skin is too thin for proper budding, and if you do not cut them right at the bud, they will not heal over properly, leaving a dead stick, perhaps a quarter or half inch long, below the roots, and then they sucker badly. Use R. Manetti. The climate in Texas is much like that of California. Make the cuttings six to eight inches long; plant them upright, a little over half their length in the ground. Then sunshine and plenty of water. But be sure of the water. You should have cuttings ready now. They commence to grow about the middle of this month in the Santa Clara valley. Use English or French Manetti.

REMEDY FOR GREEN FLY.

I read with interest the many inquiries in The Review as to what will kill green fly or aphis. We use a Brown Auto-spray that holds about three gallons; we fill it nearly full of water, put in a 2¼-inch potful of a forty per cent nicotine extract and mix thoroughly. This sprayed on the infected plants a couple of evenings in succession, completely clears out the aphis and has never yet burned any plants.

If time is of much consequence the following is a quick and good way, if steam is used in heating. Take equal parts of water and a forty per cent nicotine solution and squirt it on the steam pipe near the center of the house with an oil can. Or another good remedy is to take half-pages of common newspaper and saturate it in a solution consisting of three tablespoonfuls of saltpeter dissolved in one quart of warm water. Hang the soaked sheets up on a wire to dry. When nearly dry, paint the sheets with a forty per cent nicotine solution and give a good dusting with red pepper. The paper, of course, must be burned before it becomes too dry and about twelve sheets are used for a house 20x100 feet. Experience will soon teach the user how to prepare and use this paper, which is much cheaper than the papers you can buy, and we consider it better. I do not wish to receive credit for making this paper, as the directions were given to me by a brother florist and they are worth trying. We have tried all these methods and find them good. The latter method will also clean out thrips.

VINCA ROSEA.

In a recent issue of The Review I noted the following question: "When should Vinca rosea be pinched back to make the best plants for Memorial day?" The answer, by C. W., was: "Vinca rosea should not be pinched at all." The advice given by this writer is so uniformly dependable that in dissenting from him in this instance it may be well to say that suggestions here offered are based on experience gained in handling thousands of these plants yearly. Unpinched plants would prove disappointing under our methods, both in quality of plants and in cash returns. Pinched stock produces numerously branched, symmetrical plants, each shoot flowering unremittingly from May to October; so profuse and persistent is their flowering propensity that if your stock is in flower May 15 you may rest assured that it will be in bloom May 30. Likewise this same stock may be planted out May 15, if your season permits, and you can heartily assure your customers that plants will be in flower May 30; they are entirely trustworthy in this particular and around Memorial day relieve many worries. Fall seedlings may be pinched and carefully stored until March on a light bench, in a manner to avoid overwatering, as this would prove disastrous. With the advent of March some plants may be advanced to larger pots and their size and branches will be a matter of treatment. Pinching may be done as late as April 15. If short of stock, cuttings will root readily and make nice 2½-inch pot plants.

January seedlings are to be grown on without check and pinched in March and will produce nice 4-branched plants; possibly with stove treatment they could be grown stronger, but our facilities did not permit high temperature. This leads to the thought that under stove treatment plants may break naturally and form bushy subjects, yet I recall individual plants that through some injury had made but one break, which shot out at an angle to form a lop-sided specimen a foot or more in length without any sign of laterals.

As these plants are perennials, they may be held over for an ensuing season and grown to large specimens. Unsold stock will also afford fine sprays for cutting. These branches in water will develop flowers persistently for a week or more, the indoor-grown being preferable.

It should also be noted that vincas may be planted in full or partial sun exposure or with no direct sunlight and do admirably well in all these positions. The white with pink eye will answer all purposes of the pure white variety. The pink-magenta is a pleasing shade, but has lured me often to selection for something better.

Standing Wreath of Lilies, Orchids and Hyacinths.

AZALEAS HAVE PALE FOLIAGE.

I have some azaleas that I carried over from last year with good success, except that the foliage has not the dark green color it should have. Will you please tell me what I can do to give them the dark green color? Do they need food of any kind? They still are in the same pots as when I purchased them a year ago. The plants are full of buds. Will they need feeding to develop the buds? S. M.

Home-grown azaleas always carry foliage somewhat paler in color than that seen on newly imported plants. Azaleas will not tolerate much feeding, but if you give your plants a watering with soot water, using the real, black, soft coal soot, at intervals of ten days, it will green them up if anything will. The best plan is to place the soot in a bag and soak it in a tub or barrel of water; then, when the water is black, use some of this for your plants, but first dilute it to one-fourth its strength. Soot water is fine for coloring up the foliage, especially of soft-wooded plants. C. W.

STANDING WREATH.

The funeral of Wm. D. Scott, a prominent railroad man of Portland, Ore., was the occasion of a large display of florists' work and called forth some of their best efforts. In the accompanying illustration is shown a standing wreath made by Niklas & Son for that occasion. In it were used callas, Easter lilies, orchids, Roman hyacinths and violets.

Sharon, Pa.—W. J. Barnett, who has had his share of troubles of late, is getting things straightened out and has high hopes for the future. He recently has opened a store at 403½ State street.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Pennisetums.

Seeds of those useful and ornamental grasses, the pennisetums, should be sown now if good plants are desired for spring sales. There are several varieties of pennisetums and all are decorative and make splendid edges for beds containing cannas or large subtropical plants. P. longistylum, carrying greenish white plumes, is the variety most in evidence, but P. Ruppelianum, commonly called the purple fountain grass, has graceful foliage and purplish plumes. Then there is the newer P. Japonicum, which makes a splendid bed by itself or is effective if used as an individual specimen. This variety will make fine plants the first season. With all the pennisetums it is necessary to pot off seedlings singly and, as they grow quite fast, a shift into 3½-inch pots may be necessary before planting-out time, for starved looking plants are wanted by no one.

Rambler Roses for Easter.

Easter is the season par excellence for all kinds of roses in pots. It is too late to start any of these now. The plants should all be nicely started into growth and be in a house where they have a minimum temperature of 58 to 60 degrees. On clear days use the spray nozzle freely. Do this early in the day, so that the plants will be dry before nightfall. If, perchance, cloudiness should follow a clear morning, give the plants a good shake to help dry them off. In dark weather it is better to omit syringing, but if there is any arid part of the house where there is a chance for spider to get a foothold, do some spraying there. Mildew must be carefully guarded against. It comes usually from cold drafts, the results of careless ventilation, and it is fostered by a damp and too close atmosphere. On its appearance, either evaporate sulphur or blow flowers of sulphur on the affected part. Plants attacked by mildew are practically unsalable.

Miscellaneous Crops.

Quite a few annuals can be sown now to furnish spring or Memorial day flowers. Stocks started early in February will be on time for Memorial day. Giant Ten Weeks is a good strain to buy. Candytuft makes another good Memorial day crop. Annual lupines and larkspurs are not much seen in the market, but they make splendid and profitable spring crops. The fact that they are not commonly seen makes them sell all the better. Sow the larkspurs in flats, pot off and plant out ten inches apart each way. Sow the lupines in rows eighteen inches apart. For L. mutabilis thin out a foot apart; for Pink Beauty, a pretty early variety, the rows can go a foot apart and the seedlings can stand four inches apart.

Sweet peas can still be sown where they can have ample head room. Use nothing but the Spencer varieties. Some of these come high, but the market now demands them, for no matter how fine you grow the old grandifloras they are hardly salable when the Spencers are in competition with them. Dimorphotheca aurantiaca and hybrids can be flowered earlier from seed than any other annuals. Sow in a shallow bench. They will flower within two months. Calendulas are now a fairly profitable winter crop. For a spring crop, sow now in benches in rows twenty-four inches apart. Thin out the seedlings, making them ten inches apart in the rows. Cornflowers are another desirable spring crop. The double blue variety throws a good percentage of double flowers and should be used. Do not sow the seed too thickly, or, if you do, have courage to thin out the seedlings till they are three inches apart. Allow fifteen to eighteen inches between the rows.

Mignonette can be sown now and will do well until warm weather comes along, though the spikes will not be anything like the equal of those produced during winter, while the temperature is low. Some sorts of annual coreopsis make a useful indoor crop. Schizanthus is still another useful variety, but it does better in pots than in benches. This annual is fine for cutting and lasts surprisingly well in water. The orchid-like flowers have a special charm and have given the plant the common name of poor man's orchid.

Salem, O.—M. C. Clay & Son have a new range of four houses about ready for occupation. They will be used for growing bedding plants and lettuce.

Peoria, Ill.—The settlement of the estate of James C. Murray is being delayed because his executrix, Susan Mary Kirby Murray, cannot locate Van Acker Bros., Saffelaere, Belgium, to whom is due $10.80, a dividend of about eleven per cent from the estate. The sum has been paid to the county treasurer, awaiting further investigation at the end of the war.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Paris, France.—Some members of the trade would prefer to banish roses of German origin entirely rather than add to the confusion of varieties by renaming them. Frau Karl Druschki is often called Reine des Neiges in France and will probably be so known in the future. For Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, the names Tommy Atkins, Gloire de Louvain and Souvenir de Reims have been suggested. But, it is interesting to note, while the discussion of renaming goes on, the varieties are appearing under their old German names in the advertisements of the French trade papers that have resumed publication.

Darmstadt, Germany.—"I am pleased to state," said Ludwig Heyn, proprietor of the grass and tree seed business of Conrad Appel, speaking January 14, "that trade with America now is in full swing. With the help of my New York agents, Loewith, Larsen & Co., I obtained quite a fair amount of my usual orders, and most of them are already executed and on the way to New York, although at first some of my American friends feared not to be able to get any seed from me. By arrangements with forwarders in neutral ports, my export trade has been done smoothly and safely and without delay. Financial conditions in Germany are excellent in every respect; payments are coming in without delay, the banks are doing regular business, and we all have the highest confidence in our army and the kaiser, that this war will be carried out with all power and soon lead to a successful and glorious peace."

Leiden, Holland.—It is reported here that when Bruges was occupied by the invading army the priceless orchid plants of Sander & Sons were evicted in order that the houses might be used as a shelter for horses.

Uxbridge, England.—At the commencement of the war Lowe & Shawyer had a large acreage of crops in hand, and were paying out close to $2,500 a week in wages and salaries. They did not consider themselves justified in continuing this under the circumstances, so they called their men together and asked them to say which of the following two courses they preferred: (1) For all to stay on who cared to, and for all to take part only of their regular wages for the time being, with a promise that the part left should be paid later if all the firm's crops could be sold. (2) For a considerable number of hands to be paid off, and for those kept on to be paid their wages in full. The men voted unanimously in favor of No. 1, and no men were discharged at all. Lowe & Shawyer have been able to market practically all their produce, and in late January the last of the back wages were paid up in full. The firm has started giving the men Saturday afternoons off, except when urgent work has to be done. In these cases, and for Sunday work, Lowe & Shawyer propose henceforward to pay for all time made at time-and-a-half. They are also endeavoring to institute a system of bonuses and other extras under which, if successful, their men will be able to add considerably to their wages.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A stormy week, with snow and rain in equal quantities, naturally resulted in lighter shipments and quiet business. Prices were steady up to February 6, but since then have been gradually softening. The arrivals are increasing. This week probably will see again a great abundance of everything. Roses have maintained their record as the backbone of the market. American Beauties were firm at 60 cents each for the best, and occasionally sales were made at $9 per dozen. The quality of the low grades was decidedly unsatisfactory. All the novelty roses continue in limited supply and are quickly taken off the market. There is likely to be, before the week ends, a surplus of Killarney. Orchids continue to be the surprise of the market; not only is the price abnormally low but the supply still is overabundant. At present quotations many retailers utilize them for window decoration. This flower is certainly the bargain of the season. There is no variation in the price of gardenias and lilies are again receding, $8 per hundred being high tide and in quantity offered at less. Valley is overabundant and prices are tending downward. Carnations also are receding and $20 per thousand is predicted before the week is over. Southern gladioli are done. Some fine tulips are here and daffodils, freesias, hyacinths and sweet peas are abundant, while 35 cents per hundred seems to be top for violets.

Club Meeting.

Nearly 200 members of the Florists' Club attended the meeting February 8, President Bunyard in the chair.

F. H. Traendly presented the final report on the flower show of 1914, showing total expenditures of $27,260 and a profit of $820, fifty per cent of which is added to the club's treasury.

C. H. Totty reported for the committee on the president's address, concurring in the suggestions for affiliation with other horticultural societies, and for a permanent home for the club. J. H. Pepper moved for immediate discussion and Max Schling also emphasized the value of immediate action. Mr. Bunyard said that in answer to his circular to members, the majority of replies were favorable and over $5,000 was pledged for the purchase of bonds. A committee to consider the matter and report at the next meeting was appointed as follows: F. R. Pierson, Philip Kessler, C. H. Totty, J. K. Allen, Julius Roehrs, A. T. De La Mare, W. A. Manda, A. L. Miller, F. H. Traendly, W. R. Cobb, W. H. Duckham, H. E. Froment, G. M. Stumpp and Leonard Barron.

M. C. Ebel read the resolutions on the death of Charles McTaggert. Thomas Boothe de Forest reported for the transportation committee for the Buffalo convention, and F. R. Pierson for the spring flower show. The essay committee reported the engagement of Prof. Lynch for a lecture on the Panama-Pacific Exposition, with stereopticon views, at the March meeting, which will be rose night. Charles Schenck reported for the annual dinner committee.

Andrew Schlevogt, Isadore Fight and Louis Strauss were elected to membership and each addressed the club. Arthur Herrington, F. R. Newbold, Charles Weber, Frank Dinda and R. R. McAnney were proposed. Resignations were read from Sydney Wertheimer, J. J. Beschamp, J. R. Baumann, John R. Weir, Emerson McFadden and Charles H. Allen.

The transportation committee for the San Francisco S. A. F. convention was appointed, as follows: Thomas Boothe de Forest, C. W. Scott, R. J. Irwin, Joseph Fenrich, John Donaldson, John Miesem and Jos. Manda.

J. B. Deamud's motion that every ex-president of the club be made an honorary member was laid on the table.

The splendid lunch was donated by Philip Kessler, who received a standing vote of thanks for his courtesy.

The exhibits filled the entire center of the rooms. Each exhibit received the hearty thanks of the club. They were:

Charles Weber, Lynbrook, L. I., Laura Weber and Mrs. Ernest Thalman, a fine scarlet.

J. F. Marsden, Far Rockaway, a cerise-salmon carnation as yet unnamed.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., Philadelphia, Eureka and the seedling, Arawana, a dark, velvety novelty.

A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, fine Matchless and Enchantress.

Chas. L. Doerrer, Westfield, N. J., Enchantress and Victory.

Herman C. G. Schwarz, a soft salmon novelty called Siren.

Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., Cottage Maid, the light pink sport of Ward.

Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., Pink Delight, Beacon, White Wonder and Gloriosa.

Floral Hill Gardens, Chatham, N. J., a scarlet seedling.

Philip Kessler, a fine vase of Freesia Purity.

Geo. T. Schuneman, Baldwin, N. Y., excellent sweet peas.

P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, Miniature Hyacinth Nimrod.

A. Schlevogt, Brooklyn, willows.

Various Notes.

The Knight & Struck Co. has opened a store at Eighth avenue and Twenty-second street.

E. A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, Pa., who ships carnations and sweet peas to W. P. Ford, was a visitor this week. Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., also was here recently.

Wm. Elliott & Sons report the season opening well. They have received practically all their European seeds with little delay.

Harry A. Bunyard has decided to undertake the seed business on his own account and is located temporarily at 131 West Twenty-eighth street. He has been associated with Arthur T. Boddington for many years, and is well known by the trade everywhere in this country.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. has doubled its office force as spring business increases.

The guarantee fund for the spring show is close to $7,000 and Chairman F. R. Pierson asserts that the success of the show is assured. St. Patrick's day is the opening date.

The reports from the home of L. B. Coddington, at Murray Hill, as to his recovery, are encouraging.

Following H. E. Froment's decision to move to the west side of Sixth avenue, other wholesalers have expressed their intention of following suit. The opening of the new subway at Seventh avenue and Twenty-eighth street will make the section between Sixth and Seventh avenues particularly desirable.

Meyer Othile and W. M. Bishop, of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, celebrated their birthdays on the same date last week.

J. D. & Arthur Cockcroft have decided to sell their own flowers and have acquired space on the floor of the New York Cut Flower Co., with M. Murphy, formerly with Dailledouze Bros., as salesman.

M. A. Bowe had charge at the Gibbs-Wheelock wedding, using over 1,000 orchids; also the Maxwell-Moore wedding at Greenwich, Conn., and several funeral orders for L. V. Harkness, of San Francisco, including a pall of orchids and 15,000 violets. J. A. Shaw.

Gentlemen:-

Kindly have our ad read like the one in your Carnation Number only use our regular space until further notice.

It may perhaps interest you to know that we get quite a few inquiries through your paper from the Atlantic coast states. We made lately a shipment to Groton, Mass., and have just received another order from Washington, D. C. The Review no doubt covers the extreme eastern states pretty well.

Yours truly,

patent on a combination flower vase and electric standing floor lamp, so constructed that fresh cut flowers can be arranged in the metal containers of the vase.

There will be an exhibition by the Horticultural Society February 17 at the American Museum of Natural History. Premiums are offered for cut blooms of orchids, roses, sweet peas, schizanthus, antirrhinum, freesias, and narcissus. Prizes may also be awarded for exhibits not provided for in the schedule, and such exhibits are solicited. There will be a meeting of the society at 3:45, followed by an illustrated lecture, by W. C. McCollum, on "The Small Greenhouse—Its Use and Abuse."

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held February 5, in Lee's hall, Vice-president E. H. Wetterlow in the chair. A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, gave an interesting talk on palms and their insect pests, describing palm growing and selling from a financial as well as a grower's standpoint, bringing out strongly the fact that growing palms is one thing and selling them at a profit is quite another. Mr. Leuthy gave some valuable information as regards treatment of fungus and insect pests, scale of various kinds, mealy bug, etc., and gave definite directions for the safe use of hydrocyanic acid gas. A good general discussion followed the lecture.

The show committee distributed the schedule of prizes for the exhibition which is to be held August 4 and 5. The next meeting will be held February 19.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

The United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., has absorbed the La France greenhouses, in addition to renting the Backer plant. Superintendent Richard King says Geranium Helen Michell will supplant Ricard, as it keeps true to type, is more robust and is a remarkably free bloomer. Fine strikes of cuttings of this and other leading kinds are on the benches. Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward is giving better satisfaction than last year. Gorgeous varies in color. White Wonder is truly named. The newer kinds are having a thorough trial. Lilium giganteum is rooted on the benches, the pots being heavily covered with leaves. Taller plants are thus produced. The objection to starting them under the benches is lack of ventilation. Frank Marquardt, of Ralph M. Ward & Co., agreed that the lilies are among the finest he has yet noted. It is still an open question here, whether grafted or own-root roses are preferable; both are grown with success.

Robert Klebert, of the Hoffman Greenhouses, Elmira, believes that Rosette is a profitable carnation to grow. It may be planted more closely than many kinds, is free and the calyx does not split. It brought a better price than any others this season. H. N. Hoffman finds time, amid his mayoral duties, to attend to his nursery and farms, which are increasing in extent. H. N., Jr., is taking a course in landscape work at Cornell, as the outlook for an efficient architect is favorable in this locality.

A. H. Woeppel, Corning, N. Y., was agreeably surprised at the popularity of the cyclamen as a holiday seller. Every plant in bloom was sold quickly and there were several hundreds. The vastly improved strain, both in flower and foliage, is undoubtedly the reason. Some fine plants that were left over are now going as fast as they bloom. The season has been a good one and preparations are seen on all sides for a heavy spring business.

Andrew Yeager, Allentown, Pa., will continue the business founded by his father, whose decease was recently noted. Mrs. Andrew Yeager, Jr., is a most able assistant.

D. W. Davis, Berwick, Pa., is getting his patrons in line for St. Valentine's day by having attractive reminders conspicuously placed. W. M.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

After two heavy snow storms during January, there came a most severe downfall February 2 and a beating rain, setting in February 5, caused the entire collapse of one of the American Beauty houses 350 feet in length at the Dale Estate. There were quite ten inches of snow on the glass before the rain came, but everything inside looked secure, and as the plants were being rested for the purpose of cutting them back in a week or two, no serious danger was feared. This is the first instance in which the Dale Estate has suffered through any of the houses giving way, and the mild weather at the end of the week it is hoped will enable the entire damage to be set right before the colder weather again sets in.

It is understood here that Messrs. O'Fields, at Grimsby, who are large growers of tomatoes, had about 800 feet of their houses broken in by the exceptionally heavy weight of snow.

Bulbous stock is being cut in large quantities and a great many of the smaller growers are disposing of their stock at prices never before heard of. Roses are off crop, but magnificent orchids are coming in so plentifully that they sell at from $5 to $20 per hundred.

Wm. Seatty, who has been with the Dale Estate for the last eight years, has almost recovered from his recent illness. Jovial William was deputy reeve for 1914, and last week resigned the position to accept the appointment as town assessor at a remunerative salary. W. G. P.

Mainly About People

Le Roy, Ill.—L. L. Fry, who has been spending the winter in California, is expected home shortly, so as to get his plants in shape by spring.

Des Moines, Ia.—L. Copeland, formerly employed in the greenhouses of the Iowa Seed Co., is recuperating after an operation in the Methodist hospital.

Waterloo, Ia.—Wm. Day, formerly employed in the greenhouses of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, is coming to work for Charles Sherwood as plantsman.

Detroit, Mich.—Charles H. Maynard has sold his interest and severed his connection with the Flower Growers' Corporation. He has not fully decided where he will locate, but will remain in the trade.

Cumberland, Md.—Russell C. Paupe has purchased the Flower Shop, at 53 North Liberty street, formerly conducted by Mrs. Katherine N. Bretz. The store will be in the charge of Miss Mabel Paupe, who has been connected with the Flower Shop for the last two years.

Lincoln, Ill.—Adolph Nielsen, of Morton Grove, Ill., has accepted a position as foreman of Gullett & Sons' new east side range and has moved to Lincoln, where his new duties began February 1. Gullett & Sons will plant quite largely of the newer varieties of roses at their new range and Mr. Nielsen will also be in charge of grafting a considerable part of the stock which is to be planted the coming spring at the new Gullett plant. Mr. Nielsen has been in charge of seventeen houses of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Plant B, Morton Grove, and also has been in charge of grafting operations there for several years.

Arkansas City, Kan.—F. W. Herleman, formerly of Marion, Ind., is now with Smith & Smith, having charge of the growing end of the business.

Maywood, Ill.—Henry Meyer, of the Weiss & Meyer Co., was married to Miss Frieda Hinz January 14. They left for a few days' visit to Sheboygan, Wis.

Gibson City, Ill.—Andrew Peterson has been engaged by the city of Hoopeston to buy trees and shrubbery for McFerren park, in that city, and he has been on a trip to Ohio to select the stock.

Newcastle, Ind.—Myer Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., is at New York on one of his buying trips for his mercantile interests. When in the metropolis he makes his headquarters at Hotel McAlpin.

Ottawa, Ill.—Lohr Bros., who for several years have been running the old King greenhouses and have established a nice city trade, have recently purchased several acres of ground opposite the entrance of the cemetery on the Starved Rock road just outside the city limits at the terminal of the city railway. They are preparing for the erection of a modern greenhouse plant consisting of two houses 35 x 150, with an attractive store and a spacious boiler and service house. It is their intention to run the new place in connection with their present establishment and their new glass area will be devoted mostly to cut flowers and bedding plants. The location is no doubt one of the finest for their purpose which could have been found in the city. The contract for the greenhouse work was awarded to the Ickes-Braun Mill Co., Chicago.

OBITUARY

Jesse E. Northrup.

Jesse E. Northrup, a former president of the American Seed Trade Association, founder of the seed firm of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., and for nearly thirty years manager of the business, died February 3, at his home, 1900 Emerson avenue, south, Minneapolis, at the age of 57 years. He was stricken with apoplexy two years ago and had never fully recovered.

He was born in Salem, Mich., December 1, 1857, the son of Elijah A. and Sarah (Brown) Northrup. His father was prominent in Michigan and was a state senator at the time of his death. Jesse attended Waterville Academy, Waterville, N. Y., and Hungerford Institute, Adams, N. Y. He entered business as a seedsman in 1879 and removed to Minneapolis in 1884, founding the wholesale seed house with which his name has been connected ever since. He retired from active participation in the business in 1912.

He was elected president of the American Seed Trade Association at the Rochester convention, June 11 to 13, 1901.

His interest in plant life and outdoor beautification led to his service on the park board. He was a commissioner from 1889 to 1895; from April, 1900, to January, 1901, and from January, 1903, to January, 1913, when he resigned on account of poor health. He was vice-president of the board from 1905 to 1907, and president from 1907 to 1909. Through a long part of his membership he was chairman of the improvements committee.

In his seventeen years of service as member of the board of park commissioners, he showed his appreciation of the natural advantages of the landscape by means of which it was possible to make Minneapolis one of the most beautiful cities in the world. One of the pioneers in the movement for intelligent acquisition and improvement of park territory, and of the upbuilding of connecting boulevards, he took a large part in the actual work that has resulted in the system today that has challenged the admiration of all visitors.

As a practical seedsman, he took a deep interest in originating and introducing valuable seeds suited to northern conditions. He was one of the earliest preachers of the possibilities of Minnesota as a corn state and he lived to see corn grown hundreds of miles north of its 1884 "farthest north" line.

Mr. Northrup was a Republican and a member of the Congregational church. Four children are living. They are a son, Edwin B. Northrup, now secretary of Northrup, King & Co., and three daughters, Mrs. Gerald Martin, and the Misses Isabel and Helen Northrup. Mrs. Northrup died several years ago.

Richard Groves.

Richard Groves, for fourteen years the owner of the Park Floral Co., at San Francisco, Cal., was struck by the Southern Pacific Stockton flyer Saturday night, January 30, at San Leandro, Cal., and was almost instantly killed. He was crossing the tracks during a rain storm, and his umbrella obstructed his view of the approaching train.

A brother, Frank R. Groves, in the florists' business in Oakland, Cal., was notified of the accident. After instructions had been received from the parents, at Atchison, Kan., the funeral services were held at Oakland Monday afternoon, February 1, and the body was placed in a receiving vault. Later, when the health of the parents permits, it will be taken to Atchison, to be interred in the family lot.

Mr. Groves was born in Atchison, Kan., January 23, 1870, where his father, R. J. Groves, is rounding out his fiftieth year in the florists' business. He went east to gain experience in special lines and opened up a business of his own in Topeka, where he remained four years. In 1903 he established the Park Floral Co., a retail concern, at 1437 Haight street, San Francisco, near the entrance to Golden Gate park. He gradually worked into the wholesale business, and closed out the business on Haight street several months ago in order to give his whole time to the wholesale end, in which he was engaged in San Leandro at the time of his death. He was secretary of the Haight and Ashbury Improvement Association, an organization of business men to work in behalf of the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Richard Groves.

John Meyer.

John Meyer, for fifteen years florist at the quartermaster's depot at Jeffersonville, Ind., is dead after two days' sickness, at Portland, Ore. He was 69 years old and a native of Germany.

Anthony W. Wonasek.

Anthony W. Wonasek, of Milwaukee, Wis., died January 17, after a long illness. He was 34 years old. For a time he was manager of the flower department of the Boston Store. Later he opened a retail store at 717 Grand avenue, under the name of the Flower Shop. He served his patrons personally until his last illness, when Mrs. Wonasek took charge. She is continuing the business, but hopes to dispose of it.

The Market.

We have had almost three weeks of continuously cloudy weather, something rather unusual, and its effect is felt especially in the cut flower market. The demand continues to be better than the supply. Roses are a little more plentiful, but carnations are scarce and have reached $4 per hundred, the top price this season for fancy stock. Valley has been selling poorly, and lilies, both rubrum and the Easter type, have been in little demand; even at reduced prices few sales were made. Violets have jumped from a glut a week ago to almost a scarcity during the latter part of last week, with a corresponding rise in prices. A good number of tulips are seen, of a much better quality than formerly. Golden Spur jonquils are also in good supply. The week's demand was mostly for standard stock, novelties not being much called for. There is a good supply of greens.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held February 8, Vice-president Hamilton in the chair. A motion to amend the by-laws was made, so that the nomination of candidates for office will be made at the meeting before election instead of making the nominations and holding the election both at the same meeting, as has been the custom. Action will be taken at the next meeting. It was decided to hold the annual banquet on the election night, as usual, and a committee consisting of I. H. Moss, James Boone and F. C. Bauer was appointed to make the arrangements. It was also decided to hold the nominations at the next meeting. Quite a number of members were in favor of increasing the annual dues so that more entertaining can be done for the members and their families.

Various Notes.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling a fine supply of cut myosotis.

Richard Vincent, Jr., has been on the go all over the state, lecturing before different clubs and organizations, and he spent this week on the "eastern sho'."

J. R. Dunkerly, of Dorsey, suffered a sad bereavement last week, losing his wife and young child after a short illness.

The Pennock-Meehan Co. put a new delivery car in service last week. This car was promised in time to take care of the Christmas trade, but was delayed in shipment from the factory.

Harry J. Quick, who has been ill, is slowly recovering, although not well enough to leave his room.

M. Hilpert expects to extend each of his houses fifty feet during the coming season. This will give him four houses, each 200 feet long.

Joseph Merritt is cutting some good Gorgeous carnations. W. F. E.

Ashtabula, O.—Faust & Lockwood, who formerly had their headquarters at 164 Main street, have moved across the street to 153 Main street. The new store has been remodeled and a plate-glass window installed.

The Review brings results.

CAN you count the buds on your lilies? Only six weeks to Easter.

THERE is no white carnation in sight that looks as though it is as good as Matchless.

Do you realize we are halfway from Christmas to Easter? High time to get busy with preparations.

WITH wheat selling above $1.60 per bushel it looks as though the middle west could afford a few geraniums in the front yard this spring.

COLLECTIONS have been slowing up. The business will no longer stand for the lax methods that once sufficed to turn a profit in this trade and it is necessary to watch credits closer and push collections harder.

FROM the quantity of advertising literature the trade is sending to The Review, it is apparent a greater effort than ever before is being made this week to interest the public in the use of flowers for valentines.

THIS is the month of Washington, who formed the Union; of Lincoln, who saved the Union, and of St. Valentine, who kindled lots of other unions; each helping those who help themselves, in this year of grace, to sell flowers.

SECRETARY YOUNG has this week distributed the proceedings of the thirtieth annual convention of the S. A. F. The volume runs to 348 pages and for the first time is freely illustrated, the views being those of the convention gardens of the last two years.

HOW LONG, O LORD, HOW LONG?

The other day a stranger handed a florist a check for $50 to make "a deposit" of $10 against an order. The flower man did not have $40, but offered to go out after change! "Never mind," said the stranger, "give me what you have; you can send the rest later." And the florist cleaned his cash drawer!

Which leads to the question: Did the faker figure the neighbors were some smarter than the florist; that the grocer might put him wise if he went out looking for change for the check of a stranger?

How long, O Lord, how long can that hoary swindle be worked on men in this trade? Will the day never come when small florists can distinguish between men they know and men they never saw before? Will repeated exposures of this petty swindle never teach the trade to "Stop, Look, Listen" and THINK when a total stranger asks cash change for a check?

LIABILITY FOR LEAKY MAINS.

Florists who are considering action against gas companies for loss of stock from gas escaping from mains will find of great value the article published in The Review December 25, 1913, reviewing court decisions in reference to the right of a florist to recover damages against a gas company for negligently permitting gas to escape from leaky mains and percolate through the ground into the florist's greenhouses and there kill or injure his stock. The law of liability in such cases is supported by a decision which has just been handed down by the Oregon Supreme court, in the case of Sharkey vs. Portland Gas & Coke Co., 144 Pacific Reporter 1152. This case involved recovery for the loss of shade trees caused by gas leaking from a main near by. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of the company, but the Supreme court reversed the decision, saying:

"Illuminating gas is a dangerous thing when it eludes control, and it is incumbent upon those who deal in it as an article of merchandise to use care commensurate with its harmful nature. Of course, the diligence must be such as an ordinarily prudent person would exercise under like circumstances in managing such an article. In brief, the care must be proportionate to the danger to be reasonably apprehended from the agency under consideration."

S.

FLORISTS AND PARCEL POST.

The parcel post has not proved of great value to florists—generally considered too slow and too rough.

For the shipment of supplies and for small quantities of cuttings and other stock that can be packed tightly enough to resist mailbag transportation and crushing, the parcel post is extremely useful, but not so much so for cut flowers or plants requiring quick service and careful handling.

The insurance feature of the parcel post is not what the trade wants; it covers loss, not damage. The special delivery feature is fine; it is of great service to retailers in the large cities. But the C. O. D. service does not seem to be understood by the trade. Parcels can be sent C. O. D. by mail the same as express and the trade could make important use of the service.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Winkler, Edward, Wakefield, Mass.

TWO YEARS.

Swan & Berndtson, Lawrence, Mass.
Glauner, Wm. J., Morton Grove, Ill.
Nellist, John F., Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

MARK YOUR VALUES.

A point of perhaps greater significance and importance than appears on the surface is brought up by the claim of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., consignee, against the American Express Co., growing out of the loss of a combined shipment of violets at Christmas. The loss was approximately $900, on violets from Rhinebeck, N. Y., which should have reached Pittsburgh December 24, but which were laid over twenty-four hours at Buffalo, the transfer point, and which therefore were too late for the Christmas trade.

The express company refuses to adjust the claim on the ground that no valuation was declared at the time the freight was receipted for by its agent. It seeks refuge in the ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission and in the interpretation of the law which has said a carrier is entitled to know in advance the value of anything for which it may later be held responsible.

If the express company persists in its attitude the matter will no doubt get into court, as the consignee believes it can prove gross negligence.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In this year of things military, probably we should say that the market performed a right-about-face toward the close of last week, as February 8 found conditions radically different from what they were seven days before. Dark, cold weather was one of the influences that caused supply to fall off sharply. But another strong factor was the passing off of the heavy crops of carnations which have been the rule so far this season. While roses are less plentiful than at any time heretofore this year, the principal change is on carnations. These are much less abundant. Prices are considerably stronger than they were. Splits are not now so much in evidence and the average quality of the carnations is excellent. Of course, with decreasing supplies there began to be a scrambling for stock, but the increase in demand was more apparent than real.

The dark weather has done serious damage to Killarney. There are not many short stems, but enough of the longest grade. While the buyers require few of the extra long stems, the stock in general is decidedly off color. The result is that the flowers are not making the prices they usually have under like conditions of shortage. The absence of Russell is explained by the statement that growers are busy propa-

FREESIA

IN HALF A DOZEN FANCY COLORS

THIS is a great seller—something entirely new. Think of it! Freesia in pink, lavender, bronze, variegated and a good clear yellow as well as pure white. These are new varieties (not the old yellowish white), not grown anywhere else. This is the second season we have handled them, and they have been a fine seller, for us and for our customers. We now have a large enough supply so we expect to be able to fill all orders.

Double—VIOLETS—Single

You will want a lot of good violets for corsages—especially now that they can be had at such moderate prices. Scarcely any limit to their sale if you push them. We have arranged for larger supplies than ever before. Single or double. Quality never better. Send your order today—then get busy selling.

JONQUILS

We lead the market, both for quality and quantity.

DAFFODILS

If you try our stock, you will be content with nothing else.

A splendid lot of Spencer Sweet Peas

VALLEY

We always have the best Valley in quantity.

gating it, and the same is true of Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant. Richmond is not so plentiful as it was, but there are one or two growers cutting good crops of Milady. It has been a long time since this market was so short of Beauties. The growers who are cutting any quantity are not fortunate enough to have good quality. The demand appears to have subsided with the decrease in supply and the deterioration in quality. Today more than ever before the Beauty growers are convinced that this rose no longer pays.

If anyone finds difficulty in getting roses or carnations, let him order violets. Last week prices were the lowest of the season. It is expected that there will be a first-class demand for St. Valentine's day, though no high prices are anticipated.

Bulbous stock of all descriptions is abundant. There are none too many good tulips, but there is an oversupply of poor flowers. Jonquils have become more than equal to the demand, but there is not yet any large quantity of daffodils. Paper Whites continue a glut. Freesia is more plentiful than ever before in this market, but is selling well. Easter lilies, for the moment, are in comparatively light supply. Callas are available, but are not in special request. Rubrums sell fairly well.

Perhaps as good a seller as anything is the Spencer type of sweet peas. The weather conditions have been such that the plants still are dropping the buds and the supply is not large. Such good stock as is received sells on sight. Stevia is making its final bow for the season.

The green goods situation remains practically without change. There is an abundance of everything in this line.

A New Loop Store.

Wm. Lubliner, who has a store in Milwaukee, has leased the vacant room at 36 South Wabash avenue, the rental being reported as $6,000 per year. It is almost exactly opposite the store of George Wienhoeber, recently conducted by Lubliner & Trinz, Harry Lubliner, of that firm, being a brother of the proprietor of the new venture. The location is excellent and affords facilities for a large business. It is understood the store will open about March 1.

Incidentally, the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street is becoming a retail flower store center. George Wienhoeber, John Mangel and the Bohannon Floral Co. are close at hand and A. Lange and the Alpha Floral Co. are only a block away, with several smaller stores in near-by basements.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The Chicago Florists' Club gave an old-fashioned smoker at the meeting February 4, at the Bismarck hotel. Clay pipes and an abundance of tobacco were furnished to the members. Early in the meeting, Reinhold Schiller suggested a novel means of promoting better acquaintance among those present. Starting with the president, W. J. Keimel, each person was introduced to his neighbors with the details as to what he is and where he belongs. This added much to the enjoyment of the evening and is to become an established custom. Edward Hunt favored the club with a vocal selection. He was accompanied by James Pollard.

In its report, the transportation committee stated it had conferred with representatives of different roads as to rates to San Francisco to attend the convention of the S. A. F., but the committee has reached no decision.

During the evening the following were elected to membership: Peter Bourman, 704 Garfield avenue; Albert Fuhrman, 2242 San Jose avenue; Edward Hunt, 5934 Winchester avenue; Abe Iralson, 356 East Forty-third street.

A committee was appointed to confer with a committee of the Cook County Florists' Association to see what action can be taken towards consolidating the two organizations. All further business was adjourned to the next meeting.

There were no exhibits at this meeting, but Chairman Michael Fink, of the good of the club committee, is making arrangements for exhibits for the next meeting.

Various Notes.

The wife of W. F. Martin, 609 East Fortieth street, who has been ill for several weeks, is sinking rapidly and the attending physicians hold out no hope of recovery. Two weeks ago Mrs. Martin was taken to the Wesley Memorial hospital, but the surgeons refused to operate, as they believed it useless. She is now at home.

John Zech says he finds no reason to complain of business, Zech & Mann's sales running ahead of a year ago, with St. Valentine's day and Mardi Gras both having provided a number of good advance orders for the next few days.

Bassett & Washburn are not so enthusiastic over Mrs. Russell rose as is the case with most of the growers who have tried it. They question its value as a midwinter variety. Nevertheless 10,000 or 12,000 will be planted next spring, with the idea of cutting while the cutting is good and then letting the houses stand cold until spring.

Don't be in a hurry to cash checks for a tall, blond man of good appearance who rides in a fashionable automobile. His method is to pose as a member of the entertainment committee of a well known business men's association. He asks the florists for an estimate on the cost of flowers for a banquet. He represents that he must secure the approval of the rest of the committee on this estimate. Later he returns, says the figures are satisfactory, and offers to make a deposit. He finds he has nothing but a check. The victim is supposed to hand over the change. This is a crude game and yet David Hammer, 2014 West Division street, lost $20 on it not long ago.

White roses are not grown for this market in anything like the numbers of pink, but P. C. Schupp and Wm. Homberg are well pleased with the Double White Killarney growing at the J. A. Budlong establishment. The stock came from the Rhode Island Budlongs, where it originated. Mr. Schupp says he thinks it the best white forcing rose in America today. It will be planted in considerable quantity for next season.

Fred Quasthoff, 812 East Forty-sixth street, has his eye on some adjoining vacant property. If the lease is made, he will use the additional space for hotbeds and coldframes. He believes bedding plants grown in them are much more hardy than those grown in the greenhouse.

To save as much as possible of the valley pips received via Holland in a started condition, Poehlmann Bros. Co. potted them up and sold them as pot plants when in bloom, in which guise they have moved well.

Harry C. Rowe says he is looking forward with pleasure to attending the International Flower Show to be held in New York beginning March 17.

That the carnation plants are making cuttings much more freely than was the case last year is the interesting comment of Emil Reichling, who is in charge of the growing end of the Peter Reinberg interests. It means that rooted cuttings and field-grown plants probably will be more abundant than in 1914.

M. B. Hirsch, 346 East Fifty-first street, is contemplating opening a stand in the loop district.

Dinger & Black, 211 East Garfield boulevard, are thinking about moving from their present stand to a more desirable one on the north side of the boulevard just west of the elevated road. Their present position, while attractive enough as a location, is in an old building in which the heating facilities are not well adapted to the florists' business.

Growers are visiting the carnation range of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, to have a look at Gorgeous. Nothing like it, either for size of flower or length and strength of stem, ever has been seen in these parts.

Charles H. Fisk has a new body on his White truck that makes it one of the most attractive cars on the west side streets.

Harry Friend, 108 East Fifty-first street, who has been in his present location five months, says business has not opened up as well as he expected. This, however, should be only a question of time, as he has a good stand and an attractive store.

George Wienhoeber has put in a large new icebox in the basement of his store, for the storage of stock. It was built by the H. G. Koellner Co. His display windows are attracting much attention.

W. H. Beaumont, who is one of the old-time employees in Chicago stores, went to Cleveland February 8 to take up his residence.

W. J. Keimel is at Hot Springs, Ark., for a month's outing.

John T. Muir used 3,000 valley in a casket cover for the Tilden funeral February 7.

Wietor Bros. have sixteen houses of White Killarney this season and twenty houses of Killarney, as well as two houses of Killarney Brilliant. The planting of the latter will be increased next season at the expense of the two older varieties.

Clifford Pruner is at home to give his game leg ten days' rest. He spent several weeks in calling on the trade through Iowa and Nebraska and says he found everybody doing first-class business.

The storage refrigerators in the store of Kennicott Bros. Co. have been relocated from the north side of the basement. With the moving of the stairway and the enlarged office space, the facilities will be the best the concern ever has had.

Miss Louise Malcher, who conducts a prosperous retail store on Division street, is ill with the grip.

F. O. Franzen has ordered a new Overland truck for delivery purposes.

The Meredith Flower & Vegetable Co., Libertyville, Ill., has begun shipping roses and carnations to O. A. Tonner.

W. H. Amling, of Maywood, was godfather at a christening at Milwaukee February 7.

Felix Reichling, store manager for Peter Reinberg, is doing a fortnight's term of jury service in the Municipal court.

The E. C. Amling Co. counts with confidence on a demand that will take up 300,000 violets for St. Valentine's day.

C. W. McKellar is on duty at his store this week, but has only partly recovered from his battle with the carbuncles.

The Profit From Withered Flowers

The withered flower problem has always been a loss to you—hasn't it? You never heard of it from a profit stand point before.

The profit that is possible from withered flowers is to sell the flowers before they spoil and are thrown out. This is easily done through their proper preservation in a

McCray Florist's Refrigerator

Here the flowers are preserved at an even temperature and are kept fresh and cool. No other refrigerating system is so efficient as the McCray. It stops the loss from spoilage so common with inadequate refrigeration.

In addition the McCray, with its beautiful plate glass doors and sides permits an inviting and attractive display of the flowers. The compartments are of different sizes to accommodate the various lengths of stems.

The outside woodwork may be had in any finish to match your store's interior. The linings may be secured in either plate mirror or white enamel and are very attractive.

Make up your mind right now to increase your business and decide upon a McCray Refrigerator to help you do it. Every enterprising Florist needs a McCray. Write and learn why.

of roses and carnations, as they are the principal beneficiaries.

Winterson's Seed Store reports the orders for florists' flower seeds unusually numerous this season.

Erne & Klingel predict smilax will be an especially good seller as the spring openings come along.

Oscar Metz, 5525 Harper avenue, reports business good, but collections slow.

For three years Chicago florists have been using insecticides made by Fred A. Zenke, who now has progressed far enough so that he is undertaking national distribution of his products.

The retailers' association is working on a plan for coöperative buying that will be the special subject for consideration at the next meeting.

The present proprietor of the Louis Dreher place at Deerfield, Ill., is Wm. G. Gaddis, a Chicago lawyer who purposes to run the 6,000 feet of glass for a profit. The place was for some time owned by Witthoefft Bros.

Joe Dunn, an old-timer in the trade, is now with William F. Schofield, 734 North State street.

Among the visitors in the market last week were C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, and J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y., the latter on his way to the Pacific coast.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Trade has been rather quiet during the last two weeks, yet considerable business has been done. Transient trade is poor.

Jonquils, daffodils and tulips are plentiful, and there is a vigorous demand for them. Bulbous stock in pots is selling well, and azaleas, cyclamens and primroses come second on the list of desirables.

The cold, dark weather of last week made roses scarce, and consequently the prices are up just now. My Maryland, Killarney, White Killarney, Taft, Ward and Milady are all good. Cecile Brunner is in demand. Orchid sweet peas are extra fine and sell well, having preference over the common sweet peas. Cattleyas are overabundant and are used in general work, for corsages, etc. Carnations seem to sell better than any flowers at this writing; Perfection, Enchantress Supreme, Ward and Beacon all are of good quality.

Asparagus, leucothoe sprays, hardy ferns and bronze and green galax are all plentiful and good.

Palmer & Son had a bowling match with the greenhouse force from Lancaster Saturday night, January 30. The greenhouse men were confident they had the best bowlers, but the store team won by a high score. Ed Slattery, of the store force, has a famous ball of his own called the coca-cola ball. Unfortunately, it did not work well that night and so did not add much to the high score of the store force.

FROM THE CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

THE GENUS IRIS
By WILLIAM RICKATSON DYKES
With Forty-eight Colored Plates and Thirty Line Drawings in the Text.

This magnificent work brings together the available information on all the known species of Iris. The account of each includes references to it in botanical literature and a full description of the plant, together with observations on its peculiarities, its position in the genus, its value as a garden plant and its cultivation.

The most striking feature of the book is the forty-eight life sized colored plates, reproduced from originals drawn from living plants—making it a volume of remarkable beauty as well as of great scientific importance.

246 pages, demi-folio, half morocco, $37.50; postage extra (weight 11 lbs. 9 oz.)

The Florists' Review: If anything else could be added to the book that would really increase its beauty or its scientific value or its practical utility, the present reviewer is curious to know what that addition could be.

unusual beauty, attractive cinerarias, excellent primroses, well grown pans of Keizerskroon tulips, splendid lilac trees and fragrant, crisp freesias growing in pots.

St. Valentine's day is drawing near, and Joseph Sangster has a timely window display of an immense heart done in red. On the floor space are attractive heart boxes and corsage boxes in fancy wrappings.

F. J. Keller and the head decorator, John Vollmer, of J. B. Keller Sons, Rochester, were in town February 3, to decorate the tables for the Wickser-Fryer wedding. Teal, the caterer, of Rochester, usually has J. B. Keller Sons do the table decorating where he serves.

J. Benson Stafford had much of the funeral work for the Perren funeral February 5. February 2 he had a Japanese decoration for a ball at Niagara Falls, N. Y. A Japanese garden contained the punch bowl and the lemons and oranges were cut into goldfish shapes. Japanese laurel, lanterns and parasols completed the decoration, and those in charge of the affair wore Japanese costumes.

The Wickser-Fryer wedding was simple, but the decorations were rich and elegant. The church was decorated with white roses and polypodium ferns. Large White Killarney roses were used near the chancel in front of a bank of palms. Several hundred valley were used on the altar with Farleyense ferns. W. J. Palmer & Son did the work.

David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is marketing some excellent orchid sweet peas.

F. Howe, who has been suffering from neuritis of the optic nerve for about a year, was taken to the hospital February 3 and died February 5. The funeral was held Monday, February 8. Mr. Howe had been chauffeur for W. J. Palmer & Son for some time.

At the last meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club the following were nominated for office: President, Robert Scott; vice-president, David Seymour and Fred Kull; financial secretary, Oliver Klinglemeyer; recording secretary, William Legg; treasurer, Emil Brucker. The next meeting is to take place the first Tuesday in March, when the election of officers will be held and an excellent entertainment will be given. E. C. A.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Narcissus Golden Spur is the central figure on the floral stage today; it is good, reasonable and plentiful. The result is probably the largest trading in the history of this popular flower so early in its season. It really seemed as though all the shipping orders and all the local orders included Spurs. The market is fastidious; Trumpet Major won't do. Flowers from Guernsey-grown bulbs are accepted under protest; it must be the genuine Holland stock, well grown, to please. Fortunately, the stock is superb and the buyers consequently are happy.

The market is in pretty fair condition, thanks mainly to the excellent out-of-town demand. Local business has been only moderate. The storm had its effect on shopping, but the cities that call on this market for some of their flowers have taken large shipments, balancing supply and demand nicely. Roses, except Beauties and Russell, are more plentiful; the medium and short are most sold. Carnations have on many days been scarce, although the supply is quite large; the effect is to make prices firmer without advancing them. Sweet peas of the Spencer type are coming in more freely now, when the sun shines, and some of the best are bringing a higher price than last week, thanks to their improved quality. Violets have moved up a little in price, especially the doubles, although they still are low. Lilac has declined to $1 a bunch and seems good value at that figure. Easter lilies and callas are not plentiful; prices firm. Bulbous flowers are selling well when good. Forget-me-not is arriving more freely in anticipation of St. Valentine's day.

ROSE PLANTS

OPHELIA

the rose without a fault. "Good if you can grow it" does not apply to this variety. ANYONE CAN GROW IT. Fall in line and buy the best on the market. This new Rose might be briefly described as a glorified Taft, having more yellow. The bud is yellow before opening and after opening it blends into a beautiful coral pink. Very vigorous growth with but few thorns; very free bloomer and is not subject to ordinary disease.

Own root .....$12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000
Grafted ..... 17.50 per 100; 150.00 per 1000
Large quantity for February and later delivery.

MRS. MOORFIELD STOREY

has a strong upright growth, very few thorns, large, handsome, dark-green foliage, particularly free from disease, a very free bloomer; flowers are of good size and substance, with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is shell pink, deepening toward the center; large, smooth petals tipped deep rose.

Own root .....$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000
Grafted ..... 35.00 per 100; 300.00 per 1000
Grafting eyes.... 27.00 per 100; 220.00 per 1000

MRS. CHAS. RUSSELL

During the past season the demand for plants of this new Montgomery rose far exceeded the supply. Be on the safe side and place your order at once.

Grafted .....$15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000
Own root ..... 10.00 per 100; 90.00 per 1000
Limited quantity of own root.

FOR EARLY DELIVERY

GEORGE ELGAR (Golden Midget)

In the "Sweetheart" class, except as to color, which is a lovely dark golden yellow. Has more petals than "Sweetheart"; bears its foliage close to the bud.

Very free bloomer. Requires a temperature of 60-64, with liberal watering.

Grafted .....$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000
Own root ..... 20.00 per 100; 180.00 per 1000

HOOSIER BEAUTY (Dorner)

New Red Rose

As fragrant as Richmond; stiffer stems; glowing crimson with darker shadings; fine velvety texture and good substance. Very free-blooming—in fact, so productive that it is already recognized as a great commercial rose.

Mignonette is almost the only flower that is in oversupply, although violets and valley drag at times. The sale of Paper Whites has improved a little, at firmer prices.

The Florists In Belgium.

I am indebted to J. D. Eisele, vice-president of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., for reading me a letter from one of his Belgian correspondents, which is given from memory. It was dated last month, from Ghent.

Your kind letter of December 11 reached me safely and I will endeavor to reply to your inquiries as fully as I can without incurring the risk of this letter being held by the censor. The war has not affected us so much as we feared, or as you in America might suppose. On the day before the Allies left, the British and French ran their trenches almost to my nursery. When they retreated many of our florists ran away. This proved to be a mistake, as we were not molested by the Germans and in a few days our florists returned and resumed their regular work. All the necessities of life have advanced in price. Coal, which was $5.60 a ton (the figures are given in American money for convenience), is now $8 a ton. The difference is caused by the taxes laid on the city of Ghent to pay the war indemnity and by the German government. Bread, oil, etc., have advanced in about the same proportion. The bread is now so bad that I cannot eat it for breakfast. There are plenty of men to do the work in the greenhouses; in fact, all my regular men are here. As we are running the houses cool to save coal, I could readily get along without some of them, but as I do not like to do this, we are working them all eight hours a day. The chief sufferers are the small landlords, for nobody pays rent now. The moderately well off have no more money than the poor; in fact, money is the scarcest thing here. Many of our florists have destroyed part of their stock and all of them are carrying their houses at as low a temperature as they dare. I cannot tell what the market conditions will be next spring, but I think there will be a good supply of palms and azaleas at moderate prices and that the araucarias will be scarce. I am trying to keep up my courage and am doing my best and hoping for better things.

Magnolia Wreaths

These wreaths, made in standard sizes in our own factory, while of finest quality, are moderate in price. We want every florist to order a pair of each size for trial.

Various Notes.

The March meeting of the Florists' Club, to be held in the clubroom at Horticultural hall, Broad and Locust streets, Tuesday evening, March 2, will be devoted to carnations. Growers of new or meritorious varieties are requested to favor the club with blooms for exhibition. They should be sent to David Rust at the above address, timed to arrive not latter than 6 p. m. on the day of the meeting. Edmund A. Harvey, of Alban Harvey & Sons, Brandywine Summit, will deliver an address on carnations at this meeting.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., was here last week. He called on Edward Towill, Hillside, to see his fine Hadley roses.

A representative of the Livingston Seed Co., of Columbus, O., was here recently.

Henry M. Weiss & Sons are cutting heavily of their fine carnations at Hatboro, Pa.

The M. Rice Co. worked overtime five nights last week on the valentine orders.

Max H. Rothe, of Mt. Airy, has put a fine car on the street.

Jos. G. Neidinger is making extensive preparations for sending out his original made-in-America baskets that will replace in great measure the imported stock.

A. B. Cartledge regrets the disappearance of Mrs. Jardine, one of the most satisfactory roses he has ever received.

Edward Reid visited Secane this week and saw a perfect sheet of buds and bloom in Mrs. Sarah I. Smith's carnation houses.

The Johnson Seed Co. reports activity in poultry supplies.

H. Bayersdorfer said with a chuckle: "We are working overtime every day; the clock is on the third floor, our workroom on the fourth." His firm is receiving heavy Easter imports of bas-

DENVER.

The Market.

The supply of roses and carnations has shortened, but there is still enough good stock to fill all orders. The Spencer varieties of sweet peas are good and finding a ready market. Narcissi, jonquils, tulips and daffodils are plentiful and in good demand. Violets and valley are still in good supply and the quality is excellent. Other offerings include callas, Easter lilies, freesias and mignonette. Geen goods are in good supply.

Pans of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils are selling well. The shipping out of town continues good in both cut flowers and plants. This branch of the business is steadily increasing. Prospects for a good St. Valentine's day business are excellent.

Various Notes.

Among the visitors last week were C. U. Fohn, of Colorado Springs; Mrs. F. A. Haenselman, of Boulder, and George Fleischer and son, of Pueblo.

Charles Benson is cutting some extra fine Hadley roses.

Emil Glauber was in New York recently, where he was called by the serious illness of his father.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Market.

There has been a slight improvement in general business conditions during the last week. Selling is somewhat easier. This may be accounted for in part by the fact that stock is not plentiful.

Carnations have shortened up considerably, and prices have advanced accordingly. The stock is of good quality, despite the fact that for about two weeks there has been no sunshine whatever. There is not enough of this stock to admit of liberal selling, and the supply is entirely exhausted each day. The percentage of splits is small.

Roses are not plentiful; in fact, such varieties as Russell, Ophelia, Hadley, Taft, Sunburst and Richmond are extremely scarce. Some of the varieties are being propagated heavily, and others are badly off crop. Killarney and White Killarney are the most plentiful varieties, but they are not in sufficient supply to take care of all orders. Prices are somewhat higher than heretofore, but are not yet what they should be.

Double violets are plentiful and of good quality. They do not move so well as single ones, however. Singles, on the other hand, are not nearly so plentiful. Sweet peas are in fair supply, and some exceptionally fine butterfly stock is being disposed of at reasonable prices. Spring stock is moving well and, as a whole, is of good quality. Valley sales are slow. The stock is not quite up to standard quality.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club held February 4 in the new quarters of Kurtz Bros., 31 State street, was preceded by a chicken supper, to which the large number present did full justice and which reflected great credit upon the newly appointed entertainment committee, consisting of Walter Halliday, Nic Zweifel and A. Hare. The main topic of discussion during the meeting was that of newspaper advertising for St. Valentine's day. Arthur Leidiger, chairman of the press committee, reported that all those approached were highly in favor of the plan to run a good sized advertisement, which, in order to give it more prestige, should be signed by the Milwaukee Florists' Club. This is the first venture of its kind ever undertaken by the club, and it is hoped that the results will lead to greater interest and coöperation along this line in the future.

The state fair committee of 1914 will serve again this year. J. Livingston, C. C. Pollworth and H. V. Hunkel are the members, with the latter as chairman.

Various Notes.

Monday, February 1, this section of the country was visited by what the weather bureau calls the worst storm in twenty years. Although the wind reached a fearful velocity, no casualties have been reported from greenhouses. No stock whatever was received from outside the city for over two days, and the trade had to do with little stock for a while. Telegraphic and telephone communication was completely cut off and mail service was worse than useless.

Wm. Lubliner, who for about two years has had a store in the Plankinton block, 123 Grand avenue, is about to open a store in Chicago. Mr. Lubliner will still maintain his Milwaukee establishment, which will be managed by his brother, while he devotes his attention to the new place in Chicago. The store will be opened March 1 at 36 South Wabash avenue, in the Windsor Clifton hotel block. The firm of Lubliner & Trinz will have no interest in this business, according to Mr. Lubliner.

January 17 the trade lost one of its active workers in Anthony W. Wonasek, who died after a long illness. See this week's obituary column.

C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, visited the trade February 1. H. J. S.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

The Market.

The cut flower market last week, as far as demand is concerned, was great. Stock was scarce all the week, and it looks as though all the consignors to this market are off crop. Prices have been high. The wholesalers have cleaned up nicely since the scarcity began. The market this week opened with a big demand, as, retailers say, society is crowding in its social events before the Lenten season begins, and considerable stock will be needed to supply these affairs. There was only a fair supply of roses and carnations on the market last week. The majority of the stock, however, was of extra good quality. Beauties are of fine color, extra fancy bringing $5 per dozen. The light shipments of Killarney, Ward and Richmond brought top prices. Carnations, too, brought prices which topped $4 per hundred. The light colors were cleaned up daily at these prices. Sweet peas and violets were not in as heavy demand. These, too, shortened in supply. Paper Whites, Romans, tulips, jonquils, valley and Easter lilies sold well. The supply in these was not short by any means. Asparagus again is plentiful, also smilax and other greens.

Various Notes.

As the groundhog did not see his shadow February 2, believing that the backbone of winter is broken, the local seed houses have sent out their spring catalogues. All are busy preparing for an early spring rush.

The Bourdet Floral Co., at Magnolia and Tower Grove avenues, has a splendid lot of blooming bulbous plants. Its stock of plants for Easter is in fine shape. A great supply of lilies is expected this season.

All our carnation growers in Kirkwood, Olivette and Clayton were more than pleased when it was announced that the American Carnation Society would hold its next meeting in St. Louis. A considerable number say they will become members of the society when the meeting is held here.

Edgar Sanders and Ernest Heutchel, who have charge of the Sanders Nurseries, on the Henley road, have the greenhouses in excellent shape for Easter-blooming plants and spring bedding stock.

Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, stopped here a few days last week on his way east. He paid his respects to the local trade. Mr. Zirkman reports trade in his line good, especially in the firm's new basket novelties.

Carl Sampson, foreman for the John T. Milliken plant, at Crescent, Mo., has resigned his position there. Chas. Handel, formerly of Mt. Clemens, Mich., is now foreman at the place. Mr. Sampson has taken charge of the John D. Davis estate, in this county.

The Hoffmeister Floral Co., of Cincinnati, O., is sending a fine cut of Easter lilies to this market, which are being handled by H. G. Berning. The clean, large blooms sell on sight.

Hoffmann, as several customers called for Mr. Von Hoffmann over the phone last week. He is much taken by his new title.

J. F. Ammann, vice-president-elect of the American Carnation Society, stopped over on his way home from the convention at Buffalo and reported a fine show and a most pleasant time with all old acquaintances and many new ones.

The A. Brix Floral Co., on St. Louis avenue, reports an unusually heavy demand for funeral work last week, although in other lines it is somewhat slow.

W. C. Young, Jr., and Miss Gertrude Worland were married February 9 at the home of the bride. Mr. Young says they will spend their honeymoon at New Orleans during the Mardi Gras.

The Japanese monkeys displayed in the show windows of Waldbart's, on Grand avenue, are great drawing cards. Crowds are constantly gathering in front of the windows wondering what the monkeys are made of.

Wensel & Hecht, of Anglum, Mo., are consigning an excellent cut of fancy butterfly sweet peas, which demand top prices, to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

Geo. H. Angermueller has been handling large shipments of carnations in the last week. The supply shipments to the southwestern trade have been quite large lately.

The consignments of roses to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., from W. J. Pilcher and Werner Bros., are of fine quality. At present the crop is short, but they expect to be in full crop the next two days.

Paddy Patton's latest groundhog poem:

The backbone of winter is broken,
The groundhog has given a token;
Full soon we can sing
Of the flowers in spring,
And the crocus will shortly be croakin'.

The following suburban florists were seen in the wholesale district last week: H. Wensel, Geo. Hecht, W. J. Pilcher, Hugo Werner, J. F. Ammann, John BOSTON.

The Market.

After a severely cold and almost sunless week, we are experiencing weather somewhat suggestive of spring, and flowers, which had been in rather short supply in some cases, are arriving more abundantly. Business was only fair last week and, had receipts not been light, the surplus would have been heavy. Prices, on the whole, are fairly well maintained.

Roses have declined a little, especially on short stems; such as had been bringing $4 now go at $2 and $3. Special American Beauties have made $8 and $10 per dozen and have cleaned up without any trouble. Ophelia on 24-inch stems has made $20 per hundred. There is a wonderful demand for this rose. Mrs. Ward is somewhat scarce, but Sunburst is in better supply. Killarney Queen is coming in good, as is Russell. Prince d'Arenberg and Cardinal are two red roses which are showing up nicely. White roses have been somewhat scarce and last week cleaned up easily.

Carnations are of grand quality; I have never seen finer flowers in the Boston market. Especially fine are White Wonder, Matchless, Benora, Beacon, Champion, Mrs. Ward, Pocahontas, Princess Dagmar, Pink Delight and Gorgeous. Prices are not what they ought to be. Violets are low and seem to have lost favor. A better call is likely for St. Valentine's day. Sweet peas, mostly Spencers, are abundant and good. Tulips and narcissi of about every variety grown inside are now procurable. Some anemones and ranunculi give a suggestion of spring.

Freesia is abundant and cheap. Lilies and callas are both abundant. Valley has been selling fairly well. Yellow marguerites continue to sell as well as anything. Cattleyas and gardenias make $4 per dozen for the best. Quite a number of dendrobes, phalænopsis and cypripediums are obtainable.

Various Notes.

Galvin's new store on Park street opened February 5. It is unique in many particulars and unquestionably one of the most up-to-date flower stores in the country. The Galvin concern has been doing business in Boston for sixty-eight years. The new store is hardly a stone's throw from the old one. The decorative scheme throughout is pleasing. Italian seats are scattered through the store for the benefit of customers. A large fountain in the center of the circular case, which fronts on the street, with show windows on either side, is a pleasing feature. Aquatics float in the pool of water. A bed of Farleyense surrounds the pool, while two beautiful standard acacias rise on either side. It has been necessary to increase the staff since moving to the new store.

E. H. Wilson arrived in Boston a few days ago, with his wife and daughter, after a year spent in plant collecting in southern and western Japan. Mr. Wilson had a successful trip. He secured some new trees and shrubs and many fine garden forms not yet in commerce here.

mingo, King of the Yellows, Couronne d'Or, La Reine, White Hawk and Murillo. They had their first shipments of Narcissus poeticus ornatus February 4. They also have double Von Sions, princeps, Golden Spur and other daffodils.

Carnation Miss Alice Coombs is looking grand with Albert Roper, of Tewksbury. Since he decided not to introduce the variety this season he has received numerous orders for cuttings. Coombs so far has hardly thrown a split flower. Grace, a salmon pink, is a free bloomer. Plants have averaged from eight to ten flowers each so far this season on the new seedling No. 316, which qualified for the Dorner competition in 1916.

Frank P. Putnam, of Tewksbury, is the earliest in the market with anemones in quantity. His carnations are as fine as ever, especially Pocahontas, Pink Delight, Philadelphia, Rosette, Champion, Matchless and White Wonder.

The annual carnation and novelty night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held February 16. There will be an imposing display of both novelties and standard varieties. S. J. Goddard, Peter Fisher and other specialists will give short talks on various phases of carnation culture. All flowers shipped to Horticultural hall, Boston, will be well cared for.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held at the New American House, March 10. Tickets are limited to 300 and can be secured from officers of the club or at the meeting February 16.

James Petros, formerly one of the partners in a store on Huntington avenue near Clarendon street, now is located on Huntington avenue near Massachusetts avenue and has a well equipped and attractive store.

The Montrose Greenhouses are having a nice cut of roses. Their leaders are Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, Richmond, Sunburst, Ward and Russell.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, is succeeding extra well with both double and single violets this season. His carnations are also looking well. He sells a large proportion of his cut in Lawrence and other nearby cities.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., are sending in a fine lot of Richmond, Killarney Queen, Crimson Queen and Mlle. Cecile Brunner roses.

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, has as fine carnations as come into the Boston market. He made his first exhibit at Buffalo and captured several firsts.

Frank Emery, of Reading, is sending in fine single violets. He also has good Pink Delight, Beacon and White Wonder carnations.

J. M. Ruane, of Waltham, is one of the largest shippers of Paper White and Golden Spur narcissi.

Penn is advertising heavily in all the leading Boston dailies for Valentine's day and is preparing for a record business.

Thomas Roland is now getting a great cut of winter Spencer sweet peas at Revere. February 6 he had 10,000. His big new house will be planted with tomatoes this week. It will probably be devoted to roses when the flower business braces up. From Nahant he is getting a nice lot of cattleyas, dendrobiums and oncidiums.

The Houghton-Gorney Co. reports trade as quite good. Camellias sell well, both cut and in pots and tubs, some nice plants averaging six feet in height.

The W. W. Edgar Co. grows 5,000 Pride of Haarlem tulip this season and has quantities of pans on the market well flowered. This proves the best Darwin for forcing purposes.

William H. Elliott says the severe snow storms had no effect on his houses at Madbury, N. H. It was February 22, 1914, that one partially collapsed. At present Ward roses are a little scarce with him, but Sunburst is more abundant. He has a fine cut of Killarney Queen, Hadley, Killarney, White Killarney, Mlle. Cecile Brunner and the single Irish roses.

The J. A. Budlong & Son Co., in addition to remarkable American Beauties, has Ophelia in quantity, sometimes over 1,000 daily. Mock is fine, as are Cardinal, Maryland and Sunburst. It is a pity this grower never exhibits. I hope the company will see its way to staging some of its fine flowers at the coming rose convention here.

W. N. C.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a good deal of rain and snow, and in the early part of last week the trade suffered some inconvenience from the high river, which flooded the cellars of the wholesalers and some of the downtown retailers. Stocks of roses and carnations are short of the demand and prices have stiffened. Bulbous stock is plentiful and good. Beauties are so scarce that they do not figure in the market. Lilies continue scarce. The wholesale houses clean up every day on everything except bulbous stock and orchids. They seem to enjoy this, as it is the first time since last fall that the supply has not exceeded the demand. The retail stores all seem to have a good deal of funeral work and the counter trade is on the increase, but large decorations are scarce.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club February 2 was one of the most interesting the club has ever held.

The exhibits of plants and flowers from J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, were shown by Mr. Peterson, Jr. There was a fine lot of begonias.

Earl Mann, representing the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., showed Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia and Alice Stanley roses.

Walter James, gardener for Mrs. Hilliard, showed two plants of Dendrobium nobile.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. had one plant of Cœlogyne cristata.

Thomas Tyler, gardener for Charles Armstrong, showed a plant of double Primula malacoides.

The committee on awards consisted of Fred Burki, E. H. Blind and William Falconer. They presented the following report:

Rose Hoosier Beauty, from E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—A magnificent rose, with long, stiff stems and crimson-scarlet flowers; firm neck; deliciously fragrant, with an excellent record of good forcing, free-blooming qualities. A first-class certificate.

Rose Lady Alice Stanley, from E. G. Hill Co.—A bright, Maryland-pink rose; full heads, fine foliage, good stems. Highly commended.

Rose Ophelia, from E. G. Hill Co.—A very lovely Enchantress-pink rose; one of the best and most profitable roses ever distributed by our florists; it has been widely tried and the behavior has been excellent; the specimens submitted for our consideration are superb. Highly commended.

Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson, from J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.—A very deep red-pink, splendidly flowered and promising highly as one of the best of the type; as a Christmas begonia it surpasses everything else in this class of begonias. First-class certificate.

Begonia Melior, from Peterson & Sons—One of the finest of all the pink begonias, superior to Cincinnati, and has given great satisfaction wherever grown. Highly commended.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, from Peterson & Sons—Very finely growing small plants; exceedingly free-flowering. Highly commended.

Cyclamen Persicum giganteum, from Peterson & Sons—A very fine white-flowered specimen. Cultural certificate.

Cœlogyne cristata, from Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh—Finely flowered specimen. Cultural certificate.

Dendrobium nobile, Walter James, gardener, Pittsburgh—Two finely flowered plants in 4-inch pots. Cultural certificate.

Primula malacoides, T. Tyler, gardener, Pittsburgh—A small plant in good bloom, and showing double flowers.

An illustrated talk on radium and the use of radio-active earth, by Emil Kraft, Ph. D., was one of the most instructive and interesting ever given before the club. Dr. Kraft represents the Radio Chemical Co. He took us, with his illustrations, from the mountains in Colorado, where the radium ore is mined, through all the processes of extracting the radium, and gave examples of some of the wonderful properties of radium. He then turned attention to the radio-active earth, showing many pictures of the experiments in the production of plants and flowers as well as field crops. The radio-active earth is not a fertilizer, but an agitator, in that it causes the fertilizer to be much more effective where it is used. Dr. Rose and Dr. Gardner, of Pitt College, then told of the establishing of a department of phytochemistry in that college, and of some of their experiments. Probably at the next meeting they will have some interesting exhibits and give us more information on their work.

T. P. Langhans reported from Buffalo a delightful time and a fine exhibition, and that the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. secured four prizes out of five entries.

An interesting talk by Earl Mann about his roses and their medal-winning carnation, Alice Coombs, which is to be sent out next year, closed a delightful evening.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been showing some fine azaleas, which, with lilacs and a few bulbous flowers, make an effective window.

The A. W. Smith Co. has been making a specialty of basket effects in the windows, using a great many orchids in variety.

Ed Weaver arranged a window for Randolph & McClements after the style of the old fancy paper valentine. It contained a paper border and a big red heart, set well back. Inside of the valentine, which occupied the whole window, were small baskets, corsage bouquets and other arrangements of flowers that are used for St. Valentine's day. Clarke.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

We are at the height of the season and business among the retailers is quite satisfactory. The last week was a busy one for the caterers to the daily social functions, and to this class of business was added the work for several prominent weddings and funerals. The stock of some of the florists was well cleaned out. The beginning of the carnival festivities, February 16, is fast approaching, and up to that day the general demand for cut flowers and plant decorations will be on a steady increase. Hundreds of prominent visitors from all over the country have arrived for the coming festivities, and, naturally, hardly anything can be done in their honor without the aid of the florist.

Locally grown cut flowers at present are limited mostly to bulbous stock, with some orchids and valley. The small-flowering violets are in full bloom outdoors, but the trade in them is mostly in the hands of the street venders. Begonias, cyclamens, azaleas, etc., still constitute the supply of flowering plants, the sale of which has been somewhat better of late. Palms, ferns and other foliage stock are moving slowly.

At last the weather, which has been abominable for the last five weeks, seems to be clearing up and it is hoped the bright days will continue for at least the coming two weeks, so that the carnival festivities, which mark the end of the social season, may be thoroughly enjoyed by all. R. E.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

CERTAIN canners are seeking buyers for a part of the peas taken on 1914 contracts.

RALPH M. WARD, of New York, is visiting the trade in the Pacific northwest.

THE board of customs appraisers at New York has granted a rehearing of the protest of C. D. Soule in the matter of weight of seeds.

THE Scott Seed Co., of Greensboro, N. C., has been incorporated by W. C. McLean, Clarence Scott and Ben C. Scott. The authorized capital stock is $25,000.

THE seed trade should be able to make important use of the C. O. D. feature of the parcel post: "Send no money; pay your postman when he delivers the parcel."

IN spite of the various embargoes by the warring nations, the seeds have come along nicely. Most of the German, French and English imports have been received.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Jesse E. Northrup, founder of the seed business of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

INDUSTRIAL depression ordinarily means an especially good seed season. When people are flush they do not plant so many gardens as when there is a relatively large percentage of unemployment.

WHILE a number of leading houses issued their catalogues in December or early January as usual this season, the end of January and the first few days of February brought the bulk of the books.

SENATOR CRAWFORD, of South Dakota, has presented to the United States Senate a petition of the J. Chas. McCullough Seed Co., of Cincinnati, advocating legislation for the grading and inspection of grain.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has scheduled for hearing at Minneapolis March 8, before Examiner J. E. Smith, the lake and rail rates on seeds and grain products from Minneapolis and other points to Buffalo and other destinations.

H. W. KOERNER, Milwaukee, Wis., has changed the name of the new single dahlia which he disseminated as Snowflake, now calling it Koerner's White, for the reason that there is another Snowflake previously disseminated. He

To Our Friends

Members of the Seed Trade in U. S. A.

WE CANNOT OVERLOOK THE FACT THAT sympathy with Britain has been freely and spontaneously exhibited in our own mails from neutral countries; nor can we refrain from the expression of thanks and gratitude which we hereby most heartily tender on behalf of our country, and particularly of the thirty of our staff who have volunteered for the front and joined the colors.

THOUGH ABSOLUTELY BRITISH, we do not wish to say anything that would add in the smallest degree to feelings brought into existence in any quarter by the war; but we may quite fairly draw your attention to the fact that you will find us fully equipped, as Wholesale Growers and Merchants, with all the seeds and strains you may heretofore have obtained through German or other houses. It will not be necessary to state that the quality will in no way be found to be inferior; that our prices will be found favorable will be discovered by perusal of our Price Lists.

THE CANNERS' CONVENTION.

The great national convention of the canners' and allied associations is being held this week at New York and the attendance is estimated at 5,000. The Machinery and Supplies Association, of which W. C. Langbridge, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., is president, has staged its exhibition in the Grand Central Palace, the mezzanine floor being devoted largely to seedsmen's exhibits. These are made by:

J. H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis., peas; represented by E. M. Parmalee, W. B. Lucas, T. Hopkins.

Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, a general assortment of seeds for canners, the specialty being Leonard's Narrow Grain Evergreen corn; represented by J. C. Leonard, Wm. Sutherland and A. J. Coleman.

Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., a general line of seeds for canners; represented by W. C. Langbridge and Charles Guelph.

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., tomato seed; represented by J. Springer.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, tomatoes, peas and corn; represented by R. J. Bowen and Vincent Hedeman.

Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., beans, peas, corn and beets; represented by Arthur B. Clark, Fred M. Clark and Earl F. Adams.

D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., booth space only; represented by Theo. Cobb and C. B. Coe.

Hogg & Lytle, Toronto, Ont., peas; represented by J. H. Hogg and J. F. Garfat.

D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., tomatoes, featuring Delaware Beauty; represented by Philip Landreth, P. M. Minster, John A. Hicks, O. V. Spedden, David Landreth and Capt. Burnet Landreth.

S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., corn, beets and peas; represented by Frank Woodruff.

F. H. Woodruff & Son, Milford, Conn., corn and beans; represented by H. F. Woodruff.

The program for the meetings, held at the Astor House, is long and varied, but of little interest to the trade except for the fact that W. C. Langbridge, as president of the Supplies Association, plays a prominent part.

IRRIGATED PEAS.

It appears that the pack of low grade peas was rather larger last season than usual and some of the canners are inclined to blame the use of seeds grown under irrigation, although it is by no means proven that the seeds had anything to do with it. It is well understood that the Alaska pea, the most important variety, grown under irrigation in Idaho or Montana makes much stronger growth than when planted under the conditions that maintain in the older seed pea sections; they go twice to three times as high. The seed is larger. Some canners plant four bushels of irrigated seed where three bushels of the smaller peas suffices to the acre; about the same number of plants is said to result. That the use of the larger seed results in larger peas going into the can may be true, but is open to question. If the extra size really is a characteristic of the second generation when not grown under irrigation it would appear that all the canner has to do would be to take in his crop a little earlier. ARE YOUR BENCHES FILLED?

There are many florists who have waste bench space in the dead of winter—when space is most valuable. Why not use such space by forcing Cold Storage Giganteum? Good bulbs planted now will flower in May. Get Horseshoe Brand bulbs because they will give better results than most brands, as they are disbudded in Japan to conserve the strength necessary to provide the best possible results under the most unfavorable greenhouse conditions. Just try them—you will be pleasantly surprised.

ever, it is a good talking point for the seedsman selling Wisconsin peas—the bane of the packer's life is the high percentage of No. 4 and No. 5 peas he gets even when he doesn't go chasing runaway crops.

SEIZURE OF MORTGAGED SEED.

The right of a mortgagor of seed to recover damages for its premature seizure by the mortgagee was the subject of the case of Becker vs. McKenzie, which has just been passed upon by the Oregon Supreme court (144 Pacific Reporter 434). The court holds that, if the seizure occurred before the mortgagee was entitled to possession under the terms of the mortgage, it was no defense to the suit for damages that the lien accrued afterward and before any sale was made by the mortgagee. The court said: "If the property was prematurely taken by the defendant, it was a wrongful taking and a conversion of the timothy seed, for which suit lies, and the subsequent maturing of the mortgage lien did not make his possession rightful or change the character of the conversion." But it was decided, of course, that the mortgagee in such a suit can offset the amount of his claim under the mortgage. According to the decision, the damages recoverable are measurable by the value of the seed at the time of the taking. S.

HEARING ON GLADIOLUS BULBS.

The Treasury Department has promulgated decisions of the board of appraisers at New York in regard to the duty on gladiolus bulbs and mother bulbs. The board holds that such bulbs when imported solely for propagating purposes are entitled to entry into this country free of duty, and that the regulation of the department to the effect that such bulbs should be denied free entry unless the invoice indicates which of the bulbs in an importation are mature mother flowering bulbs and unless an affidavit from the ultimate consignee is submitted stating that the bulbs are imported for propagating purposes, does not preclude the importer from proving such facts before the board by other evidence. The matter came before the board on the protest of the Hubert Bulb Co., of Portsmouth, Va., against the assessment of duty by the collectors of customs at Norfolk, Va., and Boston, Mass. Appraiser Waite rendered the decision of the board in the bulb case as follows:

"The importations in these cases consist of gladiolus bulbs. They were assessed for duty under the tariff act of 1913, 'all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand,' the gladiolus not being enumerated or otherwise described in the preceding part of the paragraph. There is a proviso, however, to this paragraph which was added to the law of 1913, changing somewhat the law of previous years. This proviso reads:

INCREASE

Your profits by growing good things; things that give greater returns from the same space; things that mean profit and not loss. My original Silver Pink seedling snaps are among the good things, if not the greatest of the busy producers. We have figures of tests showing from three to five blossoms to one of any snapdragon. Now, they are just as easy to grow as other kinds, and cost less.

WHY NOT

Clear out some poor-paying space and send your order today? To quickly move a block of fine plants we will add free 10 plants to each hundred, 100 to each thousand. Our price is only $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000 for choice seedling stock. Don't use cuttings of this variety.

We also offer plants of yellow, $5.00 per 100; Garnet, $8.00; Nelrose, $6.00.

You will also want a big lot of seedling Silver Pink ready for spring sales. They are fine for bedding or garden, being medium tall, and a veritable flower bush all summer. You can have a big stock at small cost. Liberal trade pkt.. $1.00; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Free cultural directions. All orders cash. Send for complete list of snapdragons, our specialty.

'Provided, That all mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes shall be admitted free of duty.' The importers claim these importations should be admitted free under this proviso.

"Testimony was given in each case which shows that the goods are bulbs within the meaning of the statute, that they are ready to flower, and that they are 'mother bulbs,' that term meaning bulbs which reproduce or produce other bulbs. It appears these produce others both at the upper part of the bulb itself and from the lower part, where the root of the bulb is joined to the bulb proper. The testimony clearly shows, we think, that the importations were made exclusively for propagating purposes, and there is no question but that this species of plant is a flowering plant. It appears these particular importations are ready to flower, or will flower the first year on being set out in the ground. We conclude they should be free of duty, as claimed.

"The department, in a letter addressed to the collector of customs at New York, issued instructions that free entry under paragraph 210 to bulbs claimed to be mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes should be denied unless the invoice specifically indicates which of the bulbs comprised in any importation are mature mother flowering bulbs, and unless an affidavit from the ultimate consignee is submitted stating that the bulbs are imported for propagating purposes and are intended exclusively for such purposes. In these cases such regulation was not complied with, inasmuch as in protest 746276 the affidavit required was not furnished, and in protest 760202 the invoice did not show specifically that the bulbs were mature mother flowering bulbs.

"This regulation is not provided for in the statute itself, and we think must be considered a regulation governing the action of the collector with reference to free entry of the goods. It does not, we think, preclude the importer from submitting his case to the board on proof other than that mentioned in the regulation. The protests are sustained and free entry under paragraph 210 instructed."

Seeds With a Pedigree

FOR generations James Carter & Co. have used painstaking English methods in selecting and testing their seeds. The Carter trial and testing grounds at Raynes Park have become celebrated in Great Britain.

This explains the remarkable record of Carter's seeds in American Gardens. These "Seeds with a Pedigree" can now be purchased in this country. A complete stock is carried in Boston and prompt service is guaranteed.

If you do not have the 1915 Carter Catalogue, American Edition, write for it today.

to economy of space. By far the greater part of the book is occupied by the vegetable and farm seeds, in which a number of novelties are featured.

Ochs Grain Co., Hoisington, Kan.—Third annual catalogue of "Golden Belt Brand" seeds; a 96-page, illustrated book, divided into three main sections—first, the vegetable seeds, next the flower seeds, and then the section devoted to grasses, forage plants and grains, with a few pages of poultry supplies, insecticides and garden implements at the end.

Diggs & Beadles, Inc., Richmond, Va.—Illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs, roots, vines, poultry supplies, garden tools, fertilizers and insecticides; sixty-four pages, more than half of them devoted to vegetable and farm seeds. In the introductory pages are a "Farm and Garden Calendar" and a "Planting, Maturity and Weight Table."

W. H. Barrett, Adrian, Mich.—"Barrett's Tomato Seeds," a handsome booklet of sixteen pages, well printed and illustrated. The stock listed consists of fourteen standard varieties.

Fraser Nursery Co., Inc., Huntsville, Ala.—Spring surplus list, "for nurserymen and dealers only"; an extensive list of fruit trees, nut trees and ornamental stock, including seedlings and young stock for transplanting.

Lechner Bros., Webster Groves, Mo., agents for the Growers' Association, Anna Paulowna, Holland.—A 40-page wholesale catalogue of bulbs, roots and plants. "All expenses of freight, insurance and duty," say the growers, "will be charged to purchasers. We insure all goods, unless otherwise instructed."

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo.—"Flowers and Arrangements," intended as "an aid in selecting floral offerings." This is what may be called an edition de luxe in retail catalogues, for it is printed on a fine quality of enameled paper, beautifully illustrated, and bound in a really artistic cover, on which the predominant colors are green and gold. It contains forty-one large pages, about 9x12 inches. At the beginning are full-page views of the Rock greenhouses and grounds and the interior of the company's famous retail store. The rest of the pictures show excellent specimens of wreaths, sprays, society emblems and miscellaneous designs.

Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England.—Catalogue of seeds of perennials, "including many new and uncommon species not offered in ordinary catalogues, and admirably adapted for the border or rockery"; an accurate, closely but clearly printed 26-page list, with brief, pointed descriptions.

Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, Cal.—A 104-page, illustrated catalogue of seeds, plants, roots, shrubs, trees and other nursery stock, farm and garden tools, etc. Among the specialties in the seed department are tree and shrub seeds. Prominent features in the nursery department are citrus and tropical fruits. Planting tables and other cultural directions are included.

Galloway Bros. & Co., Waterloo, Ia.—"Galloway Hi-quality Pure Seeds," an interesting 128-page catalogue of seeds, nursery stock, implements and supplies, with numerous illustrations, many of them printed in green and other shades of color. Large space is given to vegetable and farm seeds; alfalfa, vetch, cowpeas and other leguminous crops are treated as specialties.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Dreer's Celebrated Lawn Grass Seeds," a 16-page, illustrated booklet containing lists of grass seed mixtures for various purposes, with hints on the making and care of lawns; also lists of mowers, rollers and other requisites for the lawn.

TEMPERATURE FOR LETTUCE.

What is the best night temperature for lettuce and about what length of time is required to get transplanted lettuce ready for market? What is the best way to keep down green fly? Nothing else is grown in the house. Unless the mercury is below zero, the temperature runs to 55 and 60 degrees at night. Is this too warm?

T. M. G.

A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night is much too high for lettuce. It should not exceed 45 to 48 degrees. If it goes beyond 50 degrees the leaves become thin and flabby and easily fall a prey to the various diseases to which they are subject. A day temperature of 55 degrees when cloudy and 60 to 65 degrees with sunshine can be given. Fumigate with any of the nicotine extracts or papers. A good many growers now use hydrocyanic acid gas, a light dose of which suffices to keep down aphis. Fall crops started in August or early September take about eight weeks to mature; in winter three to four weeks longer is needed and toward spring less time is required. By starting the first crop about September 1 you can market in November, the next crop in early February and a third in April. C. W.

LETTUCE IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Please tell me how to succeed in growing lettuce in North Dakota during November, December and January, when we have only ten hours of daylight and the temperature is about zero and below. I cannot get the roots to take hold at that time of the year, but have no trouble at other times. I intend to build a new house especially for lettuce and any information on the growing of the crop will be appreciated. P. J. K.

The type of house in which nearly all the leading lettuce specialists now grow their crops is even-span, of any desired length and thirty to forty feet wide, frequently much wider than this. Crops are most successfully grown when planted right in the ground. I have an idea, though, that in your severe climate you would be more certain of success if raised benches were used for the midwinter crop. A night temperature as near 45 degrees as possible should be maintained. It should not exceed 48 degrees. In a warm house the plants become drawn, soft and more susceptible to insect attacks. If you have facilities for thoroughly sterilizing your beds with live steam before planting your first indoor crop, you will destroy weed seeds, insects and fungoid growths and this will mean a cleaner and better lettuce crop.

If benches are used, be sure there are no heating pipes below them. Lettuce soil should be of such a nature that it will always seem loose. Clayey soil is not good, but one containing considerable sand is all right. Work plenty of horse manure deeply into the soil. This manure need not be thor-

Now is the time to sow some of the Summer Sweet Pea Seed, outdoors or in cold frames, to have good crop for Decoration Day. I have only the best commercial varieties, like: Frank Dolby (lavender), Nora Unwin (white), Gladys Unwin (pink), etc.; 1 lb., $1.50; 5 lbs. of each, at $5.00.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON INSPECTION LAW.

Upheld by State Supreme Court.

The law enacted by the Washington legislature in 1909, providing for the inspection of trees, nursery stock, plants, etc., and for the disinfection or destruction of those found to be infected with contagious diseases, is not unconstitutional, according to a decision handed down by the Supreme court of that state the other day in the case of Carstens vs. De Sellem, 144 Pacific Reporter 934.

The suit was brought against defendants, officials of the state agricultural department, to recover damages for the destruction of certain peach trees belonging to plaintiffs, which were destroyed by defendants after plaintiffs refused to comply with a notice requiring them to destroy the trees, if they could not be disinfected, it having been found that they were infected with fire-blight, which had been declared by the assistant commissioner of agriculture to be a disease dangerous to the horticultural interests of the state. The trial court dismissed the suit, holding that defendants acted within the line of their official duties, and the Supreme court affirmed this judgment on plaintiffs' taking an appeal therefrom.

Plaintiffs claimed that the law was unconstitutional, on the ground that there was no provision for the review of the decisions of an inspector that certain trees are infected, and that the statutory provision for five days' notice to owners to disinfect or destroy infected stock is unreasonably short. In overruling both of these claims, the Supreme court said:

Provision for Appeal.

"The answer to the first objection is found in section 9 of the act. It provides that any person aggrieved by any order or act of any assistant or inspector in the department of agriculture may appeal from such findings, order or act to the commissioner, who shall forthwith proceed to hear and determine such appeal, render his decision thereon, and report the same to the appellant and to such assistant or inspector." It is, also, pointed out that the law expressly preserves the right of appeal from the commissioner's decision.

The third principal objection made to the law was that it vested legislative power in the commissioner of horticulture. The section of the law thus attacked reads as follows:

"The diseases of and pests injurious to nursery stock, fruit trees, shade trees, ornamental shrubbery and horticultural plants to be guarded against and treated and disinfected for * * * shall include any and all such diseases or pests as the state commissioner of horticulture shall specify and describe in the bulletins to be issued by him, as injurious to the fruit and horticultural interests of the state."

Commissioner's Power Not Legislative.

In deciding that this section does not involve any improper delegation of the legislature's powers to the commissioner, the Supreme court said:

"It is true that the statute does not specifically enumerate the diseases or pests to be eradicated. It simply provides that, if the disease or pest exists and cannot be cured by disinfection, the owner shall promptly destroy the trees. It authorizes the commissioner to promulgate rules and regulations for eradicating diseases and pests, to the end that their spread may be prevented. In this respect the state is exercising its sovereign power, commonly called its police power. * * * We think the law does no more than to delegate a power to the commissioner to determine some fact or state of things upon which the law becomes operative. It is impracticable, if not impossible, for the law-making power to foreknow and specifically enumerate all contagious diseases and pests that may arise affecting the horticultural interests of the state. To meet the necessities caused by new diseases as they may occur, and prevent their spread, matters purely administrative may be left to administrative officers. If this were not so, the lives and property of the people might frequently be placed in jeopardy by the occurrence of some new contagion which the lawmaking branch of the government had not foreseen." S.

Thanking you for the excellent results we have had to date from our ad. in The Review.—

The Market.

Business was fairly good last week, and, with the advent of brighter weather, there is promise of its continued improvement. There has been a good demand for cut flowers; though no actual shortage of any variety has occurred, there has been a general clean-up almost every day. Carnations are none too plentiful, but the market for them is brisk and the prices are being maintained better than sometimes happens at this season. There are not many roses coming to hand, but the quality is better and the demand is good. Paper Whites are getting scarce, but lots of Golden Spur are coming in and are meeting with good sales. Tulips and other bulbous stock are selling well. In pot plants there is a good variety, but the sale of these has not been any too rapid.

Various Notes.

Joseph Stuber has sold his interest in the East Seattle Floral Co. to Chester Burnett, who will manage the business in the future. Mr. Stuber is devoting his energies to other lines, where he expects to find more lucrative, if not more interesting, employment.

Robert Simmons is now principal assistant in the store of the Paris Florist. He is well known in the trade here and should prove an acquisition at his new post.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

"Good prices for good stock" has been the rule this week, owing to the shortage in outdoor flowers. Heavy rains have prevented growers of outside stock from keeping up their regular shipments, for not only has it been impossible to gather the flowers, but the flowers have been spoiled on the plants. Carnations grown under canvas have been hardly better than outdoor flowers and it has been impossible to fill some orders. Funeral work has been heavy, using a lot of stock, especially magnolia leaves, which retailers have been pushing instead of flowers. A few nice society functions have also added to the business, and altogether the week was quite satisfactory.

Valley has been in big demand and the supply on some days has been a little short, but usually equal to the demand. Orchids have been in fair demand, helping to clean up the surplus a little. Violets are plentiful. There is little demand for plants, with the exception of good ferns, which are always needed. Azaleas hang fire badly, but this is partly owing to the high prices asked by retailers. Practically no local-grown Easter lilies are on the market, but fine stock is being received from northern growers, who are apparently more awake to the value of cold storage stock than our local men.

Various Notes.

C. B. Knickman, of McHutchinson & Co., New York, has been calling on the trade here. He reports business well up to expectations all along the line.

H. W. Turner is installing another electric motor for providing pumping power to convey liquid manure to the rose houses. Owing to the difficulty in obtaining good yard manure, liquid is used here largely and with most satisfactory results.

W. Wern, manager of Wright's Flower Shop, says business was excellent last week. He says the demand for the best class of stock has been helped considerably by the shortage in

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., had the misfortune to have his automobile stolen last week. He recovered it later, but it was stripped of everything movable. Mr. Gutting is pushing small stock and vegetable plants and reports fine business.

Miss Kate Parsons, of Fresno, has been in this city, "resting up," she says, but she seems to be moving around in pretty lively fashion, getting a line on various sorts of stock.

The February meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was postponed from February 2 for one week, on account of the bad weather, which made it impossible for those residing far out of town to reach it. E. D. Sturtevant, of Hollywood, was to have spoken on aquatics and it was thought that such a veteran expert in this interesting class of plants should at least have a good audience. Mr. Sturtevant kindly promised to speak February 9, instead.

Murata & Co. continue big shipping business and the stock is cleaned up well daily.

L. L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, was in town last week.

The L. A. Floral Co. is handling some extra choice cut Easter lilies, and both F. Sperry and P. Miller have their coats off and sleeves rolled up these days.

The heavy rains, while needed for the general good, have held up nursery shipments considerably. The Germain Seed & Plant Co., with its big mailing list, always has a busy time just after the catalogue goes out and many orders for nursery stock had to be held up on account of the wet condition of the land.

Fine carnation stock is being sent in by Polder & Groen, of Montebello. The quality of everything grown at this establishment reflects considerable credit on the firm. An auto truck is to be put on the road shortly.

The Market.

Business has been brisk this week at the flower stores. Social affairs have been numerous and all the public schools have been holding graduating exercises. Flowers are used quite extensively by the girl graduates and there have not been enough carnations, daffodils, cut tulips or other stock to go around. A large quantity of stock has been used up in funeral work and the demand from outside florists has been strong. The supply of carnations, daffodils, roses and bulbous cut flowers has increased materially, but prices have not been affected.

In potted stock the bulbous types are the leading sellers and some splendid specimens of tulips, hyacinths and freesias are shown. All of the retailers who have had time to figure say that their business for January shows an increase over last year. Some of the stores are displaying decorations suggesting Valentine's day.

Orders are piling up with the nurserymen, who are unable to do much shipping on account of the recent heavy rains. The volume of the orders received is about the same as last year. Seedsmen are shipping advance orders

ORCHID PLANTS NOT BULBS.

According to the board of customs appraisers, orchid plants which are imported for propagating purposes and which consist of roots surmounted by root stalks, from which grow spikes which bear flowers, these spikes being enlarged and thickened portions known as pseudo-bulbs, are not free of duty as mature mother flowering bulbs imported for propagating purposes, but are dutiable as orchids. The matter came up on the protest of Maltus & Ware against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs at New York. At the hearing, counsel for the government moved to dismiss the protest on the ground that the collector reported that the fee was not paid on this protest, but paid on another protest on the same entry, but the request was denied by the board.

The plants in this case consisted of thirty cases of living plants, each case containing forty plants valued at 25 cents per plant. The appraiser reported them as orchid plants and returned them for duty as orchids at twenty-five per cent ad valorem. Protestants claimed free entry. The testimony showed that the plants were imported for propagating purposes exclusively. The board says:

"The pseudo-bulb is in no sense a mother bulb, as we understand a mother bulb to be a bulb from which young bulbs spring, thus reproducing the mother plant.

"The importations in question here are sold as plants. We learn also that they are described in commerce as plants containing so many bulbs, having reference to the pseudo-bulbs. These pseudo-bulbs, or stalks, may be entirely severed, and many of them are when the plant is set out for propagation. It seems they are called bulbs and so referred to in the commercial world for the purpose of describing the size of the plant, as we learn that the plants are sold by the hundred, each plant containing two, four, or more of these stalks, spikes, or pseudo-bulbs, thus describing more definitely the size of the plants in question.

"We are satisfied that the orchid is not a bulb botanically. Some of the witnesses were men of eminence in the botanical world, and their testimony is to that effect. Neither have these plants the appearance of a bulb or bulbous root.

"The importers claim that even though these importations are not found to be bulbs, they are still bulbs by reason of their commercial designation. Two witnesses swore that the trade so understood them and treated them as such in buying and selling and describing them. We are satisfied, however, that this was simply a matter of description; that these orchid roots are plants; and if the part spoken of as a pseudo-bulb, the only thing that characterizes them as bulbs, had been entirely severed from the plant there is nothing to show that they would be treated in the commercial world as bulbs. Much less are we inclined to hold that they are shown to be mature mother flowering bulbs. It is true they belong to a species of flowering plants, plants which as imported are in a condition to send forth shoots which will produce flowers, but they send forth nothing which in its inception or beginning can be termed a bulb; and from our understanding of the testimony, what subsequently appears and may be termed a false or pseudo-bulb can not be so designated, as it springs from the root of the plant.

"We are therefore of the opinion that the testimony has not shown that these plants, either commercially or actually, should be classified as bulbs. We do not think Congress intended to include this class of roots or plants when it used the language, 'mature mother flowering bulbs.' We therefore overrule the protest, sustaining the classification made by the collector."

...THE...

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE Harry S. Betz Nursery Co., of Philadelphia, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000.

CONNECTICUT nurserymen will hold their annual meeting at the Hotel Garde, Hartford, Conn., February 25, at 10 a. m. The secretary of the association is Frank F. Thomas, of Manchester, Conn.

SALES are running from $1,000 to $1,800 a week ahead of corresponding weeks last year at the office of the Gardner Nursery Co., Osage, Ia., according to the statement of the vice-president and treasurer, Clark E. Gardner, and everything points to a big spring business. The company thinks its pocket-size catalogue, 4x9 inches, printed in its own print shop, is just as good a business-bringer as the larger and more expensive books.

BABCOCK'S BALM FOR BLUES.

For the man whose stock topic of conversation is "hard times," D. W. Babcock, manager of the Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., has a prescription. He writes:

"Everything seems to be jogging along here at a fairly good clip. Orders are coming our way; no cause to be discouraged. The man with a grouch should go bury it deeply, roll up his pants, and wade in; get right down to brass tacks. To me the times seem to spell opportunity in great, big capital letters, extending all over this fair, free land of ours. What we must do is to produce the goods Americans want, of better quality than that coming from abroad—we can do it—and give up our shiftless, slipshod happy-go-lucky methods. What we want is more intensive and less extensive cultivation, more quality and (probably) less quantity, fewer 1,000-acre farms and more 10-acre gardens."

DOLLAR DIALOGUES.

Spending Time and Spending Money.

Scene: The office of J. K. Brown & Co., nurserymen.

Dramatis personæ: J. K. Brown, and A. B. Smith, an advertising man.

Brown: The question of advertising has been brought up before, many times, but I haven't been convinced. Our line is different from others, and what's one man's meat may give another indigestion. For our own work we find catalogues and agents do best.

Smith: But did you ever consider that your catalogues are of little or no use to anyone who is not accustomed to them? The only person who can select from them intelligently is one who knows all about the kinds of stock and varieties the catalogues offer. They're all right for old customers, but what about getting new ones? And your agents can't possibly see all the folks who might be interested in buying trees and shrubs. There's where the magazine or newspaper ad comes in, to open up new business.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

Brown: That sounds well, but as a matter of dollars and cents, general advertising wouldn't be a good investment in this line, whatever it may be in others.

Smith: Have your experiments in this line turned out badly?

Brown: We haven't made any. Why buy a pig in a poke when the one you've got is giving good returns? That's the way I look at it.

Smith: Didn't it ever occur to you that the pig in the poke might be better than the one you've got?

Brown: That's not the point. I always think of these things as matters of dollars and cents. Is a thing a good investment or a bad investment? For instance, the time you're spending here is a bad investment; it won't bring you any money and it's wasting mine. Sorry, but I've got to get away to speak before the annual meeting of the horticultural society at Appletown.

Smith: How long will you be gone?

Brown: The better part of two days?

Smith: That must mean a considerable investment on your part, in time, traveling expenses, etc.

Brown: It's worth it, even if only considered from a business point of view. It brings my firm to the attention of the folks there; I meet new people and may add a few of them to our list of customers; I offer suggestions as to their needs which mean more to them than anything they can get from the catalogue.

Smith: Your work in that way is supplementary to the work of your agents and catalogues.

Brown: Just so.

Smith: Now, Mr. Brown, don't you see that this is just the kind of work that you can do on a more general scale by advertising? An ad of yours will bring your firm to the attention of a large number of people, a great many of them new people to you. You can offer suggestions, give advice, etc., through your ads just as you do in person at the horticultural society. And, I may add, you will in all probability add a few customers to your list.

Brown: There's a difference.

Smith: Just this: You speak in person at the horticultural society and write your ads here in the office, or at any rate furnish the suggestions from which an advertising man can write your ads. And in the first case you spend time and in the other, money.

Brown: But the cost is much greater for advertising.

Smith: And the returns are much greater. Here, I'll make a proposition: Keep track of your expenses in speaking before the horticultural society—don't forget to allow a proper amount for your time, then spend an equal amount on advertising, and make a comparison of direct returns. This is not giving an equal chance to the ads, because advertising acts in a cumulative way; the returns are proportionately greater as time goes on, if you advertise regularly. Just as you get more results from your visit to the horticultural society meeting this year than you did the first time you represented the firm there, when you knew

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN ELECT.

The Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association, at its tenth annual meeting at the Maxwell House, Nashville, January 28, elected the following officers:

President, R. R. Harris, of Greenbrier.

Vice-president, Harry Nicholson, of Winchester.

Vice-president for eastern Tennessee, A. W. Wade, of Loudon.

Vice-president for middle Tennessee, W. J. Smith, of Bellevue.

Vice-president for western Tennessee, D. R. Miller, of Bartlett.

Secretary-treasurer, G. M. Bentley, of Knoxville.

The selection of the next place of meeting was left in the hands of the officers.

An interesting and instructive meeting was held, and many excellent papers presented, the program of which appeared in The Review for January 28.

OTAKSAS THAT WERE CUT BACK.

I should like to know whether Hydrangea Otaksa, which has been cut back to four or five eyes and is in 14-inch pots, will make much growth and bloom at all this coming season. The plants were cut back because the wood was crooked and unsightly.

E. C. B.

If you have cut back the hydrangeas quite hard you have probably removed all the buds which would throw flower heads in the coming season. The plants will be sure to make strong growths for another year, but you will get few or no flowers this season.

C. W.

QUEEN MARIE

THE NEW LIGHT MAGENTA POMPON

We have grown it four years and know it is a good money-maker. Very productive. Planted in June from 2-inch pots, with two pinchings, you can get 15 to 18 sprays per plant, each spray carrying 15 to 25 flowers. Needs no tying, stems being strong and stiff enough to support themselves. Flowers very double. Holds petals until dry. Plenty of foliage—excellent as a pot plant as well as for cutting. We offer this as a money-maker for florists.

From 2-inch pots, $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000. Delivery at once.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The Market.

Retail trade has picked up wonderfully in the last two weeks, in spite of bad weather and no large functions of any importance. Regular trade has been steady and the outlook is promising. There are several large wedding decorations in sight and the public is much more generous in its outlays for flowers. Flowers in general are plentiful and the quality is fine. There has been a marked shortage in first-class roses, but they are now becoming more plentiful.

Various Notes.

The florists' windows in general have beautiful displays. Lange had a fine window last week of pink tulips and freesias, which he sold at popular prices. Randall made a specialty of the different sizes of Bird's-nest ferns. Littlefield's windows displayed spring plants and flowers.

Lange has the decoration at the Hotel Bancroft for the Jewish order of the I. O. B. B., as well as several other banquet decorations, this week.

Madaus reports trade satisfactory and is making a specialty of violets in small bunches. H. L.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

As the Lenten season approaches, business shows a slight improvement, numerous belated social functions calling for decorations and cut flowers. The growers are busy in their preparation of potted stock for Easter. From present appearances there will be a good supply of all kinds of cut flowers and potted stock.

Various Notes.

Smith the Florist, on Washington street, had a busy week, with fifteen designs for one funeral February 4. Wm. Cohen has resigned his position here.

James E. Burke, gardener for James A. Foster, was elected president of the Antlers Club at Warwick last week.

The Providence Sunday Journal in a recent issue had an interesting illustrated article on orchid raising at the greenhouses of Edgar Nock.

There was an unusually large number of designs at the funeral of Frank McFee, of Woonsocket, last week. A. Vose, Drabble Bros. and W. H. Flye had the major part of the work. W. H. M.

Milwaukee, Wis.—F. Kestner has gone out of business as a florist.

NEW FRENCH HYDRANGEAS

All that has been said of the beauty and exceptional value of the new French varieties is absolutely so. They stand right up to their reputation, and are easy to manage and no trouble to bring into flower.

We have a supply of from 200 to 600 of a kind.

The following are those proven to be most satisfactory:

1 crown from 3-inch pots, at ..... $ 6.00 per 100
1 to 2 crowns from 4-inch pots, at.. 10.00 per 100
3 to 5 crowns from 6-inch pots, at.. 25.00 per 100

Avalanche, a large white, has a firmly established reputation; is an easy forcer.

Bouquet Rose, large clusters of rosy amber, changing to bright pink; a great favorite in the flower boxes.

La Lorraine, large flowers of pale rose, growing into bright pink.

Mousseline. Great! Described by the introducer as mauve-rose with cream-colored center; often comes darker. Flower heads bold, large and erect. Best in a deep blue.

Mme. E. Mouillere, won the Silver Medal at the National Flower Show at Boston last year; a great favorite in both London and New York. Large size, free-flowering white.

Souv. de Mme. E. Chautard, fine sized heads of brilliant rose-colored flowers, one of the best of the bouquet type and excellent in every way.

Otaksa—needs no description. From 3-inch pots, at $5 00 per 100; 4-inch pots, $10.00 per 100, and 6-inch pots at $20.00 per 100; nice stock.

There is scarcely a home in America where plants like these when brought into bloom would not be most welcome and command the most respectable price.

Lady Gay, as fine as Dorothy Perkins.

An excellent general purpose climber.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good for the last two weeks. There has been considerable funeral work, which cleaned up the stock daily. The lack of sunshine in the last ten days has shortened up the supply of stock. Roses are scarce and unusually poor, as are American Beauties. The supply of carnations has shortened materially, and they, also, are showing the effects of the cloudy weather. Spring stock is becoming more plentiful every day and is finding a good demand. Freesias, violets, valley and orchids find a fair call.

Blooming plants have been finding a good sale. Bulbous stock, azaleas, primulas and cyclamens are the best sellers.

Various Notes.

About every traveling salesman of the florists' ribbon and supply houses has called on the trade in the last ten days.

Baur & Steinkamp report exceptionally good sales in carnation cuttings this year, the best sellers being Beacon, Matchless, White Wonder, Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight and Pocahontas.

J. J. Karins, with H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Bertermann Bros. Co. has its usual fine lot of blooming plants for St. Valentine's day trade.

Clarence Thomas, with the Hill Floral Co., reports trade highly satisfactory.

The Pahud brothers have recently purchased a touring car. H. L. W.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Cut flowers remain rather scarce, but another week of sunshine will change this. Violets have never been plentiful this winter and still are hard to get. The rose crops have been light since Christmas. Carnations are fairly plentiful, and peas are coming in better than they have. Prices are stiffer than is usual at this time of the year.

The retail demand has not been heavy, but everyone has managed to sell down pretty closely, especially as the out-of-town trade has been unusually good. Cyclamens and primulas are in good supply and are selling well. There are few azaleas on the market and there seems to be no demand for what there are. Hyacinths and tulips are scarcely an item yet, although a few are seen and are quickly picked up.

Various Notes.

Lewis Haury has withdrawn from the firm of Haury & Sons and has moved onto his place on the Murfreesboro pike, where he will grow vegetables. He is something of an expert in this line. He will erect greenhouses this summer, we understand.

Geny Bros. were snowed under with funeral work last week, when all the help but two were at home ill.

J. M. Corbett has his houses crowded with bedding plants and thousands more in the sand. He says he will have to begin selling soon or throw something outdoors. He adds that he does not worry, as a classified ad in The Review always cleans him up.

McIntyre Bros. continue to cut heavy supplies of carnations and sweet peas. They have certainly made good on these items this year. They are testing the effects of inoculation on a part of their peas this season, but so far have been unable to see any difference between those inoculated and those that were not. F. B.

Olean, N. Y.—Dana R. Herron has on the place all the material except the glass for four new houses; in fact, he has had it there almost a year. Although he is able to sell more than he ever has produced, he is not satisfied it is time to increase his investment.

Buy for Quality

"Safety first" is perhaps the most extensively used slogan of today and there is none more significant. Well, "quality first" means the same thing to the grower who is buying carnation cuttings. While propagating our carnation cuttings, we always keep in mind "quality first." We are propagating:

MRS. C. W. WARD

AS A BREAD-AND-BUTTER VARIETY

What Mr. Fritz Bahr, the famous writer of "The Week's Work," in the Florists' Exchange of January 9, 1915, says about this variety:

"With a good many of the retail growers, throughout the middle west in particular, the great merits of Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward have just been recognized and appreciated. It is one of the best of its color that we have today. Every retail grower should provide room for at least a few, and fairly well grown stock will sell at a higher price than any other of the standard sorts on a glutted market."

We have 40,000 cuttings of this variety ready - - - - $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000

For other varieties see Classified list in this paper. All stock guaranteed.

The Market.

An unusually large number of deaths lately is giving the florists plenty to do. Roses are scarce, while carnations are in a little better supply. Romans, Paper Whites and lilies are abundant. Roses and carnations are bringing a better wholesale price than at any time since the holidays and are hard to get at any price. Some of the florists are making preparations for a good St. Valentine's day trade. It is possible, by more advertising in the daily papers, to increase the sales for this day considerably.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has had a big run of funeral work, making it necessary to buy a good many flowers, especially roses. The firm's own cut of roses is short at this time. The carnations are in better crop and the cut of Romans, lilies, valley, etc., is good. They have a nice display of plants and flowers in the window for St. Valentine's day. They have a supply of specially designed boxes for sending out cut flowers as valentines.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are having a nice cut of roses and carnations, but still they do not have enough for the big business being done. Other flowers, such as hyacinths, Paper Whites, valley, etc., help out immensely.

C. L. Niednagel is getting along finely with the grafting of the rose cuttings. The first batches are about ready to be taken out of the frames and are in good growing condition.

J. C. Elspermann is having his share of the good business. His carnations are in excellent shape, with a fine crop in sight. Mr. and Mrs. Elspermann and the boys have all had the grip lately.

Karl Zeidler is cutting nice lilies, sweet peas and bulbous stock.

Royston & Fenton are short on roses, but long on young smilax in 2-inch pots and coleus in good assortment.

Louis Fritsch is having a busy time and has to do considerable running about to get enough flowers for his funeral trade.

Miss Nellie Goodge was exceedingly busy last week with funeral work. Among the many pieces she made was a large blanket. She has a good supply of bulbous stock. Her snapdragons in the benches are coming along nicely and the few carnations she has are looking well.

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

WE WILL BE GLAD TO QUOTE ON APPLICATION PRICES ON ALL THE NEWER AND STANDARD VARIETIES—STRONG, GRAFTED PLANTS READY IN MARCH

TOMATOES (Bonny Best) TOMATOES

Most prolific for forcing or outside crop. Size and color are right. Will produce double the fruit of any other tomato in existence. No trick in growing tomatoes; just plant them, tie and run them to single or two stems; keep side shoots out; no hand fertilizing needed. That isn't all—try this in your carnation benches. They will make you money. No higher temperature needed.

Large transplanted plants, $2.50 per 100, $20.00 per 1000; cash. B. B. POHLMANN, Rockford, Ill.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Market conditions are about the same as last week, except that stock is a little more plentiful. There is an increased supply in all lines of cut flowers, with the exception of Paper Whites, which have been scarce. Tulips and jonquils have been plentiful and have sold at low prices. Roses and carnations are coming in again, with roses still scarce, not being nearly sufficient to meet the demand. Lilies are selling at better prices than last week.

Various Notes.

A. F. Barbe has a nice lot of Easter lilies that will be in on time. He also expects to have some fine cinerarias and other pot plants for Easter. He is cutting excellent snapdragons and carnations.

R. S. Brown & Son report that orders for spring bedding stock are arriving unusually early from the south. This firm also reports that funeral business this winter has been the best ever experienced.

Joseph Austin has an excellent stock of ferns, begonias and blooming plants. He says the blooming plants are moving as well as could be expected, but ferns have been slow in selling.

Biedermann & Son last week sold more azaleas than in all the rest of the season and cleaned these plants out. They are busy at present getting ready for St. Valentine's day.

The Christ-Moore Floral Co. reports business well up to expectations for the eight months at the present location. W. J. B.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Stock in many lines continues scarce; roses in particular sell up closely, and one has to make a round of the various flower stores to get an order together of possibly a dozen good American Beauties. Growers hope before long to be able to relieve the situation with the crop coming on. Carnations continue in abundance, with the quality fine. Sweet peas are good and sell well. Bulbous stock could scarcely be any better. Jonquils, tulips and hyacinths are in their glory and the demand for them is gratifying to the florists. Paper White narcissi are easing up, after several months of overabundance. There are some fine cattleyas on the market. Callas and Easter lilies are scarce, while valley is in fine crop and sells readily. Violets are fine, and good crops are expected for St. Valentine's day. Good asparagus and maidenhair are in demand.

Mme. Vander Cruyssen azaleas are now offered. Primula malacoides is also a welcome addition to the collection of pot plants. Pans of hyacinths, tulips and jonquils find ready sales.

Various Notes.

There has been much commotion in Toledo, due to the fact that all florists have been notified to employ none but licensed firemen for greenhouse firing. The proposed plan reads something to the effect that all florists must employ none but licensed firemen, and that three shifts must be provided for. A special meeting of florists and gardeners was attended by a large number, who took part in a lengthy discussion. Mr. Elesman, state deputy boiler inspector, of Columbus, came to an open meeting, held in the Navarre hotel, where the subject was discussed pro and con all morning. The outcome was that Mr. Elesman said he would take up the matter at once with the industrial commission of Ohio, to see if he could arrange for special examinations for florists for the operating of common greenhouse boilers, and until we heard from him we could employ the same men to do greenhouse firing.

Schramm Bros. have just completed the decorations in the Terminal building for the annual automobile show. The decorations this year are entirely different from the old style of bunting and flags. The hall is decorated to give it the appearance of an outdoor scene, or rather the effect of a sunken garden.

H. C. White, of the White-June Co., has an attractive St. Valentine's day window display, which has created much comment. G. B. S.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

A WEST VIRGINIA ROSE HOUSE.

If I should build a rose house 35 x 110 and eight feet high to the eaves, to be heated by steam with natural gas as fuel, how should I pipe the house? The coldest weather we ever had here was 5 degrees below zero. We expect to plant roses that are grafted on Manetti.

J. W. A.

The following suggestions are made for the heating of a rose house, 35 x 110, with steam: Run a 2½-inch main through the house about two feet below the ridge, and at the end of the house farthest from the boiler connect it to fourteen 1¼-inch returns. The returns should be arranged in about five coils, two of which, each containing four pipes, should be on the walls, while the rest of the returns should be in three coils of two pipes each, placed under the benches.

CANNOT KEEP UP TEMPERATURE.

I am having trouble with my boiler and do not quite understand the reason for the difficulty. Please give me a little advice. There seems to be enough piping in the greenhouses, but I cannot get the water above 140 degrees, and when I close the drafts a little the temperature of the water drops fast. Do you think the boiler is too small, or is the trouble due to the chimney?

I have a Moninger hot water boiler, rated for 3,700 square feet, with a Honeywell generator. I am trying to heat the following houses: No. 1 is 25 x 125, with two feet of glass and three feet of concrete in the side walls; the roof has a slope of six inches to the foot, making the rafters about thirteen and one-half feet long; there is glass in both ends. No. 2 is 20 x 70, with two feet of glass and two and one-half feet of concrete in the walls; the rafters have a slope of six inches to the foot. No. 3 is 16 x 70, with two feet of glass and two and one-half feet of concrete in the walls. No. 4 is 10 x 35 and nine feet to the ridge, and has frame walls, with no glass in the sides. The total amount of radiation in the houses is 2,350 feet, and I wish to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero

What $5 Will Do

On a certain February 11, B. L. Elliott, of Pittsburgh, was awakened by the ringing of his Standard thermostat alarm. He found his previously reliable night man fast asleep, and the temperature falling fast. In another half hour he would have lost $30,000.

Two nights later the night fireman of E. J. Ahern, Wellesley, Mass., met with a fall that rendered him unconscious. He had no Standard thermostat alarm and the entire place froze up solid.

weather. My location, you will notice, is southeastern Pennsylvania. The boiler is in a pit and an overhead feed system is used in the houses, except in the largest one. The chimney was built for a smaller boiler; it is twenty-eight feet high and its flue is 12 x 12 inches. Is it large enough for the present boiler?

A. T. V.

It is not possible to determine from the data furnished just what is the cause of the trouble. The amount of radiation in the four houses is given as 2,350 feet, which is more than ample, since not more than 2,000 square feet of radiation should be needed to heat the houses to a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. To heat such a plant, the boiler with a rating of 3,700 square feet of radiation also allows for a large margin.

Although I have no definite data regarding the grate area of the boiler and hence cannot determine with any accuracy the proper size of the chimney, I would suggest that the trouble may come from the fact that the chimney, while it should answer for 1,200 square feet of radiation, is much too small for 2,400 square feet.

Fully as much depends on the skill used in arranging the radiating surface for each house as on the exact size and amount of the piping used and the size of the flow and return pipes. I would put in 2½-inch pipes as flows, and would not use more than 400 square feet with each flow and return pipe. I would certainly add fifteen feet to the height of the chimney and this should enable the heater to supply a temperature of 50 degrees in the present houses. Although a 16-inch chimney would be preferable, I believe that good results will follow with a taller chimney, provided the flow and main return pipes are large enough.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Dear Sirs: You may send me 70,000 two-inch Dirt Bands instead of 60,000. I enclose a check for same. If you will send me a few circulars and price lists I will distribute them among my friends. We have a florists' club in our county of about sixty members.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

The above was taken from the following report in the Market Growers' Journal, January 1, 1914, page 6.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading. There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa., 135,000 2-inch dirt bands.

393% MORE FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7⅝ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

Dear Sirs: The THOROUGHLY DEPENDABLE QUALITY of material commends them to users everywhere. Growing and shipping in same pots saves all kinds of labor.

Tomato plants which without your pots sell here for $1.00 per 100, RAISED IN YOUR POTS SELL AT $4.00 PER 100. Yours very truly,
The Dalles Floral Co.

"I raised tomato, cabbage, eggplant and pepper plants in the pots bought of you. They accomplished their purpose of keeping the roots of the plants separate and in their own spaces TO PERFECTION. From about 2700 tomato plants I picked 1140 MARKETABLE CRATES of tomatoes which brought me $600."
D. B. Moses, Purchase, N. Y.

"We grew about 800 tomato plants in your paper pots for our uncle in Rock Creek, Ohio. There is a canning factory there.

Our uncle says they were by far THE BEST PLANTS SET OUT IN ROCK CREEK last spring. We sent them 16 miles on a platform dray, rather than take a chance on a delay in freight, and the teamster told us he had a dozen chances to sell them on the way down.

We got the Paper Pots so our uncle need not send any pots back. The experiment was satisfactory.

We are MUCH IMPRESSED WITH THE FACT that Paper Pots give so much more root space than other pots.

We hope to use some 4-inch pots for starting 'cukes' and 'toms' for greenhouse work this spring. One firm does greenhouse work only."
Gallup Bros., Ashtabula, Ohio.

"The crop from the plants grown in your dirt bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."
J. M. Gage, Market Gardener, Willimantic, Conn.

"I used the Rochelle dirt bands for early tomatoes and cucumbers with VERY GREAT SUCCESS. I had an IMMENSE CROP of both tomatoes and cucumbers and both started picking fully 15 DAYS BEFORE THE USUAL TIME in this section."
Chas. H. Weaver (Choice Fruit and Vegetables), Dunnville, Ont., Can.

"We Ligbly recommend your Dirt Bands. We had tomatoes the FIRST OF JUNE, and the only tomatoes in Kay Co., Okla., this year, DUE ENTIRELY to using your Dirt Bands and getting them out early."
Nichols & Son, Market Gardeners, Blackwell, Okla.

"We raised several thousand plants in your paper pots and found it a very satisfactory method. This season we are going to use them exclusively. Kindly quote us on 2, 3 and 4-inch paper pots in large quantities and oblige."
Puritas Farm Products Company, Newburgh, N. Y.

"I used your Dirt Bands for tomatoes, peppers and eggplants—also for mignonette, heliotrope and helichrysum. I AND MY TRADE WERE PLEASED WITH THEM. I shall use more the coming season."
Chas. C. Roberts, Lansdowne, Pa.

"We got BETTER PLANTS, BIGGER PLANTS AND PLANTS WHICH WERE HEALTHIER AND MORE VIGOROUS THAN IN CLAY POTS."
Wm. Schruers, Gardener, Oil City, Pa.

"We grew early cabbage, tomatoes, eggplants and peppers in your Dirt Bands. Also used some for carnation cuttings.

All worked very satisfactorily and they DO NOT REQUIRE THE ATTENTION THAT SMALL POTS DO.

We certainly like Dirt Bands."
Reimers Bros., Rapid City, S. Dak.

"BANDS WILL GIVE BETTER PLANTS THAN POTS."
F. B. Murdock & Co., Kingston, Pa.

"We find that WATERING ALONE SAVES TIME ENOUGH TO PAY OVER CLAY POTS, and with proper handling there is NO QUESTION BUT A BETTER PLANT CAN BE GROWN."
H. Russell & Son, Market Gardeners, Boonville, N. Y.

"We raised vegetable plants and asters in your Paper Pots. They accomplished their purpose. They gave BETTER PLANTS THAN THOSE IN CLAY POTS AND SOLD AT DOUBLE PRICE."

WASHINGTON

The Market

The week presents the same condition as has obtained for some time with respect to the shortage of roses and carnations and the prices on these are necessarily what the commission men and wholesalers wish to ask, as the retailer has no alternative This does not apply to anything else, however, as there are plenty of lilacs, mignonette, sweet peas, violets, freesias, narcissi and lilies, so that no one need go without flowers. Aside from roses and carnations the only flowers holding a price are gardenias and valley. Tulips are coming in larger quantities.

Various Notes.

Fred H. Kramer is cutting some fine tulips and daffodils and his bulbous stock as a whole is excellent.

William F. Gude last week conferred with a number of interested parties with a view to preparing for the annual encampment of the G. A. R., which is to be held in this city. Mr. Gude has full charge of the arrangements.

A large number of visitors registered here last week, many of them coming to attend the third annual convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Among these visitors were John G. Heinl, of Terra Haute, Ind., whose son played a very prominent part in the proceedings of the convention; Samuel Bernstein and David Benjamin, of Kingston, N. Y.; W. H. Van Winkle, Jr., of Newark, N. J., and H. B. Ruppert, of Boston.

The sympathy of the entire trade is being extended to M. J. McCabe, of Anacostia, D. C., who last week met with the loss of his brother, Bernard G. McCabe.

Short talks on business building by Prof. Robert G. Wall, on the value of organization by George W. Spier, a real movie show with pictures direct from the war zone furnished by Sidney B. Lust and Herbert M. Osborn, Victrola music and a Dutch supper during which queer looking long-stemmed pipes of the corncob variety were used, were the features of the February meeting of the Florists' Club. In view of the elaborate entertainment, all business except that incident to the nomination of officers for the ensuing year was dispensed with. As a result of the action, the present officers will hold over during 1915. C. L. L.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Good, steady business has been the rule all the week, and on the whole the market has shown signs of improvement over previous weeks. Valley continues to arrive in good quantities, but the demand is not at all large; consequently there is some left over. The carnation supply is quite large; the pink and white varieties clear well, but the dark colors drag a little. American Beauties have no great demand, but other roses sell well. D'Arenberg and Indiana, in reds, have been good sellers during the last week, while Ward and Sunburst have sold well. Fancy baskets of Sweetheart roses, pansies and acacia have found ready buyers. Violets are selling a little more freely, but they are cheap. Sweet peas are arriving in first-class condition and sell well. There is only a medium demand for jonquils, which are large and long-stemmed.

Various Notes.

The bowling trophy donated by the Lord & Burnham Co., which was won by the Buffalonians last year, is back again in Rochester. Capt. Al. Salter has it on show in his east side store window.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an interesting window February 5 and 6. It consisted of a good-sized automobile, baby carriages, cradles and fancy vases filled entirely with tulips and Japanese lilies, fastened attractively with pink and white baby ribbon.

The Rochester Florists' Association has got out an attractive directory of its members, also containing lists of the various committees, etc.

A. J. Ploeger, of the Holland Nurseries, Boskoop, Holland; W. A. Stearns, of the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, and L. Neudorfer, of Chas. Zinn & Co., New York city, were recent visitors.

One of the big events of the year was the police ball at the armory, February 8. George T. Boucher had charge of the decorating. Immense basket vases of white and red thistles and large quantities of Chinese apple blossoms were used to great advantage.

H. J. H.

HAMMOND'S THRIP JUICE No. 2

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty. [Signed] T. J. OPPERMAN, Florist,

Paint Without Oil

Remarkable Discovery That Cuts Down the Cost of Paint Seventy-Five Per Cent.

A Free Trial Package is Mailed to Everyone Who Writes.

A. L. Rice, a prominent manufacturer of Adams, N. Y., has discovered a process of making a new kind of paint without the use of oil. He calls it Powdrpaint. It comes in the form of a dry powder and all that is required is cold water to make a paint weather proof, fire proof, and as durable as oil paint. It adheres to any surface, wood, stone or brick, spreads and looks like oil paint, and costs about one-fourth as much.

Write to Mr. A. L. Rice, Manuf'r, 274 North St., Adams, N. Y., and he will send you a free trial package, also color card and full information showing you how you can save a good many dollars. Write today.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The continued dark weather has kept up the prices on most flowers. The demand still holds for carnations and roses. Violets and bulbous stock are more plentiful. Sweet peas and pansies are coming in well. There are some excellent white snapdragons to be had.

St. Valentine's day promises a good business. Violets are already in demand for that day and the price will no doubt be a little higher.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, has been elected tree warden of that town.

Julius the Florist reports a lively trade in potted plants. He has had a good deal of funeral work lately, also.

James Garthley, of Fairhaven, who recently became a commercial florist, is doing a good business. Mr. Garthley is one of the oldest growers in this section, but until lately was in charge of the greenhouses of the Rogers estate.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held in the Public Library building Monday, February 1. W. M. P.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Market conditions are improving. The demand is better for all cut flowers. Carnations are in fine crop. Roses are improving rapidly. Bulbous stock is plentiful. Lilies, valley and greens are equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club staged a unique display at the pure food show held at the Coliseum last week. A booth showing old valentines dating back to 1830, and the newer valentines, consisting of flowers, was tastefully arranged. Baskets and corsages were arranged by the retailers, a different display being made each day. A lady attendant distributed circulars telling of the use of flowers as valentines. There were 18,000 circulars disposed of during the week. Much favorable comment was heard from all sides.

Final arrangements for the flower show to be held here November 10 to 14 by the Chrysanthemum Society of America have been made. Retailers' displays, as well as displays of roses and carnations, will be held in connection with the chrysanthemum show. Wigmore coliseum has been secured for the show. F. A. F.

The Market.

The market is cleaning up regularly each day. The supply is about the same as it was at the last writing, while the demand has increased greatly. Both local business and shipping business are good. The supply of roses and carnations is far short of the call for them. Lilies meet with a ready sale and help out nicely in the market. Tulips are coming in more strongly and are proving a welcome addition to the supply. Jonquils have a fair market.

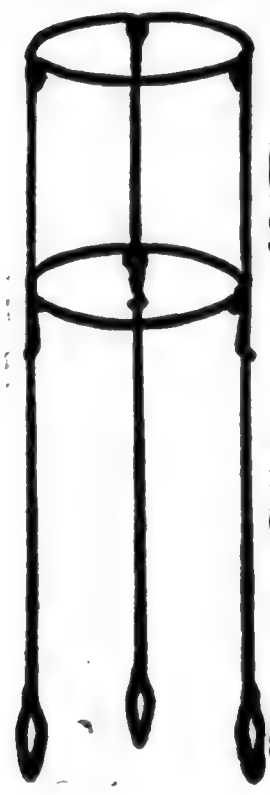
Flowers of especial interest for St. Valentine's day will undoubtedly be fairly plentiful. A good cut of fine sweet peas is coming to the market. Both double and single violets are fairly plentiful. The supply of orchids, too, is pretty fair.

Various Notes.

The Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses of the E. G. Hill Co. have been proving popular with the firm's trade in this city and vicinity.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market this winter to offer Dutch hyacinths.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has had some fine Murillo tulips.



E. G. Gillett reports that the call for wire hanging baskets is becoming extra strong.

Visitors include Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., New York; Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York; Frank J. Farney, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nurseries, New York, and Wm. C. Nolan, Portsmouth, O.

Build Your Greenhouse Now.

THERE are several plain, common-sense reasons why now is the time of times to build.

Materials are as cheap now as they will be in many a year to come.

Every day the war lasts means a larger and larger demand from Europe for our building materials, as soon as the war ends.

STEEL AND IRON.

Germany, the greatest iron and steel producing country of Europe, will not be able to supply the demand. She will not have able-bodied men enough to carry on the work. So Germany must turn to us for her main supply for some time to come.

Germany's present enemies will be slow to turn to Germany for their supply, even when she is able to furnish it. For a long time after the war is over, they will still continue to be enemies, which means such countries will buy largely from the United States.

All of which means that the demand will be so great that prices on all iron and steel will, without a doubt, go higher and higher for several years to come.

GLASS.

Glass is also bound to be higher, because practically all of the Belgian glass factories have been completely destroyed. If it's true that 40% of the world's glass supply has been coming from Belgium, then, with this supply entirely cut off, there will be a big demand for our glass, which is certain sure to make prices higher.

GOOD TIMES ARE HERE.

The big business men of our country say that "never before in its history will there be such prosperity as is now on the eve of starting."

So order your greenhouse as soon as possible. Contract for it before prices go higher.

Send for our commercial catalogue.

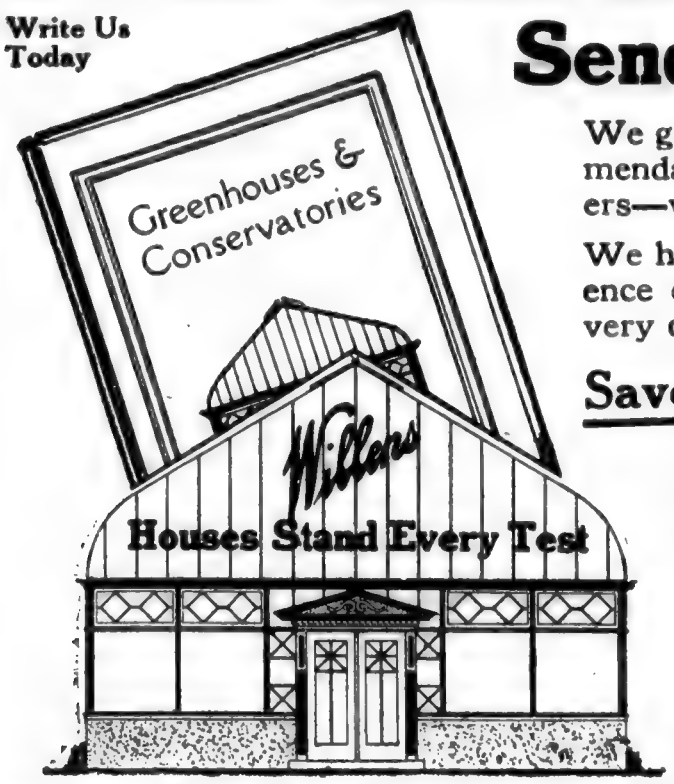
SMALL GODFREY CALLAS.

Will you kindly tell me how big Godfrey callas are when they start to bloom? Is it customary to dry them off during the summer? We never see any dry bulbs advertised for sale and seldom see offers of plants in anything larger than 2½-inch pots. P. W. M.



These callas, when they have made good, strong flowering roots, should be rested the same as the ordinary callas. While small they must not be rested, but should be grown on continuously until they are of flowering strength. It is a good plan to plant out these small plants in summer in well manured ground, potting them up early in September. Plants are much strengthened by being planted out. The small 2½-inch stock usually sold will not bloom to amount to anything for two or more years. C. W.

WORMS AND INSECTS ON LILIES.

I am sending under separate cover some lily bulbs on which you will find several kinds of insects and worms. One is a larva from which comes a small black fly, and another is what I call the ground thrips. There may be others. Kindly advise us what can be done to destroy them, for they are troublesome pests. E. S. & S.

The worms and insects had dried up so much in transit that they were not recognizable. To clean both worms and insects out of your soil will not be difficult. Secure a pound can of carbon bisulphide; the cost is usually 25 cents at retail. Make a hole three inches deep with a pointed stick in each lily pot, then pour in half a teaspoonful of the carbon bisulphide, immediately covering the hole. The gas from the liquid will speedily destroy all larvæ or insects in the soil and will not harm your plants. Do not use any naked lights near the carbon bisulphide, as it is explosive. Also keep it from your hands and clothes, as it is decidedly evil smelling. C. W.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

STYLISH STORE STEAMS UP SALES

Better your store and boost your sales. The one thing surely follows the other. It's not only logic; it's truth. Experience has proved time and again that betterment in appearance of a store is at once followed by improvement in profits. A good-looking store attracts people the same as a pretty girl.

ONCE in a while—not often, thank heaven—you hear a man say, "I've got a nice, steady trade. I should worry about the looks of my store. Why should I spend a lot of money just for a little style?" The man does himself an injustice, no doubt; he really does pay a little attention to the appearance of his store—he has it swept regularly, the windows washed every so often, and things kept more or less in order. But so far as busying his brain about improvement, he is correct in his statement, "he should worry," but doesn't.

The Worth of Worry.

Of course, as he says, or might say, his cash register never gets rusty. But, on the other hand, it will never wear out with overuse. Its tempo is always moderato. It doesn't play a funeral march—at least, it hasn't yet. However, that joyful, jumpy tune, the "Cash-Register Rag," is likewise outside its repertoire—and probably always will be.

It would pay him, as it would pay many others, who though they have never put them into words, entertain similar sentiments, to worry a little about looks. That is, give some serious, searching thought to the subject of "My Store; How It Looks and How It Might Look."

You ask why? Well, when you are going along the street, thinking about how rotten business is, or how much like dishrags that last cut of Killarneys looked, or how you might have bowled 200 the night before if you had only had three more strikes, distributed properly; when, I say, you are thus perambulating in a meditative mood, and something suddenly catches your eye, driving your thoughts thitherward, what is that something? Is it a bum, a workman, an ordinary business man, or some respectable representative of the modest male? Is it a prim and proper schoolma'am, or a plain and placid female person of fifty? Counsel for the defense will save the witness the bother of a reply by answering for him, it is not. No, it is some gaily clad little piece of femininity, whose power of attraction lies in her freshness—of youth, not of manner—and her good looks.

Now, don't be led away from the point by this flow of figurative language, but watch your step, and look for the moral. It is just this, that good looks are a powerful force of attraction, possibly second only to the force of gravity. And there are some kinds of gravity, a deacon's, for instance, that give way before the attraction of good looks.

For this reason, the attraction of good looks, the housewife patronizes the new grocery instead of the old one. Though it is only her imagination, she looks for dust on the cans and packages from the old, dark store, and seems to see brighter colors on the labels of those from the new store. So, though it, too, is perhaps only a figment of her fancy, she thinks that the roses from the old flower store are not quite so fresh as those from the new store up the street, or the carnations not quite so bright as those in the windows of the other place.

Human Nature.

Well, what of it, if it's only her imagination? Just this, that most people follow their feelings, whether they be fancy or fact, rather than the most logical conclusions reached through the exercise of their reasoning powers. The aforesaid housewife will agree with you that, in regard to both the grocer's and the florist's, she was led solely by her imagination, because she knows both places to be of the best. But she will continue to trade at the new stores; your arguments, and her agreement with them, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Convince Johnny, Jr., some night, that there are no inhabitants, natural or supernatural, in his dark bedroom, put the Bible in one hand and the Lives of the Saints in his other, and start him up the dark stairs singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." It is a safe bet that he will never reach the last line or the door of his bedroom. "He saw something," despite your arguments and his belief in their soundness.

Most people "see things," in a similar way, though not the same things. The dust on the can from the old grocery store was as unreal as Johnny's ghost, but the reason for it was the same—human nature.

The wise business man uses arguments when they are effective, but when they are not, he knows enough to make use of just this quality of human nature. It is human nature to prefer new things, good looking things,

New Store and Conservatory of Pierce & Co., Baltimore.

Interior of the Store of Pierce & Co., Showing Conservatory at the Rear.

fresh things, stylish, i. e., artistic things. That is why the old gown gives way to the new, last year's green hat to this year's style, the Bride rose to White Killarney, and the old store to the stylish, up-to-date one.

Some Song.

But to drive home the argument, we always have to come back to that joyful, jumpy jingle, the "Cash-Register Rag." If you can teach that in one lesson, you've got the goods. The way to show the reason why is to show the financial results. To find out these, just ask the man who has opened up a redecorated, improved, or new store, what were his receipts for the year before and the year after. Without exception, it will be found that the latter are the larger.

The old patrons feel that they are growing with the business when they learn that a new store is to be built, remodeled from the old or another one, or opened in the new building across the street; and their accounts usually increase a little. Others, not regular customers, come into the new place to look around. And for a score of other reasons, other persons add a sale and perhaps their patronage to the new establishment, all to the increase of the business and the profit of the proprietor.

Don't Fail to Read This.

Do not for an instant think that the foregoing has been written to convince the readers of The Review of the necessity of opening up a new store immediately; far from it. The writer has no relatives in the masons' or carpenters' unions, nor any other reasons for boosting the building business. The point we wish to make is, that looks count. Good looks count greatly to your advantage, whether they are personal or architectural, and their absence is to your disadvantage. The shortest way to point out this obvious truth, as well as the simplest, is to show the gain in business that comes to a new store and why it comes.

Now, these same results follow, in comparative measure, any improvement in your store or service. So don't misunderstand us, and think you must build a new store. Not at all. But by all means put in that show window, conservatory, new lighting system, or whatever it was, that came to your mind.

If nothing came to your mind, then look around. That's what we are driving at. Look around, and perhaps you will see something lacking, some possibility of improvement, or needed addition that will stir up trade for you.

Just for Illustration.

Just for illustration was an unfortunate heading to put over the description of the new store of Pierce & Co., Baltimore, for, apart from this subject, their House of Flowers deserves full mention on its merits.

E. W. Pierce started business at 50[illegible] Charles street in October, 1910, and rapidly increased it, until he, with others, incorporated Pierce & Co. a short while ago, and had built the store at the corner of Charles and Hamilton streets that is now known as the House of Flowers.

The store itself is 25x88, with a conservatory 25x50 in the rear. The second floor of the building is given over to what is known as the Flower Store Studio. This will later lead out to a roof garden on the section just in front of the conservatory. The three large windows, of much value for display purposes, must be mentioned. Most of the other features of the establishment speak for themselves through the three illustrations given herewith. Perhaps the object in the center of the picture of the conservatory does not explain itself as fully as words might. This is a hollow tree trunk, of more than ordinary size and of concrete, which serves as a fish pond. The stubs of the branches hold potted ferns.

So good a store, on so good a location, on the way from a high-class residential district to a stylish shopping street, cannot fail to draw within its doors an increasing number of patrons. Why, you have learned in the body of this article, if you read it.

THE PREVENTION OF WASTE.

Using the Odds and Ends.

The old adage, "Economy is wealth," is just as potent as it ever was and is of vast importance in every phase of the florists' business. The profits on plants and cut flowers are large enough proportionately to allow for the inevitable losses. Therefore, if the losses are minimized by careful planning and by the utilizing of odds and ends to good advantage, the profits can be increased fifty per cent or more on the actual net proceeds.

This age of opulence has made employees careless about utilizing the little things and turning them into cash. All over this country men with brains and executive capacity have been engaged in the florists' business for years, yet have accumulated but a small proportion of the wealth which has gone through their fingers and which might have been theirs had they been more careful of the apparently insignificant things which are going unheeded from day to day in their stores and greenhouses.

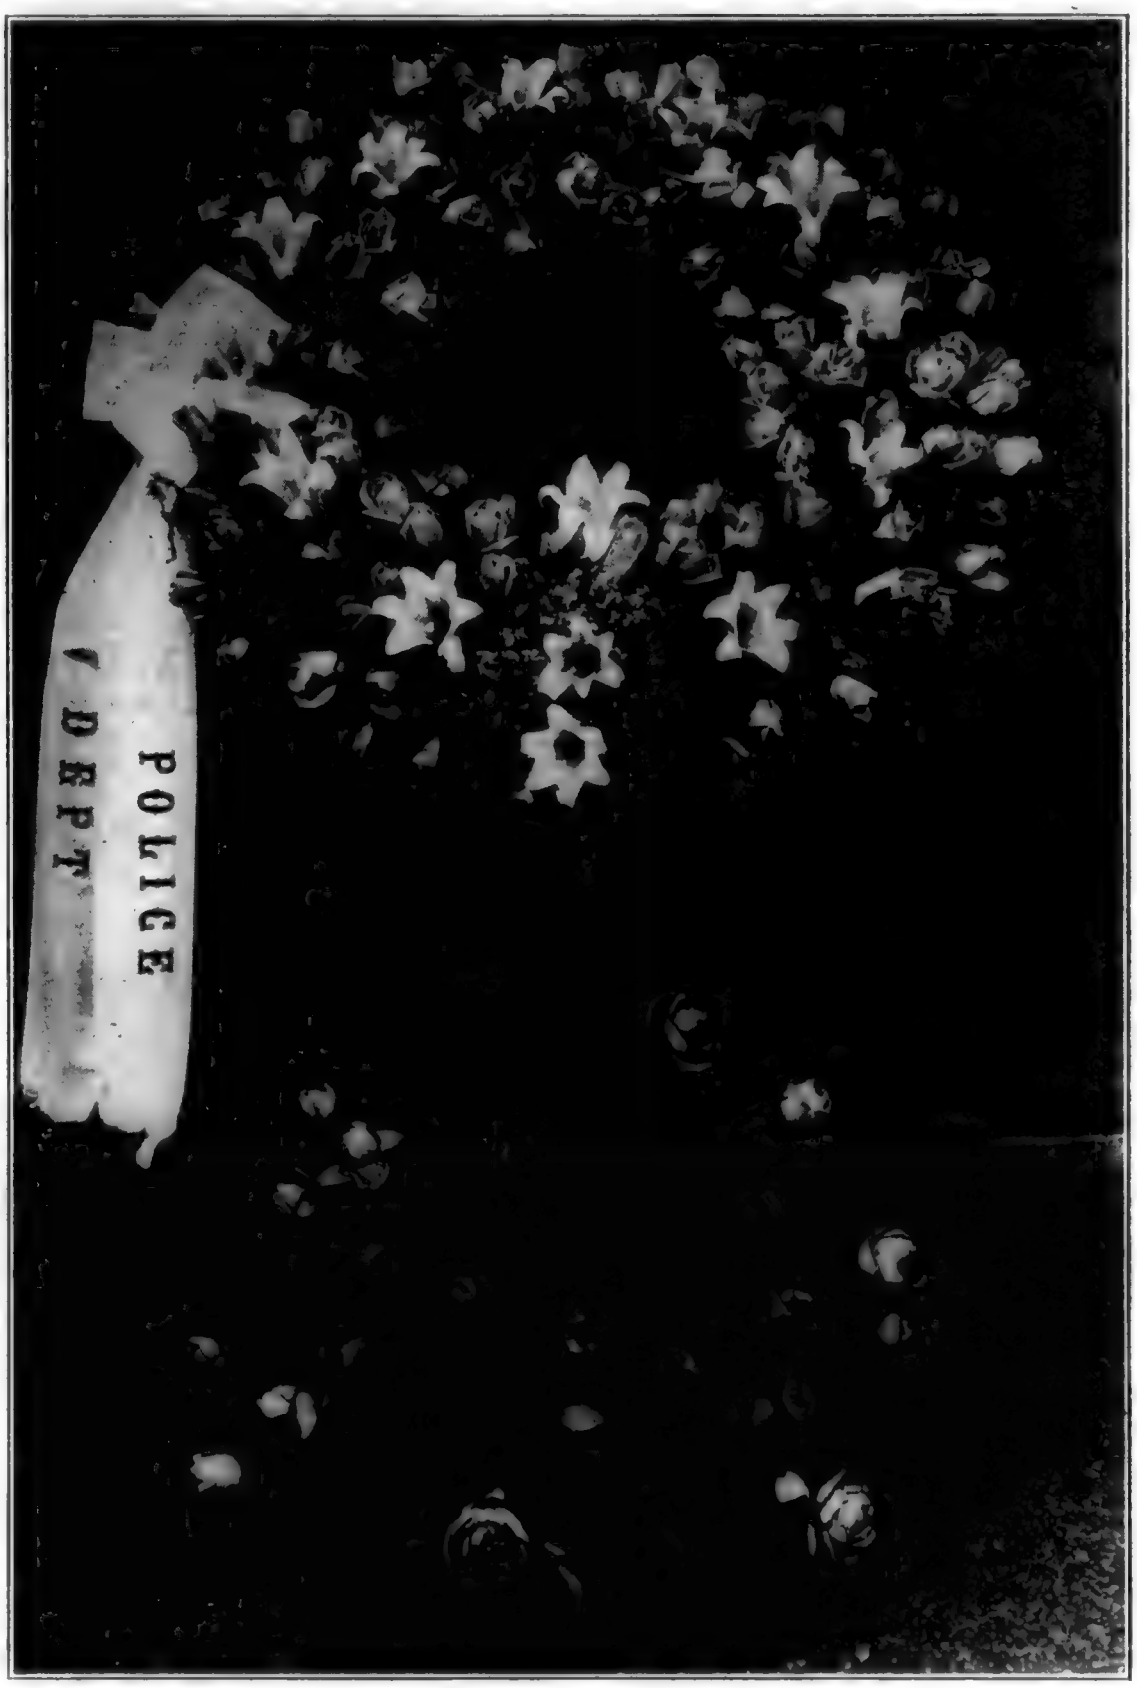
The odds and ends in cut flowers can be utilized in many ways, instead of being thrown on the floor and finally into the rubbish box. Carnations, roses, etc., which are broken by accident in the stock room, should be saved and put into the refrigerator, for use in design and corsage work by the store force at their earliest convenience. If the stems are carefully and neatly mended there can be no objection on the part of the purchaser, for these flowers are not intended to be put into water and naturally they would not be expected to bring the same price as perfect flowers. There is a big field here for the ingenious designer in originating designs that will utilize the short-stemmed and broken heads of flowers which frequently are cast aside as waste.



Special sales can be held, to turn into cash any stock which is not perfectly fresh, but which can be disposed of at a lower price, instead of being charged up to the loss account.

A Daily Inventory.

An inventory of stock each evening is a great asset. The manager should look over the orders for the following day and then order what is needed from the wholesaler, allowing a reasonable surplus stock for the day's business. It is well, too, to stop ordering the things which do not sell and to increase the supply of goods for which there is a demand, also introducing novelties and the season's varieties as they appear in turn in the wholesale market.

The flower-buying game has been likened to a gambler's lot; nevertheless, a conservative and rational buyer is sure to strike a happy medium, which will be profitable. Then, with our wholesale houses within easy access, emergencies can be met and a large supply of almost anything will be available at short notice.

To be overgenerous is a pernicious habit. Giving fourteen or fifteen flowers to a patron when he is paying for one dozen only may be really generous, but it is decidedly unprofitable. If one is not careful, this habit of giving too much for value received will run into dollars. This is also true of the giving of too large a quantity of asparagus and other greens with flowers. At the end of the month these unprofitable deals will have grown to amazing proportions. E. C. A.

PAPWORTH FIGHTS RAILROAD.

Harry Papworth has been adding to the gaiety of life in New Orleans by the resistance he has made to the efforts of the Orleans-Kenner Electric railway to acquire a right of way through the grounds of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., "cutting off my front steps," as Mr. Papworth puts it. Mr. Papworth has resorted to every legal device to block the road, and the various appearances in court have attracted a great deal of newspaper attention. It developed that Mr. Papworth, president of the company, asked $94,334 for the 30-foot right of way. In the suit Mr. Papworth itemized his damages thus: Strip of land, $29,334; ornamental trees on it, $30,000; residence, $15,000; depreciation in value to rest of tract, $20,000. Thereupon the attorney for the railroad dug out of the parish records the following figures, which were introduced as evidence: Assessment value of the land, $10,000; improvements, including the residence and trees, $300.

"Mr. Papworth's residence," the attorney said, "was built in 1913. According to the terms of the contract with the builder, which is recorded in the mortgage office, the residence cost $4,750 to build. Mr. Papworth asks us to pay $15,000, not for the residence, but as damages because we propose to lay tracks about forty feet away from it. He asks $30,000 for the ornamental trees, though by his own sworn statement to the assessor, the trees and that $15,000 house of his are worth just $300. He asks $29,334 for the one and one-third acres the Kenner road seeks to expropriate, or about 100 times the assessed value of the strip."

The jury, February 4, placed a valuation of $300 on the right of way and awarded damages of $450, a total of $750. An appeal was taken. It is suggested, however, that one of the penalties to be paid for the fun Mr. Papworth has had with the railroad will be a boost in his assessment for taxation.

WREATH OF ROSES AND LILIES.

One of the handsomest pieces at the recent funeral of Adolph Asch, a prominent member of the Indianapolis police force, was that sent by the police department of that city. It was made by C. H. Bookedis, the Claypool Hotel Florist. The completed piece, which is shown in the illustration on this page, was more than five feet high. The wreath was composed of pink roses, Easter lilies and violets. The base was of American Beauty roses.

Geraniums

WINTER-BLOOMING GERANIUMS.

While there is a nice, steady bottom heat in the sand, geraniums are easily and quickly propagated. You may have stock plants to take cuttings from, or tops of fall-rooted stock may be at your disposal. These winter-rooted geraniums will not equal in size such as were propagated in September, but they will make nice stock in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, and, as the demand for geraniums seems almost insatiable, exceeding that for any other bedding plant, you cannot go far wrong in rooting all possible cuttings.

Grow the fall-rooted geraniums fairly cool, to keep them stocky, and give them a fresh stand occasionally, at the same time removing all moldy or dying leaves. You may have to cut down the plants fairly hard when taking cuttings, and it is well to remember that until the plants start to break away freely again, water must be applied in reduced quantities.

Do not overlook the scented-leaved geraniums when propagating. About every customer likes to get one or two plants of these and, if you have a few stock plants either on a bench or in pots, they will give you an abundance of cuttings and you have still ample time to make good plants of these before bedding-out time arrives.

Where any diseased plants appear it is best to throw them away at once, to prevent the trouble from spreading. Where only occasional leaves are found affected, pick them off. Keep the atmosphere for geraniums always on the dry side. Do not spray the plants overhead. Air freely on every possible occasion. Cleanliness, a fairly low temperature and a dry, buoyant atmosphere will keep your plants clean if anything will. Also bear in mind that to grow them so that they will flower freely they must not be kept saturated like aquatics, nor must liquid manure be given. Each of these helps to produce a green, but soft and poor flowering plant.

Where geraniums for Christmas flowering are desired, cuttings should be rooted between now and March 1. The best plan is to put each cutting singly in a 2-inch pot containing sandy loam. Stand them where they can have some bottom heat and in the full sun. In rooting geraniums no shade whatever is necessary.

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

We have about 8,000 geranium plants in one greenhouse; the varieties are Bruant, La Favorite, Nutt and Poitevine. About 1,000 of these are affected as is the specimen sent with this letter, but the affected plants are all Bruant and La Favorite; the others show no sign of the trouble. You will note that the plants do not break as they should. The center shoot seems to harden and the plant stops growing. All the stock has received the same treatment. The plants were propagated from cuttings which were put in during September and November, and rooted in the greenhouse where they now are. They have had a temperature of 65 degrees during the day and 50 to 55 degrees at night. New soil was used and the greenhouse is new. Some shredded cattle manure was mixed with the compost. The trouble seems to develop about the time the plants reach 2½-inch pots, but it is also showing on some of the stock plants. Please tell us whether it is some recognized geranium disease, or whether the stock simply is running out?

L. G. N. C.

The plant forwarded had foliage quite red in appearance and considerably spotted. This is a fairly common trouble. The cause no one seems able to determine as yet. Your treatment seems to have been all right, except that the temperature given the plants would have been better 5 to 8 degrees lower; 50 degrees at night should be the maximum. Air freely and let the atmosphere be kept on the dry side always. Also, let the plants dry out well between the waterings. Do not throw any decayed leaves or other rubbish on the floors or below the benches, as these would only aggravate the evil. Cleanliness will stamp it out if anything will. Spray affected batches with Fungine or Bordeaux mixture.

Try fine bone in lieu of shredded cattle manure when potting, and compare results. Animal manures cause a somewhat soft growth, which flowers sparsely and is susceptible to disease. The bone makes plants have a hard, short-jointed growth, which flowers freely. Throw away badly affected plants and keep others picked over. This may mean considerable work, but keep at it. Keep your houses clean, sweet and well aired and I think you will overcome the trouble. I do not believe the stock is running out.

Sweet Peas

CROSS EXAMINATION.

I have two new houses, 26x100 and 28x100. As I have no benches in them as yet, I would like to get a good crop of sweet peas for spring, so kindly answer the following inquiries:

Q. When would it be necessary to plant them to have them in bloom by June 1, 1915?

A. If you use the regular outdoor Spencer sweet peas, which will be the most satisfactory for flowering at the time named, sow about March 10. The plants will probably flower a little earlier than June 1, but will be in good crop at that date.

Q. Should the seeds be started in pots or sowed in the solid beds?

A. Either in small pots, or, better, in flats, and transplanted from them to the beds. This is a more certain and satisfactory plan than sowing in the beds.

Q. What varieties are best, and where is the best place to buy fresh seed?

A. A few good varieties are: Nora Unwin or White Spencer, white; Improved Helen Lewis, orange pink; Countess Spencer or Hercules, light rose pink; Florence Nightingale, lavender; Asta Ohn, lavender suffused mauve; Thomas Stevenson, orange scarlet; John Ingman, rose. The best selling colors in order of popularity are pink, white and lavender. It is better not to grow too many varieties. Buy your seed of one of the advertisers in The Review.

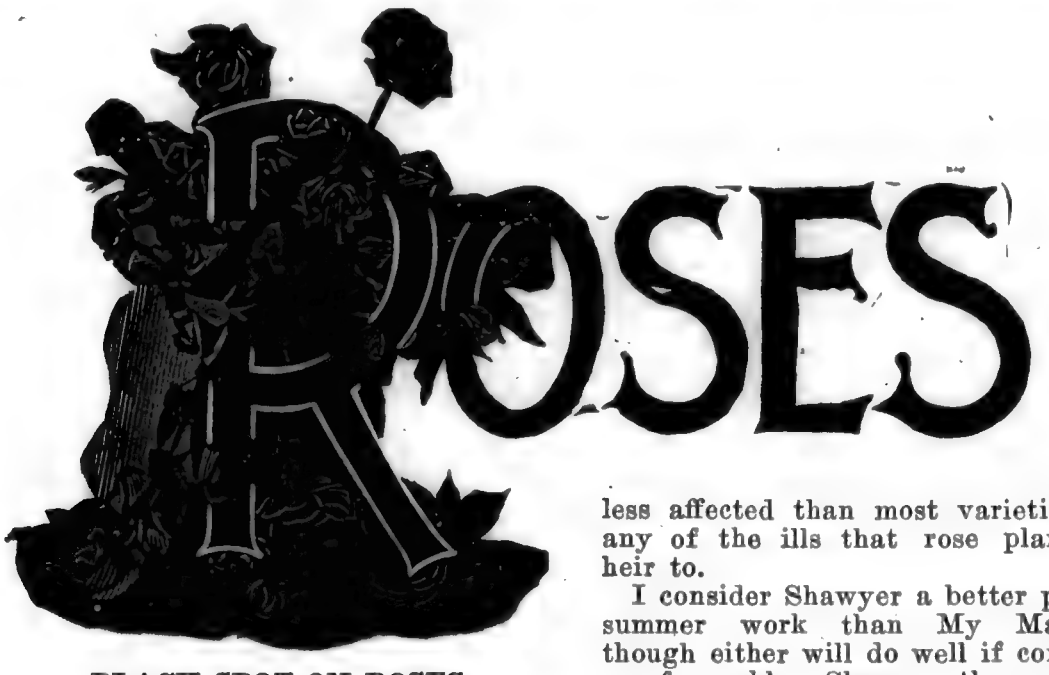
Q. Name the best pure pink variety.

A. Hercules is probably as fine a pure pink variety as we have. It is a glorified Countess Spencer.

Q. If seed is started in beds, how should the beds be made?

A. They want soil of good depth; twenty-four inches is not too much. Any good, friable loam with plenty of rotted cow manure worked in will suit them. It is better if not too retentive. If the soil is heavy, use some sand or road scrapings to give it more porosity. Soil must be rich for good results. In addition, the plants will need occasional top-dressings or feedings with liquid manure.

Q. What temperature should they be kept at during the night and in the daytime?



A. Start at 45 degrees at night. As the buds show give 50 degrees. The latter is a good temperature while flowering. Do not let it go above 55 degrees unless the weather is hot. Allow a rise of 8 to 10 degrees on cloudy days and 15 to 20 degrees on sunny days. Air freely, commencing when the thermometer reaches 58 to 60 degrees.

Q. How often should they have water?

A. Everything depends on weather conditions and on how well your beds are drained. Sweet peas need a generous water supply in early summer.

Q. How can I get rid of green aphis on some vines now?

A. Fumigate with tobacco papers or some other nicotine preparation, or spray with some insecticide. Fumigation, however, is the best remedy.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSES.

Our rose gardens were last year badly affected with black spot, which half stripped the foliage from our Killarney, Cochet, Sunburst, Marshall P. Wilder and Mrs. John Laing. Chateau de Clos Vougeot and Wm. R. Smith were not so bad. The hybrid teas are now covered for the winter, so we cannot give them a dormant spray without uncovering, which might be dangerous at this season. Can you recommend any soil treatment or spraying that will overcome this trouble, as we want to plant about 500 new roses in the same garden this spring? Last October I had trenches made two feet deep for the new roses to be planted this spring. We put two inches of coal cinders on the bottom, then two inches of tobacco stems and filled in with good soil, mixing in some bone meal. On top we put a mulch of cattle manure from the Kansas City stock yards, which will be turned under before planting. Is there anything else that will help?

B. W. L.

You do not state what kind of plants you are using—probably stock propagated under glass and set out from 3-inch and 4-inch pots. These plants lack the vigor of grafted stock which has been grown in the open air and are always more susceptible to attacks of blight. If you use greenhouse propagated roses, select grafted in preference to own-root ones, but the outdoor stock is far and away the best and hardiest. I would give the stems a spraying with Bordeaux mixture or lime-sulphur when uncovered. Also, spray occasionally through the growing season with Bordeaux or Fungine. Your soil preparation is good, but the manure would be better incorporated with the soil the fall before planting.

ROSES FOR SUMMER FORCING.

Which is the better red rose for summer forcing indoors, Rhea Reid or Prince d'Arenberg? Or is there a better one than either of these? Which is the better pink rose for summer forcing, Maryland or Shawyer? Is Cecile Brunner a summer bloomer?

R. E. M.

Prince d'Arenberg is a much better rose for summer, or for winter either, than Rhea Reid. A new rose that has established a wonderful reputation for itself as a summer rose is Francis Scott Key. It is as large and seems to be less affected than most varieties with any of the ills that rose plants are heir to.

I consider Shawyer a better pink for summer work than My Maryland, though either will do well if conditions are favorable. Shawyer throws a crop quickly, is most persistent in holding its color and is a marvelous rose in every way. It has one fault in some sections; it is subject to mildew. It has never bothered us in that way here, but I cannot say whether it would bother R. E. M. in Oklahoma. Maryland, while practically mildew-proof, is a slow-growing rose and will not produce nearly as long stems as will Shawyer.

Cecile Brunner is a dainty midsummer rose. If R. E. M. is not acquainted with it, I would say it is too small for any but the most delicate work. It is as good a small rose as any in that type. These roses are not disbudded, but are grown in light, graceful sprays.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The exhibition of the American Rose Society, March 18 to 21, is being taken well in hand by the Boston horticultural interests, with the determination to provide an exhibition of the highest class.

The society has already received twenty special prizes, besides the regulars. A special prize a little different from anything that has been offered before is made by the Glenfrew Farm, Sewickley, Pa., for the best dozen roses grown by an amateur. There may be two varieties. Commercial rose growers may not compete, as it is solely for amateurs—a silver cup valued at $20. This prize is given to encourage lovers of roses, as the English society has been doing for years.

Free tickets to the show will be issued to all members.

IT IS A SANTOLINA.

We are enclosing a specimen of a border plant which we picked up last fall. Can you tell us the name of the plant and how it is propagated? It grew about eight to ten inches high.

F. C. F. B.

Santolina Chamæcyparissus incana is the name of the specimen forwarded. It is a useful bedding plant, being often used in carpeting designs, as its silver foliage is quite effective. When used in this work it needs frequent clipping or pinching. It also makes a neat individual shrubbery plant. The soft shoots root with the greatest ease at any time in a warm propagating bench.

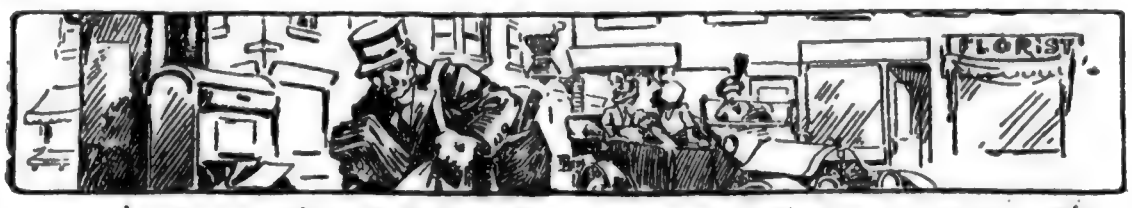
London, England.—Word has come from the front in Belgium of many troops being billeted in abandoned greenhouses, which make excellent winter quarters, as usually they can be heated.



London, England.—It is said the growers of cucumbers under glass have been harder hit by the war than any other members of the trade, especially as large quantities of cucumbers have been exported to Germany during the winter and this trade now is cut off. Prices in January were less than half those of last year.

Ghent, Belgium.—Some of the growers here are making great effort to keep business going. Louis Van Houtte has just sent out an English catalogue, of begonias, gloxinias, etc., in which it is stated that his address during the war will be "Sas of Ghent, Holland, to be called for." Shipments are being made by canal to Rotterdam.

Paris, France.—A sign of improving times is that the Societe Nationale d'Horticulture de France has resumed its work, which had been suspended from August to December. The first meeting was held January 14, when there was a large attendance. There will now be meetings on the second Thursday of each month.

Orleans, France.—It is the general report at the nurseries, both here and at Angiers, that continental business is almost nil and British orders light, but that American trade has been as good as ever, in some cases rather ahead of other years.

Dresden, Saxony.—Otto Bartsch, florist, 37 years of age, has written to a relative in America: "You may be surprised that I have not yet been called to the colors. As far as business here is concerned, we have no cause for complaint; even our Christmas trade was good. Now, after the holidays, it will no doubt let up some, since there will be no large balls and weddings for a time. Well, that is not going to hurt us, for otherwise we have noticed no effects of the war in Dresden. If it were not for the occasional appearance of the wounded and a visit to the hospital, our auto filled with roses in our largest vases, we would scarcely know there was such a thing as war in the land. You ought to see the floral splendors of our military hospital—a veritable paradise of bloom—and great is the delight of the soldiers at the spectacle. We are in receipt of many cards from the trenches asking us to send flowers rather than cigars and chocolate to the front, and you may be sure we do our utmost."

OPEN LETTERS from READERS.

MORE ABOUT AVERAGE PROFITS.

I noted an inquiry from S. C. C., of Kansas City, Mo., on page 14 of The Review of January 28, with reference to what could be made from two houses, each 36x200, one planted with carnations and the other with roses. The inquiry was answered in a general way by A. F. J. Baur. As I have had some experience in the vicinity of both Kansas City and Omaha, as an employee in charge, possibly a few approximate figures based on my experience would not come amiss.

S. C. C. does not state whether he expects to wholesale or retail his crops; consequently it would only be speculation to try to figure the cost of production and marketing and the probable receipts, but, provided the houses are in the hands of a first-class grower, I believe a good general idea of the productiveness of two such houses can be given.

The rose house, if planted with Killarneys, Richmonds, Sunbursts, Shawyers or Russells, would contain about 4,250 plants. If planted with Beauties, it would contain about 3,750 plants. The Killarneys, Shawyers or Richmonds, under proper culture, ought to produce not less than twenty-five to thirty flowers per plant and under the best of conditions might exceed even that number. Beauties under the best conditions, judging from many years' experience in growing them, are giving a good account of themselves if they produce from ten to fifteen good, marketable flowers in a season, say from September 1 to June 1 or 15.

I would be inclined to doubt the expediency of growing Beauties in a place of that size, unless both houses were devoted to them and there was a certainty of being able to dispose of them. My experience with Sunburst here, in the vicinity of Fremont, Neb., has been that it will not produce as many flowers per plant as our other standard forcing varieties.

The carnation house would hold about 6,900 plants and A. F. J. B.'s estimate of an average of fifteen flowers per plant on Enchantress varieties is applicable to the Kansas City district. I am of the opinion, however, that S. C. C. would be more likely to find the market glutted with carnations in Kansas City than he would with a good quality of roses. Kansas City possesses some fine carnation growers; they certainly produce the goods.

I figure that the ten benches will require in the neighborhood of 190 to 200 cubic yards of soil or compost. Fuel in the Kansas City district is much cheaper than at Chicago or Omaha, and, as the warm season is longer at Kansas City, it would require less to heat the same area of glass there than in the other two districts.

Now, if S. C. C. will take these figures and compute the cost of soil, fuel, stock of plants, etc.; if he will then get as accurate information as possible from the wholesalers and commission men of Kansas City as to the probable average price he would receive for his crops, and if he will also add to the expenses the probable cost of the services of a first-class grower and one good helper, he ought to arrive at an approximate estimate of what he would net from two such houses, providing he had good luck and anything like a normal season. If, as I judge, he is already running an area of glass in other crops, he ought to be able to get at the cost of maintenance, interest on investment, wear and tear on equipment, houses, etc., better than anyone unacquainted with the local conditions.

FERTILIZER FOR SMILAX.

I wish to ask you for some information on smilax. I am just about half through cutting the first crop, which was planted in July on raised benches, in five inches of soil. Kindly tell me how to treat it from now on, stating what chemical or commercial fertilizers to use and what quantity per bench, as I cannot get manure, except a little for mulch. Can nitrate of soda be sprinkled on the surface, or must it be dissolved in water and applied with a can? Also, is this fertilizer good for carnations and what quantity should be used? A. S. C.

After the crop is cut, the smilax should be kept somewhat drier for a week or two, until the new growth gets a start, but if your stock is planted on a bench it will take more water than it would when grown in a solid bed. Then give a mulch of good stable manure, cow manure being the best fertilizer to use for smilax.

I would not advise the use of nitrate of soda for this purpose, as it is likely to make the smilax too soft, so that it would not keep. For the same reason it is not a good fertilizer to use on carnations, for it makes the flowers too soft. One of the best chemicals to use for stiffening weak growth on carnations is kainit, which may be mixed with some soil and applied as a top-dressing in the proportion of ten to fifteen pounds of kainit to 500 square feet of bench, at intervals of two to three weeks. Legislation and Legal Decisions

STOCK FROZEN IN TRANSIT.

Shippers of plants and other stock perishable through freezing will be interested in a decision handed down the other day by the Maine Supreme Judicial court in the case of Ross vs. Maine Central Railroad Co., 90 Atlantic Reporter 711. The case involved a shipment of potatoes, but the legal principles announced by the court are equally applicable to the transportation of florists' and nurserymen's stock. It is held that a railroad company in Maine which received a shipment intended for final delivery at a point on another line in New Jersey did not impliedly agree to heat the cars, by loading the goods on "heater" cars furnished for the purpose by a connecting railroad company, where the receiving company merely issued a bill of lading over its own line; but that the connecting road which issued a receipt for full through heater charges did impliedly agree to heat the cars to their destination. In holding that the initial carrier was not liable for any damage sustained through failure to keep the cars heated, but that the connecting line was, the Supreme Judicial court said:

"If the Bangor Railway & Electric Co. was under no obligation under its general bill of lading to heat the cars, and we think that it was not, it is difficult to perceive upon what ground it can be held liable for the nonperformance of a special agreement to heat, made by a connecting carrier. We think that such responsibility is not contemplated by the Carmack amendment." (The Carmack amendment is the act of Congress which makes an initial carrier of a through interstate shipment liable for loss arising on a connecting line.) "The agreement to heat made by the defendant was incidental to its general duty as a carrier under the bills of lading issued by it, and must be construed with them. The defendant was the first carrier to contract with the shipper with respect to heating. And we think that, as to defaults in heating during the course of transportation, it is to be deemed the initial carrier. We may properly add that the point seems to be a novel one in cases involving a construction of the Carmack amendment. Our attention has been called to no case, and we have found none, like this one. We base our conclusion upon what seems to us to be a reasonable construction of the statute."

It was further claimed by defendant railway company, on review of the case in the Supreme Judicial court, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages for defendant's failure to keep the cars heated, because there was no showing that a claim for damages had been presented within four months, as required by the terms of the bills of lading, but the court decided that this defense was waived by failing to plead the same in the trial court. S.

LATE PROPAGATING.

Need for Care.

The cuttings put into sand will need close watching from this time on. Not only will the bottom heat be less steady, but the sun is gaining strength from day to day, which necessitates more ventilating on bright days, and that means greater danger from drafts.

There is perhaps nothing so vexatious to the propagator as a warm, windy day. A cutting that is drawing water nicely will stand considerable sun without serious injury, but let a warm draft waft over a batch of newly stuck cuttings a few hours, and they will be wilted beyond reviving. On such days the curtain is not sufficient protection. We have found that a light spraying in the morning, in case a thorough watering is not needed, will start off the cuttings for the day in a nice, fresh condition. Later, when the ventilators are raised to admit enough draft to be noticeable, we cover the cuttings with newspapers, leaving them on until the vents are lowered again in the afternoon. It is advisable to remove the papers just as early as it can be done without injury to the cuttings.

If you succeed in keeping the cuttings in a fresh condition during the first three weeks at this time of the year, you can count on at least a fair strike. But be careful all the time that you do not overdo these things, for on your ability to gauge exactly the amount of spraying and shading needed will depend your success. An abundance of good, strong cuttings should be available now, so don't take anything undersized. A small cutting taken early in January will make up its deficiency with good care, but there is not time for that this late in the season.

For Red Spider.

During the last two years I have recommended a formula, made up of sugar and arsenic, for fighting red spider. The formula was given me by a friend, who had used it with good results. We tried it out thoroughly before recommending it and not only found it effective where other remedies had failed, but also found it quite safe, so far as injury to the stock was concerned.

The formula is as follows: Take one-half pound of arsenic and mix it into five pounds of white sugar, mixing it dry. Then add enough water to make a thick syrup. When applying to the plants, use one ounce of the syrup to one gallon of water. Spray with a fine sprayer.

A few days ago we received a letter from a grower who had occasion to use this remedy for spider and he reports disastrous results. He states that he had used it with good results twice, but the third time it practically ruined his plants. He further states that on the first two occasions the mixture was made exactly according to directions, but the third time, an employee who had been intrusted with the work boiled the syrup, thinking to make a better job of it.

We are advised, on good authority, that the boiling of the syrup was entirely responsible for the mischief done. The boiling so changed the chemical properties of the mixture as to intensify the burning effect of the arsenic, and instead of the sugar retarding the burning of the arsenic, the boiling produced from it an acid that aggravated the burning. This shows how dangerous it is for anyone who is not experienced in such matters to experiment with chemical formulas. Experiments of this nature should always be conducted on a small scale, and certainly no employee should ever do anything of this kind without the full knowledge of his employer. We trust that every grower who intends using this formula will take heed and mix it exactly according to directions. The chemist advises me that no harm should ever result to the plants if it is used as recommended.

CUT OR BREAK THEM OFF?

Should carnations be cut or broken off? T. N.

Carnations are better when broken off. Unless you want specially long stems for exhibition purposes, it is much easier to break them off than to cut them. C. W.

CARNATIONS AT FRAMINGHAM.

W. R. Nicholson.

At the Pleasant Hill Conservatories carnations are still the leading specialty, as they have been since 1890, when Grace Wilder, Astoria, F. Mangold, Heinze's White, Portia and Mrs. Fisher were some of the more noteworthy sorts. A quarter of a century has seen a wonderful development in the divine flower, and houses which, at the earlier period, seemed up-to-date, appear now to be quite antiquated.

All the leading carnations are grown here. In whites, Matchless looked remarkably well and had averaged eight flowers per plant to February 1, but White Wonder seemed much more prolific, as well as longer-stemmed and purer in color. In light pink, Pink Delight has still no serious competitor. Laura Weber did not appear to bloom with particular freedom. In the darker shades of pink, Philadelphia was doing well; Rosette had a splendid, even color. Mrs. C. W. Ward, while pretty, was more variable. Benora filled the entire bill as a white variegated. A pure white sport has appeared and should prove valuable.

Beacon is freer and of better color than Champion. The foliage of Champion has a droopy appearance, almost suggesting wilt. This is not saying, however, that it is not a good carnation. Commodore proves to be too small. Fenn is still grown as a crimson, but Mr. Nicholson has a good seedling under trial. Some Gorgeous are grown, but the color varies a great deal.

In addition to carnations, yellow marguerites are here grown in quantity; also Freesia Purity, the Godfrey calla and mignonette. The last named is of grand quality. Gypsophila repens is grown in boxes, on shelves in the carnation houses, and proves a profitable crop. Spencer peas are grown on the posts in the carnation houses.

S. J. Goddard.

At S. J. Goddard's, Gloriosa as a light pink is still retained. Mr. Goddard says it has averaged as many flowers per square foot as any carnation he grows. Helen Goddard, while somewhat small, is still grown as a rose-pink. Rosette was looking well. Some Gorgeous is also grown. Beacon and Champion are grown as scarlets; Beacon seemed the more prolific, but Champion will be given another good trial. White Wonder and White Perfection were flowering with great freedom; Matchless also looked fine. Yellow Prince and Yellowstone seemed equally good.

Benora is grown as a variegated sort. A pretty seedling in the way of the old Minnie Cook was noted. Fenn is the best crimson, on account of its remarkable freedom, but Mr. Goddard has several splendid, rich crimson seedlings that we may expect to hear more of. About 2,500 Alice will be planted the coming season. Marguerites, both white and yellow, are well grown here; also English primroses, freesias, antirrhinums and a variety of other plants and flowers useful for the local retail trade.

John A. Nelson.

Two houses, 35x354 and 24x365, are planted with carnations at Mr. Nelson's, about 40,000 plants being used. Fewer varieties are grown here than on many places, but the plants are all in superb condition and worthy of a long journey to see. Mr. Nelson never showed any flowers previous to the Buffalo convention, but I venture the opinion that his carnations will be no strangers to the exhibitions in the future. It would indeed be a misfortune if such splendid flowers as are grown here could not be set up at the exhibitions.

Pink Delight here was wonderfully fine. White Perfection, White Enchantress and White Wonder fairly made one gasp. The White Enchantress, as grown here, was equal to the finest Matchless I have yet seen. Champion is grown, but hardly equaled Beacon. Winsor and Enchantress are both splendid, but will probably be dropped another season. Mr. Nelson does not know what to replace Winsor with. I never before saw the old Harry Fenn bloom as it does here. A batch of 2,000 plants was a sea of crimson, and individual pickings of 1,600 and 1,750 have been made from it. The daily pick here is from 1,800 to 2,500, and no finer flowers go to the Boston market. Three small houses are devoted to single violets. Some Nelrose and Phelps' White snapdragons are grown, and sweet peas prove a profitable crop, tied to the greenhouse posts.

J. T. Butterworth.

While orchids are the great specialty at Mr. Butterworth's, carnations are grown in two houses. The varieties are Yellow Prince, Beacon, White Wonder, Pink Delight, Rosette, Mrs. Cheney and Winsor. Dutch bulbous flowers are also forced in large numbers here.

Cattleya labiata was making a fine display at the time of my visit. The cattleyas and, in fact, all the orchids here show surprising vigor. Mr. Butterworth is not constantly depending on new importations. He has the knack of carrying his plants along for many years, increases them and makes sickly specimens, which many would throw away in sheer despair, take on luxuriant health.

I noticed a splendid batch of 350 Miltonia vexillaria and an equal number of Odontoglossum crispum in grand health. The latter were reveling in a wide lean-to house built in 1848! All the yellow forms of Cypripedium insigne were growing like weeds. Of the beautiful Cymbidium insigne I counted over fifty fine plants. Dendrobium Jamesianum was producing grand growths and D. nobile and Wardianum would soon be in full crop. The orchid houses here are not new, but the plants evidently relish their surroundings and their treatment. Nowhere in New England are finer specimen cattleyas to be found than here. W. N. Craig.

CHICAGO CONCERNS BURNED OUT.

Randall and Amling Losers.

Fire that originated from unknown causes destroyed the building at 68 and 70 East Randolph street, Chicago, together with practically all its contents, early in the morning of February 14. It was a structure of five stories and basement, 40x160. The street floor was occupied by the wholesale cut flower commission house of the E. C. Amling Co., the second floor by the wholesale cut flower commission department of the A. L. Randall Co., and the basement and three upper floors by that concern's stock of florists' supplies. The fire was one of the most spectacular the downtown Chicago district has seen in years. The building was completely gutted, the roof and four upper floors falling in, and the loss totals something like $165,000. The individual losses are estimated as follows:

W. P. Stewart, building	$ 75,000
A. L. Randall Co., store and fixtures	85,000
E. C. Amling Co., fixtures	3,000
W. R. Eagle, cigar stand stock	2,000
Total	$165,000

The Randall concern, of which Emil Buettner is president and A. L. Randall treasurer, is well covered by insurance. There was $79,000 on the stock in the burned building, with $10,000 on stock stored on the fifth floor of the next building east. Here the loss was light, being caused by smoke and water. The inventory taken January 1 showed stock on hand in the main building and in storage as $108,000. It is thought the stock had been reduced somewhat since then. A. L. Randall said February 15 that, while it would be impossible to state the loss with accuracy until the books were available, he estimated it as about $85,000 and felt that the insurance would nearly cover.

The loss of the E. C. Amling Co., on the street floor, was principally on its iceboxes. The fire started on one of the upper floors, which fell in, and water in torrents ran over the boxes for hours. The inconvenience of seeking a new location at a moment's notice constitutes the principal loss.

The building to the east, the top floor of which is used by Randall's for storage, is the city home of Poehlmann Bros. Co., the cut flower department being on the second floor and the florists' supplies department on the fourth floor. The Poehlmann concern sustained no loss whatever.

Business Kept Going.

The fire was still burning fiercely when the Amling and Randall cut flower forces arrived for the Sunday morning business. The Amling concern at once obtained the vacant Rowe space at 160 Wabash avenue to receive the day's consignments and was able to write its first sales ticket for the day at 7:10, only ten minutes later than usual. Next day, adequate temporary quarters were secured at 166 North Michigan avenue, the entire ground floor of the new Federal Life building, where business was transacted February 16 almost as though nothing had happened.

Long before the fire was extinguished the Randall Co. had obtained a large street floor and basement at 177-9 North Michigan avenue. Four telephones were installed during the forenoon, with office equipment, and facilities for carrying on the cut flower department of the business. Orders for florists' supplies, filled from storage stocks, were shipped from the new quarters February 15. A. L. Randall stated that those holding orders from the house had been sent instructions to ship immediately and that no time would be lost in purchasing a complete new stock on a larger scale than before. It was stated as one of the mitigating circumstances that all merchandise bills for January had been discounted. The safes were recovered February 16 and all records found to be in good condition. No orders or accounts were lost.

The question of permanent locations for the two concerns is one of considerable importance, not only to them but to the rest of the interests that heretofore have been so closely centered in the Chicago cut flower section. It is considered impossible to restore the burned building within the time limit stipulated in the leases. The Amling house, dealing only in cut flowers, will have less trouble finding a thoroughly satisfactory location than will the Randall concern, requiring space for so much bulky merchandise.

TROUBLE WITH CUTTINGS.

I am enclosing a few cuttings, hoping they may reach you fresh enough for you to see a fungus that continually attacks my stock in the propagating house. The disease apparently begins under the sand surface, working up the stem to the leaves above the sand, then quickly spreading. It has shown itself in coleus, heliotropes, alyssums, iresines, geraniums and genistas and, in spite of all I have done, still exists. Our propagating benches are principally made of wood. At the beginning of the season they were well whitewashed and filled with perfectly fresh sand from the lake shore near here. The sand is about four to six inches deep on the benches, with a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees, the house temperature being slightly below that. The benches are three to five feet wide, with two 1-inch pipes under each bench, and the temperature of each bench is practically the same. I have steamed the sand in one bench, but it makes little or no difference. If you can advise me as to sterilizing the sand, or in any other way put me on the road to getting rid of the pest, I shall be grateful. W. E. G.

The genista cuttings had been planted too deeply in the sand and, furthermore, the temperature of the house and sand is much too high for them. Give them sand of a temperature of 60 degrees and top heat 10 degrees lower. Also, be careful not to set the stems so deep in the sand and you should have no trouble with fungus or damping off. The bottom heat named should suit coleus, heliotropes and iresines; it is a little warm for geraniums and sweet alyssum. Be sure to clear all leaves and scales from the portions of stems placed in the sand.

If the sand is not sufficiently coarse, this may be in part responsible for your trouble. In this case I would advise placing two inches of coal ashes in the bottom of the bench; over this place a layer of moss, then fill in the sand. This will make the drainage better. To still further improve it you could break up some charcoal or ordinary coal, pass through a fine screen and mix with the sand. Steaming the beds or pouring boiling water over them should sterilize them sufficiently. I am inclined to think, however, that the water is not passing through your sand as freely as it should. C. W.

MR. WIRTH'S GARDEN.

The garden that was so fine a feature of the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis in 1913 was continued in 1914, partly with stock donated by houses in the trade that felt themselves repaid through the advertising they obtained by signs on the beds. Mr. Wirth now states that "on account of the large amount of annual planting material required to fill the garden, which, because of the requirements for bedding plants for other parks, we are not able to furnish from our own propagating plant, it seems advisable to change the layout of the garden to provide room for a larger number of perennials and other hardy plants which do not require replacing every year. We cannot expect outside growers to furnish large quantities of plants every year to help fill this large garden, and we do not intend to ask them to do so. We are, however, not only willing but anxious to have all growers who wish to do so make use of those display grounds to introduce and show their novelties in large or small numbers. Exhibits sent us for that purpose will be given a conspicuous place in the garden among the class of plants to which they belong. They will be properly labeled, giving the exhibitor's full name and address. We simply ask that prospective exhibitors write to us before April 1 what they wish to exhibit, so that we may reserve space for their exhibits, and that the plants be sent, freight or express prepaid, at the proper time of planting.

"Our home people are taking a great interest in the garden right along, and there can be no question as to the advertising value of an exhibit at those well-kept exhibition grounds."

FORCING BLEEDING HEART.

How long does it take to force bleeding heart? Will you kindly give us a few cultural directions regarding it? T. N.

Bleeding heart, or Dielytra spectabilis, does better when not forced too hard. Allow the plants six to seven weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Treat them similarly to spiræas, but give less water and heat. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

With the arrival of Lent, it is necessary to give the lilies the best possible attention. If the buds are now showing and can be counted, well and good. If they are not, the plants will need all possible heat to flower on time. The temperature can be 65 to 70 degrees at night; it must not be below 60 degrees. Use the hose freely on them and keep the atmosphere humid. If they are growing in a special house, close it up early in the afternoon to send them along. A few days of this treatment will make a surprising difference to the plants if we have clear skies. The trouble with most of the giganteums of late years has been that they are too dwarf. The best way to draw them up is to shade the house where they are growing. This will draw them up appreciably and make them more salable.

For Formosa lilies hard forcing is not usually necessary. This variety is naturally much earlier than giganteum; it also grows a good deal taller. While perhaps not quite so good as a pot plant on account of its height, it is the lily par excellence for cutting. It is clean, and anyone who has grown it once wants more of it.

Lilium candidum will not stand forcing like the giganteums or Formosas. The buds should now be visible and, if so, they will be on time in an average minimum of 50 degrees. If given much more heat than this, the flowers will come much undersized and will be lacking also in substance. Be sure to keep aphis down on all lilies, either by fumigating or spraying, and, as the plants in any batch will never flower all together, considerable moving around will be necessary to time them to a nicety.

Azaleas.

Azaleas should now be placed in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night and sprayed freely on all clear days. They will need no forcing, but will flower on time in a comparatively cool house. Pink and other colored varieties of late years have sold better than whites. Niobe, one of the best late varieties, creamy white in color, was hard to sell a year ago.

Spiræas.

Spiræas should now be under way, and, if they have made a little growth, will be all right. They stand plenty of heat and like an abundant water supply, with liquid manure in addition when the pots are full of roots, which does not take long. Be careful not to fumigate heavily where they are growing, as the foliage is tender. The old Japonica as a pot plant is now displaced by such superior kinds as Gladstone, grandiflora and astilboides. S. Queen Alexandra does not come at its best for Easter, but both this and the new forms of S. Arendsii, which come chiefly in lavender, rose and pink shades, make beautiful Easter plants.

Rhododendrons.

Start rhododendrons now in any ordinary greenhouse temperature. Spray freely. If they seem slow in starting, place them in more heat and move back into cooler quarters as the flowers expand. The most popular, but not the cheapest rhododendron, is Pink Pearl. The White Pearl, which, however, is not pure white, is also fine. All the hybrids of Catawbiense are good for forcing.

Bougainvilleas.

Give the bougainvillea plants a night temperature of 60 degrees, and if the flowers are starting to show color move them to a cooler house. This will assist in holding their color. They can be subjected to quite hard forcing, but it is better to keep them in a cool house before sending them out.

Genistas.

The genista must not be forced at any time. Plants placed in a temperature of 45 degrees at night now will be on time. It is a mistake to trim the plants into symmetrical forms, as many persist in doing each year. More naturally grown plants are far more pleasing and will be preferred by customers who are at all critical. Have you remembered to put in a batch of genista cuttings? If not, place them in sand at once. Use short cuttings rubbed off with a heel; a bench which roots carnations will be ideal.

Tomatoes Above, Potatoes Below.

DOUBLE CROP WITH RADIUM.

So many wonderful results have been related of experiments with radium that some of us have come to designate Missouri as our native state whenever that magic substance becomes the subject of discussion. But this comes from a veracious gardener, with an exceedingly good photograph as ultimate evidence.

C. E. Gysemans, now gardener for Jules E. T. Ehlers, at Evansville, Ind., last summer was in charge of the experiment gardens of the Standard Chemical Co., at Piftsburgh, Pa., the object of which was to determine the effect of radium on growing plants. The accompanying illustration shows what he and radium did in one instance. In a bushel basket filled with soil was planted a potato of the Early Ohio variety. When the plant was five inches above the soil, Mr. Gysemans grafted on the potato stalk a tomato slip. The illustration shows three large tomatoes, as well as some blossoms near the top of the plant, and Mr. Gysemans says he had some good-sized potatoes at the other end of the plant.

The grafting was done by inarching, and a good union was obtained in fifteen days. Although the raffia, the only binding material used, was removed at the end of this time, the plant had to be tied to a stick to prevent the graft being blown off by the wind. To show the nature of the stock, five shoots were left on the potato plant, just below the graft. These were pinched back constantly, so as not to weaken the tomato graft.

A most surprising fact was that, although the potato stock was Early Ohio—emphasis on the early—when other plants of this kind were drying down at the beginning of August this one was given no rest, as the tomato, growing vigorously under the action of the radium, drew constantly upon the potato stock, so that it could not rest, but was still growing in September. When this remarkable plant was on exhibition at the Federal street seed store of W. C. Beckert, in Pittsburgh, for a few days, it attracted the attention of many people.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business was the best this market has ever had for that day. Sweet peas and single violets cleaned up readily, while lily of the valley and double violets sold well. Red roses and red carnations also cleaned up quickly. Practically all lines of stock are moving briskly in the market, while prices are good.

Both roses and carnations are rather short of actual requirements. Enough lilies, including Easter lilies, callas and rubrums, are coming in to take care of the actual calls for them. Bulbous offerings are becoming more plentiful and the supply is steady. They are selling fairly well. Other offerings include calendulas, primroses, forget-me-nots and wall-flowers.

Various Notes.

Little Dan Cupid was busy last week in florist circles. The marriages of James Tierman and Miss Laura Pfeiffer and R. C. Witterstaetter and Miss Agatha Hopp were solemnized.

C. E. Critchell reports valentine business as by far the best he has ever had.

George Klotter has been sending L. H. Kyrk some fine single violets.

Wm. Murphy's many friends will be pleased to learn of his steady gain in strength after his long illness.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has had a week of mild weather, most of it murky and wet. Roses and carnations were short in supply, especially roses, of which there were not nearly enough to go around. St. Valentine's day has developed into an important flower day, especially for corsages, bouquets and boxes of flowers. The business this year was greater than ever before. In fact, it was the first time that there was an unusual demand for violets, which were used with orchids, valley, roses and sweet peas. Sweet peas were scarce, the supply being short of the demand. Cattleyas were quite plentiful and found a ready sale at fair prices. Local growers have been short on lilies. Golden Spurs, Paper Whites and tulips were in good supply. Beauties are getting scarcer every day, and prices continue to climb. The retail stores made special efforts for St. Valentine's day, and the results show the importance of advertising flower holidays, as people need only encouragement to persuade them to buy.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' window display of valentine boxes, decorated and tied with the prettiest of ribbons, was a picture. One would almost be pleased to receive one of the empty boxes, but with the arrangements of flowers and ribbons with which they were filled, they could not fail to please the most artistic and exacting person.

The A. W. Smith Co., through its special street car advertisements, had the largest sale of valentine boxes in the firm's experience. The company also had special window decorations, in which were shown a great variety of styles in corsages and bouquets. They employed fifty boys besides the automobiles to make deliveries, and at that they were rushed to deliver on time.

Randolph & McClements report an unusual rush. They had a number of exclusive styles and arrangements of flowers put up in valentine boxes made specially for them. The quantity and quality of the ribbons used for the purpose must have gladdened the hearts of the ribbon men.

G. P. Weaklen had his special features for the occasion. To the credit of our retailers, one could see individuality in the arrangements sent out from the various stores; each had its own style of boxes and arrangements.

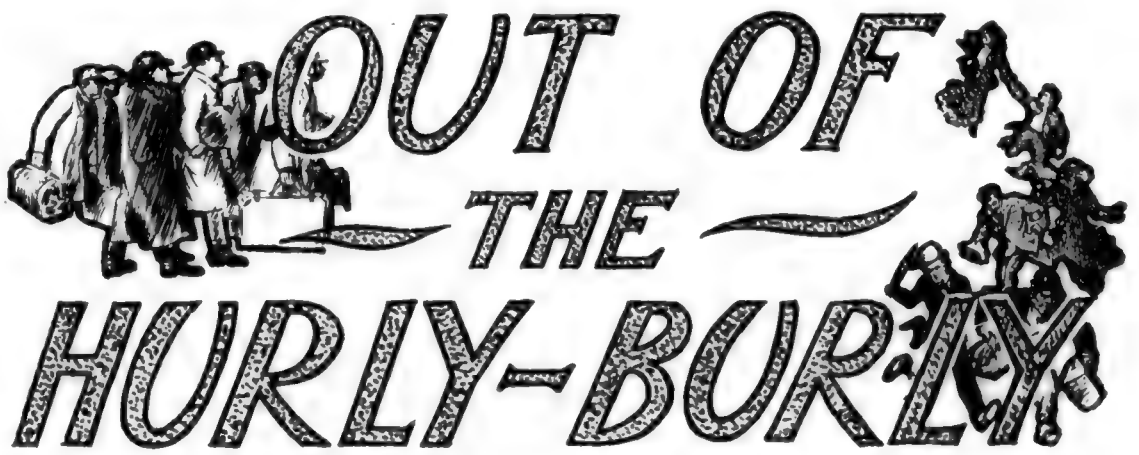
The Blind Floral Co. was extremely busy looking after Cupid's affairs, and the force worked until late Saturday night.

Miss Emma Maxwell's trade in floral valentines exceeded anything in her experience. Her only difficulty was to get enough choice, dainty flowers to take care of the orders.

De Forest Ludwig has taken charge of the retail end of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. He is increasing the popularity of this old establishment. This gives his father, E. C. Ludwig, a better opportunity to look after his greenhouse and outside work.

Gilbert Ludwig, buyer for the Ludwig Floral Co., is kept busy in these days of scarce stock in order to meet the requirements of his firm, which reports an increasing business.

Walter Faulk had an order for a 5-foot pillow February 11. It was an immense piece when made up and was beautifully executed.



P. S. Randolph, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Randolph, was married Thursday, February 11. His bride is Miss Mary Margaret Donehoo. Mr. and Mrs. Randolph, Jr., will go to California for their honeymoon.

A report of the death of Mrs. Mary Sloan Criswell, who died here February 12, will be found in this week's obituary column.

Harry Davis opened his new theater February 15. In connection with the tea garden, there will be a flower stand, which will be under the supervision of Miss Rose Bradley Brooks.

J. M. Johnston, the McKeesport florist, who also has stores in Homestead and Braddock, says the hard times never touched him. With his energy and line of talk, we are not surprised at this statement.

Next week will be farmers' week. Representatives of the Pennsylvania State College will deliver lectures February 23, at the Monongahela House. M. S. McDowell, director of agricultural extension, will speak on "Soil Fertility," and J. P. Stewart will speak on "Spraying Orchards." Clarke.

Richmond, Va.—For advertising purposes Mann & Brown furnished flowers for the recent opening of the refurnished Council chamber and received a vote of thanks.

St. Paul, Minn.—The St. Paul Florists' Society held its monthly meeting February 10, at the store of the O. R. Eckhardt Co., 318 Minnesota street. Plans were completed for a spring show of bulbous stock.

Louisville, Ky.—At a recent meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists, held at the store of Mrs. C. B. Thompson, it was decided to participate in the school garden work of the summer. The society will take charge of the borders of the garden, two strips each 3x285.

Honesdale, Pa.—O. M. Spettigue and G. William Sell were the purchasers of the local greenhouses which formed one of the several establishments owned by Ira G. Marvin, of Wilkes-Barre, sold by Sheriff Kimble January 29. The local business will continue to be managed by Franklin Walters, assisted by his sister, Miss Henrietta. The Honesdale greenhouses are in an excellent condition and the sale was due to causes existing elsewhere.

Albany, N. Y.—Edward F. Meany, F. A. Danker, E. P. Tracey, Lewis H. Schaefer and Fred Henkes have been appointed by Frank R. Bilson, president of the Albany Florists' Club, to confer with officials of the Albany Institute relative to a flower show to be held in the institute building in November. Frederick Henkes and E. P. Tracey represented the club at the meeting of the State Federation of Floral Clubs at Ithaca last week.

Duluth, Minn.—J. J. Le Borious says the volume of business has increased steadily of late, so that his sales now compare favorably with other seasons.

Franklin, Ind.—D. B. Kelly says the St. Valentine's day trade was a record-breaker and that he believes a little effort will make February 14 one of the big flower days of the year; he says he could have sold a lot more stock if it had been on hand.

Union Grove, Wis.—A special meeting of the stockholders of the Union Grove & Yorkville Greenhouse Co. was held February 6 at Minton's hall. A complete report of all receipts and disbursements up to the present time was given. The range of greenhouses has been leased to French & Salm, of Morton Grove, for a term of years from March 1, with the option to purchase.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Bids have been opened for erecting an addition to the park greenhouses on the river common. The two low bids were those of the King Construction Co., $1,141, and W. H. Lutton, $1,200. Nothing has been done toward awarding the contract for material, because of two features of the bids: It developed that Lutton erected the present greenhouses and used patented curved eave sockets, and if King cannot secure these sockets the park department does not intend to give the contract to this firm, as it is the desire to have the same construction throughout the entire buildings. It was also discovered in going over the King bid that no reference is made to supplying bench frames, which will cost, according to estimates of other bidders, from $175 to $200.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Spring weather prevailed nearly all last week. Shipments are increasing daily, and prices, which have ruled fairly steady, begin to give premonition of Ash Wednesday and the nearness of Lent. This period, however, does not damage the florists' trade as it did in former years. With the advent of the new crop of roses, the veteran wholesalers predict a slump before the present week is over, and they generally are accurate in their forecasts.

American Beauties have been scarce and prices high. Anything extra good could be disposed of without difficulty at 75 cents each, and these seemed to hold the whole rose market steady. Hadley continues to lead the novelties.

Carnations surprised the market with their strength, nothing really salable being offered under $20 per thousand and the finest stock going to $3 and $4 per hundred.

Violets are a little stronger, the best of them touching 50 cents per hundred. Few lilies sold above $8 per hundred and many short-stemmed ones could be had at $4 and $5 per hundred. Valley was weak and abundant, but little of it realizing over $2 per hundred.

There is apparently an end to the great volume of orchids, that for many weeks have overstocked the market and sold at abnormally low prices. The change for the better began February 13. Gardenias have been lower. Daffodils are abundant, and the southern supply is looked for shortly. The overflow of narcissi has ceased. There are plenty of hyacinths and freesias, including some fine Purity.

A great abundance of forget-me-not arrived February 13, with a view to a St. Valentine's day demand, but the demand did not materialize as anticipated, and there was much of the stock left over. Mignonette, pansies, wallflowers and fine sweet peas of the Spencer varieties are in abundance.

Various Notes.

John Young, Max Schling and A. J. Guttman attended the meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs at Cornell University.

February 25 the Greek florists' ball and reception will be held at Terrace Garden.

The annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association was held Tuesday evening, February 9, at the Hotel McAlpin. The usual handsome decorations were in evidence, including Acacia pubescens from W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., of Chappaqua. Interesting addresses were made by Messrs. Siebrecht, Schultheis, Steinhoff, Stumpp, McHutchison, Esler, Dupuy, Schwake and Dick. Dancing followed the banquet.

Roman J. Irwin has just received a large shipment of lily of the valley pips for cold storage.

J. K. Allen will shortly move to 118 West Twenty-eighth street, where he will have more room and facilities for his growing business than at his present location.

Max Schling had an enthusiastic audience at Ithaca last week when he addressed the State Federation of Floral Clubs. At the store the staff is busy. February 16 a large wedding order was filled on one hour's notice. Telegrams for St. Valentine's day deliveries were unusually numerous and came from nearly every state in the Union.

Robert A. Jackson, of A. H. Langjahr's force, has left the hospital, after an eight weeks' stay there.

Notice of the death of John B. Hanft appears in this week's obituary column.

Bowling.

The members of the New York Florists' Bowling Club rolled the following scores at their meeting Thursday evening, February 11:

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business, in most instances, was highly satisfactory. The volume of business was large, but sales probably were not so large as in better times.

Carnations had a good call, especially the red, which, of course, were not anywhere near equal to the demand. Roses had a good call and were in good supply. Sweet peas were not plentiful enough to go around. Violets moved well, but the demand was not so great as last year. Jonquils, tulips, freesias and valley had a good call. Blooming plants sold unusually well this year.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiegand have left for a two weeks' trip to Asheville, S. C., and the south.

Albert Pittet says that he is receiving excellent reports from the growers of his new sweet pea, Rose Queen, throughout the state. He says that he is receiving many orders for seed for this year's delivery and expects to be oversold soon.

Bertermann Bros. Co., A. Wiegand's Sons Co., the Hill Floral Co. and the Pahud Floral Co. report a highly satisfactory St. Valentine's day trade.

Herman Junge is spending his spare time trying to figure out whether to buy a Ford or to continue to be a seat warmer on the interurban.

John Hartje is still looking for a congenial traveling companion to take in the exposition at California next summer.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting some unusually fine Pocahontas of late.

H. W. Rieman has been quite busy with funeral work lately. H. L. W.

THRIPS AND OTHER TROUBLES.

I am sending you some leaves showing two different kinds of disease which I have noticed in my greenhouse. Can you tell me the cause and the remedy? If spraying should be done, how strong should the solution be? J. J. S.

The leaves were dried up around the edges. This may have been caused by dryness or by fumigation. They were also covered with thrips. Use the hose, with a spray nozzle, persistently on these to keep them down. They breed fast in a too arid atmosphere. Keep your house moister, syringe freely every clear day and use a soap or other insecticide in addition when the pest is specially bad. C. W.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—Leo. Polansky, who has been in the employ of J. G. Crozer for the last seven years, has left to go into the undertaking business.

Richmond, Ind.—C. E. Ruch has been on a visit to his sister, Miss D. E. Ruch, at Shreveport, La. It has been rumored, but not definitely reported, that he will establish a greenhouse there.

Cambridge, Mass.—John J. Williams was presented with an 8-day wall clock and two reflecting electric light fixtures at the new store of Williams Bros., Friday evening, January 29. The new store, at 1224 Cambridge street, was opened recently to provide larger quarters for the firm, and is across the street from the old place.

Kalispell, Mont.—W. E. Mills, proprietor of Kalispell Gardens, was recently favored by a visit from Ralph M. Ward, of New York, and T. E. Mills, of the State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont. "Needless to say," says he, "we shall need new springs for the auto, another supply of chickens, and to work hard to gain what we lost 'spiritually.'"

Coraopolis, Pa.—Theo. F. Beckert, who is one of the widely esteemed growers of this section, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the trade because of his steadily failing sight. He can no longer see to read, but still writes legibly through the force of long and painstaking habit.

Amelia, O.—Charles Pommert, who raises goldfish in addition to growing flowers, has appealed to the state public utilities commission, at Columbus, to enforce a lower rate on the shipment of goldfish by the Cincinnati, Georgetown & Portsmouth Railroad Co., declaring that the present rate, 35 cents per hundred pounds, is excessive.

Delphi, Ind.—Harry P. Myers has decided to abandon vegetable forcing and devote his efforts to growing flowers. He has been growing a few for cut blooms and pot plants as a side line for the last two years and has found it so profitable that as soon as spring sales are over he will put up two houses, 37 x 100 and 21 x 100, on a tract of six acres that he has purchased, within the city limits, using available material from the houses now in use.

OBITUARY

John B. Hanft.

John B. Hanft, the veteran florist of New York, died at his residence, 125 East Eighty-seventh street, Wednesday, February 10.

He was born in Germany, in December, 1832, and was in his eighty-third year. He landed in New York in 1849 with his three brothers, George, Augustus and Julian. This quartet, that is now ended, founded the firm of Hanft Bros., at the corner of Grand street and Broadway, now continued by the sons of John B. at Madison avenue and Sixty-second street.

Mr. Hanft had a paralytic stroke in October of last year and never fully recovered. He leaves five sons and five daughters.

Mary Sloan Criswell.

Mary Sloan Criswell, of Vandergrift, Pa., died February 12, aged 45 years. Mrs. Criswell, at the death of her husband about six years ago, took hold of the business which he had just started and built up a good trade. She was an exceptional woman in many respects, being exceedingly practical in her business affairs and commanding the love and respect of all who knew her. She died in the Allegheny General hospital after an operation made necessary by an accident some years ago. She leaves two sons. Her death was most unexpected, as she attended to business up to February 8, when she went to the hospital.

William Smith.

William Smith, aged 82, died February 2 at his home, 1441 Wightman street, Pittsburgh, Pa., after a lingering illness. Mr. Smith was one of the best known nurserymen in Pittsburgh, having been in active business fifty-five years, retiring ten years ago. He was born in Germany and came to this country when a boy, settling in Pittsburgh. He leaves his widow, Catherine Smith, two daughters, four sons and two brothers, all of Pittsburgh.

Mortimer Josiah Miranda.

Mortimer Josiah Miranda, a Civil war veteran and one of the oldest florists of East New York and Queens, N. Y., died Tuesday, February 9, at his home, 6 North Vermont street, East New York, aged 70 years. His father was a native of Spain, who came to this country as a boy and became one of the pioneer settlers of Staten island. Mr. Miranda is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

Mrs. Nick Greivelding.

Mrs. Nick Greivelding, wife of Nick Greivelding, of Merrill, Wis., died last week at a Wausau, Wis., hospital after a long illness.

Johnstown, Pa.—Bruce Walker and his brother, George Walker, who recently purchased the greenhouses and flower store of William Schmidt, expect to open their establishment, in the Crystal annex, February 1. Bruce Walker will handle the sales end of the business, while his brother will work in the greenhouses with Mr. Schmidt.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

T. B. McClintock, Scranton, Pa., who has been ably assisted by his good wife, in building up a lucrative business, has given his two sons an interest in it and has also built a dwelling for each of them. Each of the sons, in turn, has taken a partner and all are now comfortably installed. McClintock & Sons Co. is a strong combination. Congratulations!

Charles H. Buenning, Easton, Pa., notes an increased call for flowering plants. Owing to the severe weather, the usual open market space could not be filled. This outdoor market usually disposes of large numbers of popular-priced stock.

J. H. Sykes, Allentown, believes that the taste for real flowers will never diminish, but rather increase, judging by his sales slips. He recently added two greenhouses and has an ideal retail place.

George R. Clark, Scranton, Pa., says the florist-seedsman is now the busy man. He has worked the combination successfully for about thirty years.

The Scranton Florist Supply Co., Scranton, has mailed its descriptive list of leading seeds for florists, and is well pleased with the returns thus far.

Fred D. Moody, Youngstown, is issuing his annual seed catalogue, held up for a time in order to quote safe figures, especially on beans.

Anton Schultheis, Petersburg, Pa., has about recovered from the effects of the flood. It required lots of grit, but the sympathy expressed was a strong stimulus to try again. Business is a trifle slower than normal.

Davies & Fine, Inc., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have moved their seed and poultry business into a much larger store, which gives abundant floor space and a fine window for display. Mr. Stevick, the manager, aims to make it one of the leading seed houses in the state.

H. H. Cade, Youngstown, says the dollar special flower box on Saturdays makes a hit. The brothers, William and Henry Meine, formerly of Richmond, are running the houses.

Adgate & Son, Warren, O., secured possession of their recent purchase in time for the holiday trade. It is a fine corner property. The store, 18x75 feet, is fitted up with much taste. Frank Adgate is enthusiastic about the sweet pea, Rose Queen, and considers it the best in its class.

The force at the Van Gordon-Hapgood Seed Store, Warren, are busy getting stock into shape. They have largely increased the supply, looking for a banner season.

Heepe's Sons, Akron, O., are sending out an artistic colored photograph of their new store, in postal form, and have received many encomiums from their patrons on its beauty. A brilliant tulip window now attracts much attention.

W. M.

Pittsfield, Mass.—The Flower Shop, managed by Stanley Barnes, celebrated its fifth anniversary February 7.

Dover, N. H.—H. E. Meader is just recovering from severe eye trouble which has laid him up for the last ten days.

Waterbury, Conn.—George T. Ryan, who was taken to St. Mary's hospital January 20, suffering from an attack of the grip, is recovering rapidly.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Arthur Hofmann and Richard C. Engelman are the owners of the newly opened store in the Waite building, known as the Rosery. H. S. Weidemann is no longer connected with the concern.

Newton, Mass.—Edwin H. Corey, for over thirty years station agent at the Newton Highlands station of the B. & A. railroad, retired from service February 1, having reached the age of 70, the limit prescribed by the company, and is now associated with his son, E. H. Corey, Jr., in the greenhouse business at 33 Floral street.

Wakefield, Mass.—Charles C. Ball believes gas leaking from the North avenue main is responsible for the loss of large numbers of plants during the last two winters in his greenhouses, and has placed a statement to that effect with the municipal light commissioners, who are making investigation. Mr. Ball is awaiting their reply before taking further steps.

Lee, Mass.—Walter Cann, florist at Mrs. De Witt S. Smith's, is receiving many congratulations on the quality of his stock this season, especially the freesias and carnations.

Plymouth, Mass.—Stevens the Florist, who recently opened his new store at 9 Court street, has had an excellent business as the result of providing attractive surroundings.

Stratford, Conn.—The Hollister Heights Floral & Nursery Co. has filed a certificate of incorporation. The concern has an authorized capital stock of $5,000 and starts business with $2,750.

Salem, Mass.—Charles F. Hurlburt, of Beverly, has bought the greenhouse property of Ralph Wheelright, on River street. It includes a 300-foot greenhouse, nine and one-half acres of land and a small dwelling.

Dover, N. H.—Alfred Rhodes, for nearly twenty years engineer of the Garrison Hill Greenhouses, was visited by the proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Howe, and a party of the greenhouse employees and friends one evening recently, and presented with a handsome gold-trimmed pipe, in recognition of his long connection with the firm. Refreshments and entertainment made the evening pass enjoyably. Mr. Rhodes was in the employ of William Elliott at the Madbury Rose Farm, Madbury, N. H., when the greenhouses there were being erected.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1915: President, Patrick Welch, Boston; vice-president, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-first annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., August 17 to 20, 1915.

THE spring business is opening nicely; it may not prove a record season, but there is no reason to feel dissatisfied with the outlook.

IT isn't corn, or wheat or cotton that's king—it's cash. The florist who pays his bills on the dot is the care-free power behind the throne.

THE rate at which geranium stock is selling with those who use The Review's classified ads does not indicate pessimism in the ranks of the country florists.

A POST-OFFICE circular offering city people the opportunity to buy in the country via parcel post lists "Whitminie" ferns as available at 30 cents each.

PRINTERS are not busy now; an excellent time to get your local job shops to print up that batch of letter-heads that will show you are a sure-enough florist.

THE Dutch bulbous stock has realized unexpectedly but none the less welcome good returns so far this season, but lower prices are sure to come as the supply of flowers increases.

BUSINESS is subnormal in almost every line, but it is improving, and probably a readjustment to a little more conservative basis will be really a good thing for a lot of people who will not enjoy the process.

WITH two such roses as Mrs. Russell and Ophelia demanding additional bench space this season, some of the old standbys will have to be set back a bit. In most cases the space will be taken from Beauty, Killarney and Richmond.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Arnold, C. H., Springfield, Mass.
Chambers, James, Hartford, Conn.
Denlinger, Walter R., Vintage, Pa.
Walker, Kate E., Klamath Falls, Ore.
Pilat, V. H., Kingsville, Tex.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns sent.

IT PAVES THE WAY.

If you have something good to sell,
It pays to advertise it well.
Let people know what you're about
And sales will come beyond a doubt.
"The man who whispers down a well
About the goods he has to sell
Will never reap the golden dollars
Like him who climbs a tree and hollers."
So climb a tree right o'er the crowd
And holler long and holler loud,
And when you've got 'em on the run
Your selling game is well begun—
Which is another way to say
That advertising paves the way.
—Charles L. Tompkins.

AFTER THIS, THE DELUGE.

To the mind of the disseminator, this is a poor year for introducing a novelty. Early in the season it became apparent that the number of novelties to be offered this year would be less than usual, and recently two of the new carnations previously announced to make their debuts this season have been withdrawn—held over to 1916, it was announced.

Perhaps it is a good thing. If the trade has been surfeited with novelties, the surcease will give the opportunity for resting up—it may whet the appetite for something new, with the result that next year's introductions will meet with an unusually cordial reception.

That the number of novelties to be offered after the war will be larger than in other years is a foregone conclusion.

COOPERATIVE ADVERTISING.

Cleveland, O.—Under the stimulus of the coöperative advertising, St. Valentine's day business this year went ahead of any other year by at least thirty per cent. Judging from reports received from grower, wholesaler and retailer, violets, valley and Ward roses led in demand, but carnations, tulips, narcissi and daffodils went along with the rush.

Topeka, Kan.—Four retail and two wholesale florists coöperated to run a half page ad in the leading paper for St. Valentine's day, only the names of the retailers appearing in the ad. The idea and a part of the copy came from the article in The Review of January 21. The result was the best business thus far experienced for this special flower day.

Bloomington, Ill.—Five florists here took up the idea of coöperative advertising for St. Valentine's day as exploited in The Review of January 21. The expense was only $80 and, in the words of A. Washburn & Son, "the results were gratifying."

THE SUBSCRIPTION SWINDLER.

The Review warns the trade not to pay money to strangers for its account.

It is a petty swindle, but every now and then a florist writes that he has paid $1 to some traveling solicitor for a subscription to this paper, and wants to know why the paper has not come.

The Review employs no traveling solicitors. Its representatives all are members of the trade, each well known in his own community. Any itinerant solicitor who states that he represents this paper does so without authority.

Don't pay money to anyone you do not know personally—if it is for a subscription to The Review, mail the dollar to this office.

FIRES HIT FLORISTS.

Muncie, Ind.—Fire in the boiler house of the Riverside Floral Co., February 1, was communicated to the adjoining greenhouse, and both structures were badly damaged. It is estimated the loss was $500, covered by insurance.

Warsaw, N. Y.—During the night of January 30 the barn in connection with the greenhouses of Clair G. Norris was totally destroyed by fire. The intense heat broke a large quantity of glass and some of the sashbars of the greenhouse were burned, but the stock was saved by covering the openings with canvas and carpets, as the heating plant was intact. A new steel barn and boiler room will be erected immediately in place of the one destroyed.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With the approach of St. Valentine's day the market enjoyed the best week of the season. Of course business did not in any way approach a holiday volume, but it was far more satisfactory than at Christmas, as everything cleaned up in fine shape at excellent prices. The business was much heavier than at any previous St. Valentine's day and the trade is encouraged to believe that the use of flowers as valentines will keep on increasing from year to year until the day assumes a place as one of the leading flower holidays. A half dozen of the local retailers helped it along by large and attractive ads in the best daily.

This week the market opened strong. Several factors contributed to the unusual firmness of prices. To begin with, a day of springlike weather was succeeded by a return of winter conditions, cold and sunless; it checked production. Second in importance, everything was cut so tight for St. Valentine's day the growers were taking things easy for a day or two. But of principal importance, the retailers, both in the city and out of town, seemed to have had a splendid St. Valentine's day business and all wanted to replenish stock February 15.

Beauties continue decidedly on the short side. There is some excellent stock, but much more that is of low grade. It seems that higher prices would be warranted for all good Beauties except that the buyers, after the low prices that prevailed at Christmas, now push other flowers when ordinary seasonable rates are asked for Beauties. There are increased supplies of short roses, growers who cut big crops

CUT FLOWER DEPARTMENT

We are nicely located in our new quarters, with a complete line of Cut Flowers, and are filling complete all orders, large or small--call on us for all the stock you can use.

Roses in larger supply and fine quality.

Carnations—None better in Chicago.

Lilies—Longiflorums, Formosums and Rubrums.

Violets—We are headquarters for both single and double.

Cattleyas—The best, home-grown. They reach you in perfect condition.

American Beauties—None have their equal in quality.

Stevia—Fancy Stevia still with us.

Jonquils, Daffodils, Tulips—Now coming in in quantity.

Valley, Mignonette, Freesia, Greens of all kinds—in fact, any and everything on the Chicago market, we can supply.

at Christmas now being on again, but the supply of roses does not yet equal the demand. Red was extremely scarce at the end of last week, being in special request for St. Valentine's day. Mrs. Russell is again more plentiful and is good. Killarney has improved in color as the result of a little bright weather.

Carnations continue on the short side; growers say that last week's average price was the best of the season to date, in some cases being considerably better than the Christmas average. Red was picked so closely last week that it still is hard to find.

St. Valentine's day brought an enormous business on violets. The supply was large, especially of the Hudson river stock, and prices were low, but the houses that handle violets in quantity are pleased with the day's business. Cattleyas also sold well, though the supply still is large enough so that prices are below normal. Valley is abundant, but is selling excellently. The demand has been increased immensely by the now general practice of putting a few spikes of valley in the center of each violet corsage. Sweet peas continue possibly the most popular corsage flower, but the supply still is light; growers report buds still dropping.

There is no scarcity of anything in bulbous stock. There are more poor tulips than good ones, but all colors are available in considerable quantity. Daffodils are plentiful and jonquils have fallen in price; they have done unexpectedly well so far this season. Freesia sold splendidly last week and is less in evidence than it has been for some time. Even Paper Whites cleaned up in fair shape February 13. Easter lilies are more plentiful and rubrums are offered in some quantity. Callas receive little attention.

The supply of green goods is equal to all requirements. Prices are normal.

The Florists' Text Book.

Edward Clody, 3924 North Clark street, says that three years ago he knew practically nothing about the flower business, and had just been engaged in cemetery work by the Hebrew Benevolent Society. By chance, he found old copies of The Review, and after reading them said to himself, "That's the paper for me. If I read that I can learn about the business by myself." He has. A year ago he opened his present store and soon built a greenhouse, for he owns the property. He now has a profitable business and says it is rapidly growing. Clody believes in advertising.

Branch and His Business.

Daniel Branch, 313 East Fifty-first street, is a sure enough optimist. He says that on making a comparison, he finds he has done a better business in the last month than he did in the same month a year ago. Under existing conditions, he asks, what more can a reasonable man want?

Mr. Branch is a most versatile florist and yet his entrance into the trade was a mere business accident. A machinist by trade, eighteen years ago he found himself with money tied up in the old Chicago Floral Co. The concern failed and Mr. Branch, in the hope of at least getting his money out, took hold of the business. He not only got his money out, but he is still in the trade. And, moreover, he has learned that he can use his mechanical knowledge in a greenhouse. Back of the store is a small but fully equipped

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES DEPARTMENT

We wish to advise the trade that we are filling orders for Florists' Supplies practically without delay. Shall have a complete new stock within a few days. The trade can rely on us.

¶ THE FIRE which destroyed our store February 14 did not stop the filling of orders even for a single day. With large temporary quarters, secured while the fire still burned, we are making shipment of many articles as though nothing had occurred. Large quantities of new importations were in the custom house and other large shipments on the way, with more stock awaiting our word to ship. By the end of the present week we shall have a fairly complete stock on our floors. All our books, orders and records came through the fire safely, and our customers can rely on us to take care of their needs without appreciable delay.

We greatly appreciate the many friendly inquiries and assurances that have come to us and will spare no effort to merit the continued confidence of the trade. Kindly make a note of our new address—machine shop. Here he makes his own iron stands, saws flats out of old boxes on a turning lathe, and cuts and threads any pipe he may need. He also worked out a hot water heating system of his own, and buying old boiler flues, connected them with patent couplers of his own invention. This coupler takes the place of the ordinary tee coupler and is much more simple. This homemade system has been in use twelve years and Mr. Branch says it has always given complete satisfaction.

Various Notes.

F. C. Mendonza, who four months ago sold his store at 356 East Forty-third street to Abraham Iralson and opened a new one at 6236 South Halsted street, has left this stand on account of a fire next door, and February 15 removed to 6341 South Halsted street. Here he occupies the north half of the store, the other half being used by an art and picture framing shop. He has made a two years' lease at $75 a month.

George H. Wietor, eldest son of Henry Wietor, is one of the youngest growers holding responsible positions in the establishment of Wietor Bros. But it is to be said for Mr. Wietor that his section is one of the best on the place. It is in Beauties. Only a few weeks ago Mr. Wietor, having attained his twenty-first birthday, took unto himself a bride in the person of Miss Leona C. Sculer.

W. J. Smyth and wife are enjoying their outing in Florida. They plan to go down the east coast, visit Cuba and return via the west coast, reaching Chicago in good time to prepare for the Easter trade.

Those whose duties call them to the wholesale cut flower district Sunday mornings received a shock when they stepped off the cars February 14; for a block or more in each direction from the corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street the thoroughfares were full of fire-fighting apparatus and it looked as though the whole district was afire. The conflagration, which was in the building occupied by A. L. Randall Co. and the E. C. Amling Co., is reported in another column. These two were the only trade losers. Poehlmann Bros. Co., occupying two floors in the adjoining building, escaped without loss.

Charles Zapfe, who, before starting in business for himself at 372 East Sixty-first street, was with J. A. Budlong, has leased a store at 424 East Sixty-first street, closer to the Washington Park hospital. He expects to move to the new location before March 15.

Zech & Mann were greatly pleased with the St. Valentine's day business. The week's sales were twice those for the same week last year. February 12 and 13 were the best two days' business the firm ever has done, excepting only the days preceding Christmas, Easter and Memorial day.

A. T. Pyfer, of the Chicago Carnation Co., comments on the large sale of Dutch hyacinths at the Wilmette store of Pyfer & Olsem February 12 and 13.

Wellworth Farm, the Kidwell establishment at Downers Grove, is cutting some extremely fine Beauties. The crop has paid well this season.

At Peter Reinberg's city store, Felix Reichling reports an unusually good demand for young rose plants. They have not been able to keep up with orders.

C. W. McKellar suffered a small fire loss at his country home a few days ago. The blaze was discovered just in time to prevent the destruction of the residence.

Erne & Klingel report a large increase in the demand for smilax within the last few days.

Paul R. Klingsporn believes it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. Fire having forced two of the largest wholesale cut flower houses into temporary quarters on Michigan avenue, buyers who have not heretofore visited that street are noted in the store of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

Winterson's Seed Store has its spring catalogues in the hands of the printer.

A. L. Vaughan still is suffering with neuralgia in his face.

Kennicott Bros. Co. again is receiving Francis King gladioli from Florida and reports the stock as selling better than it did earlier in the season.

O. P. Bassett will celebrate his eightieth birthday at his home in Pasadena, Cal., March 31. This occasion will be a memorable event in the family and will be solemnized by a big dinner in which the entire clan, with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn, will participate. Mr. Bassett, who has been in the flower business thirty years, keeps abreast of the activities of the trade and takes pride in being well informed on all subjects related to it.

The bowlers are having a busy week. Monday night they rolled in the North Chicago league. Tuesday evening the Maywood team played a return visit. Wednesday evening the Florists' league had its regular session and next Sunday Peter Olsem's friends from Joliet are expected in to return a visit.

Albert H. Budlong, superintendent of the J. A. Budlong greenhouses in Bowmanville, tells a story on himself. One of his growers recently laid off on account of illness and Mr. Budlong personally handled the section in his absence. To his surprise, he found he had no time to go about the range telling his boys what to do and how to do it. On the other hand, he found it took all his time to make as good a showing as they did. This led him to remark that if you want a young man in the business to do anything, you should let him use his own head once in a while; he can not show what he really knows if acting under direction all the time.

North Clark street. Mr. Clody owns the property and is arranging to remove the old buildings. He says he has not sufficient room properly to handle his stock.

There is rejoicing at Maywood—a daughter has arrived at the home of Otto Amling, son of Albert F. Amling. The little lady has four uncles but is the first girl in the family.

M. F. Weinstein and George Prentice, who are doing business at 1333 East Fifty-seventh street as the College Floral Shop, have been in the business less than two months. While they have a small stand and are new in the trade, they are doing as well as could reasonably be expected and are already getting some good orders from the university people.

D. P. Roy, with A. Henderson & Co., went to Holland, Mich., February 13, for a three days' business trip.

Fred Quasthoff, 812 East Forty-sixth street, is careful to whom he gives credit these days. A short time ago a prosperous appearing man of middle age walked into his place, bought some flowers and, finding he had no change, handed Mr. Quasthoff a card and suggested that the purchase might as well be charged, as he wished to open an account anyhow. The name and the address were both familiar to Mr. Quasthoff, so he did not hesitate. The man dropped in on several occasions and bought flowers. When Mr. Quasthoff at length sent his bill by mail, in reply he received a letter requesting him to call and explain, whereupon he found that the householder and the purchaser were different men. The swindler simply had used another man's card.

John Welsh, 4703 North Robey street, who has been confined to his home for two weeks with rheumatism, is improving and hopes to be able to attend to business in a few days.

The rose is usually the emblem of the florists' trade used in electric light signs, but that in front of H. N. Bruns' store, at 3040 Madison street, has the form and colors of a calla lily.

The refrigerator is a particularly attractive double compartment design, built of green tile and wood by Buchbinder Bros. Mr. Conn has been in his present location four months, and has been using rented fixtures while waiting for his own.

If you have any novelties or spring and Easter stock you would like to exhibit at the next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, March 4, Michael Fink, 176 North Michigan avenue, will be glad to hear from you.

Mrs. Ida Solms, 1204 West Madison street, says the war has not had any appreciable effect on her sales, as she is doing a good general business.

J. C. Craig, 120 South Wabash avenue, in the basement, is scanning South Wabash avenue between his present location and Van Buren street for larger quarters. The location of his present stand is good, but he finds it is growing too crowded for comfort.

Walter Haarlow, who for some months has been in charge of the Martin A. Ryerson conservatories, on the south side, has the stock looking so well that the owner is encouraged to give some good orders for new plants.

One of the week's visitors was J. R. Clark, manager of the flower department of the Green-Joyce Co., Columbus, Ohio. This is a department store just starting in the flower business, and Mr. Clark was gathering ideas and ordering supplies. The opening is to take place February 20.

J. A. Evans, of Richmond, has been here, getting out cuts for an elaborate new catalogue.

One of last week's visitors at the office of The Review was Thomas Knight, of the Knight & Struck Co., New York, whose errand in Chicago was to sell hard-wooded plants for Easter delivery.

lilac, cornflowers and freesias. Violets, valley and cattleyas are excellent in quality. Acacia sprays are used to good effect with orchids in corsage work. Golden Spurs, Yellow Prince and La Reine tulips, Victoria, Trumpet major and sulphur-colored daffodils are all plentiful. Dutch hyacinths are becoming more and more plentiful. There is a large supply of all kinds of blooming plants.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Scott Co. put some attractive St. Valentine's day folders into circulation last week. A neat telephone index, suitable to hang upon the mouthpiece, has been sent to the patrons of the firm.

J. Benson Stafford had a pretty window display last week. A good-sized heart, made of Japanese cherry blossoms, with bows of pink ribbon running down one side, was the central figure. Vases filled with spring flowers, boxes of violets, heart novelties, etc., filled in the foreground of the window.

The Lenox Flower Shop had a window of heart boxes hung from the ceiling. The color scheme was red. Old-fashioned bouquets, corsages, boxes with hearts, arrows, etc., filled the floor space.

A birthday party was given Joseph Streit at his home, on Elmwood avenue, February 15, by his friends. After enjoying a splendid supper prepared by Mrs. Streit, the company adjourned to the potting shed, which had been transformed into a palm garden by the greenhouse force, for dancing and merrymaking. A Victrola was presented to Mr. Streit, and his friends at the store gave several records.

The R. M. Rebstock store finds that business is improving slowly and the volume of trade increasing. A charming window display was put up by this firm last week. It consisted of an elegantly gowned figure sitting at a library table, upon which stood a handsome electrolier. Several large baskets of flowers were arranged artistically about the window. A messenger boy bearing a valentine from the beau of the young woman was shown approaching the table. The scheme and setting were good.

In their window, W. J. Palmer & Son had a heart covered with smilax filled with corsages made of various flowers. Sweet peas and pink feather fans scattered here and there completed the groundwork, while pink azaleas placed on the columns gave an artistic finish to the window.

Red is the valentine color without a doubt, but S. A. Anderson used a touch of purple to good advantage in a red window last week. Purple thistles, made of milkweed down on teasels, made a stunning combination with pots of white lilac. A kewpie, as a central figure, held in his hands red and white ribbons leading to red hearts upon which were fastened corsages of violets, valley, roses and combinations of various flowers. Valentine baskets hung from the sides and ceiling. E. C. A.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day trade was all that could be desired. Though the retail stores did not advertise collectively, some of them ran individual ads in the daily press and all did a good business, both in cut flowers and plants. The majority of stores put up attractive window decorations, which no doubt induced many prospective customers to enter. There was a fair supply of nearly all varieties of cut flowers. Roses were in good supply, but off color, on account of the long period of cloudy weather. Carnations were in good demand; in fact, they were more called for than roses; the supply was inadequate. Violets were plentiful, especially doubles, with the demand rather light. The singles were practically unsalable at any price; these have had their day in this locality, as the public generally prefers doubles.

There was a good supply of novelties, but no special demand. Plant trade was good. Primulas, cyclamens, hyacinths, tulips and azaleas formed the bulk of the supply and were in good demand.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, February 10, with President Ernest Westlake in the chair. W. H. Reynolds was elected to active membership and one petition for active membership was received.

The exhibition table was well filled and the awards were as follows: Twelve sprays of freesia, first, J. McDonald; one plant of Primula malacoides, first, F. Honeyman; one plant of stocks, first, J. McDonald; a plant of Primula malacoides improved, exhibited by J. Duthie, very highly commended; pot of freesia, exhibited by H. Jones, thanks of the society.

President Westlake announced that he would offer a fountain pen at the next meeting for the best vase of twenty-five carnations, mixed. Other exhibits will be twelve white carna-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The close of the pre-Lenten season marks a most satisfactory week in the cut flower market. While prices are still lower than for the same week last year, the blessed sunshine brought in enough flowers to make a larger volume of business than we had then. Conditions have been most satisfactory; a large supply of flowers that went out about as fast as they came in, leaving no surplus for regrets. There can be no question that part of this satisfactory result is due to St. Valentine's day, which was responsible for more gifts of flowers than in any previous year. Forget-me-not is, of course, the good saint's favorite flower. It soared as high as $6 per hundred for the specials, if I may use that term, but there really are not enough remember-mes to cut a figure. Violets are supposed to come next, but they didn't seem to; they dragged, even with prices as low as $6 to $7.50 per thousand for fine stock. Sweet peas fared better. The Spencers were much in evidence, advancing to $2 per hundred for a large number of well grown flowers. Valley was in higher favor than for weeks past, while the few Richmonds and Hadleys that bloomed were eagerly accepted.

The carnation crop was heavy last week, forming the mainstay of the market. The stock was generally good and sold well at excellent prices, usually from $30 to $40 per thousand. Roses were in better supply and went pretty well, without fancy prices. This does not apply to Beauties; these were firm at $9 per dozen, $10 being obtained for selected stock for shipping. Daffodils have eased a trifle, but they continue to lead the bulbous flowers. Cattleyas have shown an improvement, while really good gardenias are not plentiful.

The out-of-town orders were heavy throughout the entire week.

The London Flower Shop.

The window contained some choice floral creations, dainty combinations of color and form sure to appeal to a refined taste, not crowded together—just placed carelessly, as it were, with a background that brought out harmony and contrast of tint and shade to perfection. Inside is a scene of brightness made brighter by the gloom outside. It does not look like a shop, but much more like a pretty room at home, with bright faces and gay flowers all about. But the visit is strictly one of business, so with a sigh that the pleasant sight cannot longer be enjoyed without thought of facts and figures, Mr. Tabor is asked about the observance of St. Valentine's day. He answers with a positiveness most assuring. It is clear that the grown-ups are not satisfied with picture cards and pretty verses only; they want flowers. Mr. Tabor says that flowers have been used as valentines more than ever; not any one special thing, but in great variety. Each purchaser has his or her sentiment and choice in floral valentines. A heart basket, arrow-pierced, tastefully filled; a plant hamper with bright blooms; a bunch of violets; forget-me-nots; red roses; what you will—each has an idea, and it is better so. The day falling on Sunday, Mr. Tabor thinks, slightly marred its general observance; people would have come on that day if they could, but forgot to come before, and so let it pass. Even so, the day and its observance finds favor year by year in the hearts of the people.

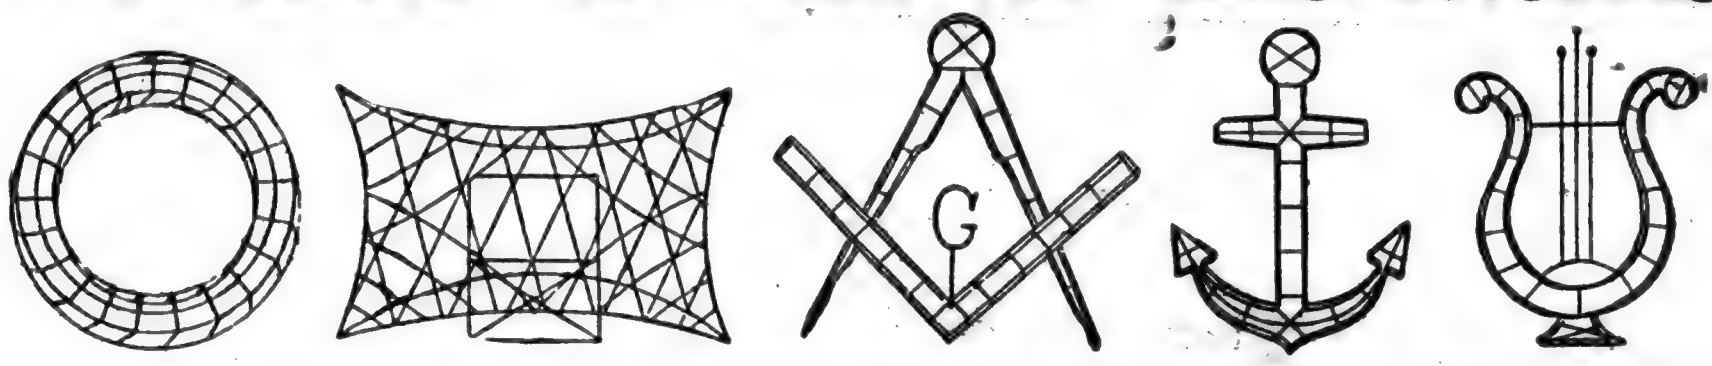
Various Notes.

Charles F. Edgar last week opened a retail flower store at 5037 Baltimore avenue, West Philadelphia. Mr. Edgar is well known in wholesale and retail flower circles. He has had excellent training in all the details of the business and is extremely capable.



Stuart H. Miller March 1 will open a wholesale commission house for the sale of cut flowers at 1617 Ranstead street. Mr. Miller has been for over a dozen years with Edward Reid and is Mr. Reid's right-hand man. He is thoroughly conversant with every detail of the commission business. His friends are confident that he will build up a successful business that will be a credit alike to himself and to the city.

The second social gathering of the year was held at the Florists' Club on the evening of February 15, when many members, undismayed by storm, gathered to enjoy the games.

Paul Berkowitz returned from down east February 6 and left on another brief trip, from which he has just returned in the best of health and spirits.

H. H. Lineaweaver & Co. report the anthracite coal market active, both in domestic and steam sizes. They say soft coal continues rather dull.

The visit of three young men, two brothers and a cousin, here this week brought out the fact that there are now three greenhouse establishments at Wilmington, Del., bearing the name of Simon. The new place is run under the name of Charles Simon, Jr., Sons' Co., by C. H. Simon, H. L. Simon, C. E. Simon and H. P. Simon. The old place is divided. Part is run under the name of the Simon Co., by Carlisle R. Simon, and the other part by William E. Simon. All are wholesale growers of carnations and chrysanthemums, to which the first named adds general stock.

B. Eschner, president of the M. Rice Co., emphasizes the statement that imported supplies are becoming less and less of a factor in the market.

William J. Baker delighted in saying that if Lent is like this he hoped it would always be Lent.

The monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall February 16. The principal event was the competition for the Michell prize for giant freesias.

Joseph G. Neidinger is developing his basket factory from a small to a large and important department.

Everybody who leaves this city will tell you that wherever he goes he is asked about Sunday's meetings. One of the best things that the Reverend Billy has said is that "theology bears the same relation to religion that botany does to beauty."

J. D. Eisele told his associates in Henry A. Dreer, Inc., that ten years ago the long-distance plant deliveries they now make by automobile would have been considered impossible. He laughingly predicted that these deliveries will in ten more years extend as far as Chicago and St. Louis.

Alvah R. Jones compared vases of the new rose, Hadley, and the old favorite, Richmond, in the P.-M. cooling room one afternoon this week. Mr. Jones pointed out the beautiful form, clean growth and straight stems of Hadley, which he believes put it ahead of Richmond at this season. Phil.

The Market.

We have had some days of clear skies and higher temperature. The result has been a largely increased output of flowers, but sales have improved and, while business has not been what might be termed active, the clean-up, on the whole, has been quite good, and better than anyone could have expected. Roses have continued to clean up well at about the previous week's prices, but special American Beauties have declined in value. The demand for white roses has been good, while scarlets and crimsons were in good demand February 13 for St. Valentine's day. Short-stemmed flowers of all colors still clean up well. Carnations show no decided change in value. The quality is splendid. Particularly fine are Matchless, Pink Delight, Pocahontas, White Wonder, Beacon and Benora, while Mrs. Ward, Philadelphia, Rosette and Champion are all good.

Violets had a heavy sale for St. Valentine's day, singles selling far better than doubles. Yellow marguerites are not equal to the demand and the prices equal those paid for carnations. Sweet peas, especially Spencers, sell well. There is a good supply of bulbous flowers, but so far these have sold well. Freesias are in large supply and snapdragons are more plentiful. Good pink snapdragon spikes have made $2 per dozen. Myosotis is more plentiful and so is mignonette. Some of the mignonette stock is of grand quality. There is a good supply of callas, lilies and valley. Cattleyas move somewhat slowly; so do gardenias. There are some nice anemones, ranunculi, lilacs and amaryllis. Green stock has not been selling well of late; it will move better when stevia has gone.

Club Meeting.

Carnation and novelty night, February 16, attracted about 200 members to the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Peter Fisher, who was absent at Buffalo at the January meeting, read his annual financial report, which showed a good balance in the treasury. An invitation from the W. W. Edgar Co., to hold a field day at Waverley March 20, was accepted. Exhibits were numerous. A. A. Pembroke showed fine Champion, Yellow Prince, Matchless, Philadelphia and Gorgeous. S. J. Goddard had Laura Weber, Pink Delight, Matchless, Rosette, White Perfection, Benora and Beacon. A report of highest merit was given Albert Roper for Alice Coombs, and a report of merit for Grace, with honorable mention for No. 360. Littlefield & Wyman received a report of merit for Miss Theo and also showed other seedlings. Edward Winkler received a report of merit for Morning Glow. Peter Fisher was given a report of highest merit for Alice. C. S. Strout showed fine White Winsor, Matchless, Champion and a large mixed vase. F. W. Fletcher received a cultural report of merit for his improved strain of Purity freesia. W. R. Thornhill was given a report of cultural merit for Euphorbia jacquiniæflora. Tomatoes were shown by the T. J. Grey Co.

Three new members were elected. Peter Fisher and James Methuen were installed as officers. The appointment of H. H. Bartsch, the club's president, as director in S. A. F. was confirmed. Peter Fisher gave a talk on carnation cuttings, selection and treatment. S. J. Goddard gave a talk on open air culture and soil preparation. A. A. Pembroke named the five best commercial sorts as Matchless, Pink Delight, Beacon, Rosette and Benora. C. S. Strout said local and shipping trade called for different varieties. A. G. Pembroke, salesman, named Pink Delight, Matchless and Rosette as the best sellers. Geo. H. Noyes named Pink Delight, Ward, Matchless and Rosette. Mr. Goddard considered White Perfection still the best white. Wm. Downs, for the private growers, favored Pink Delight, Matchless and Beacon. The discussion was participated in by F. E. Palmer, A. Christensen, Edward Winkler, Wm. Downs, K. Finlayson, T. Coles, J. A. Nelson, J. Wheeler Hastings and others. A talk on humidity control by E. J. Ovington was followed by discussion.

Various Notes.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is one of the best rose growers in the vicinity of Boston and his place never looked better than at present. His place is always neat and I doubt whether any local rose firm averages a better price for the flowers than Mr. Montgomery. Particularly good just now are White Killarney, Hadley, Richmond and Russell. Other sorts grown are Killarney Brilliant, Ward, Sunburst and Killarney.

Penn had far the largest St. Valentine's day business in his history February 13. He had advertised heavily and anyone who has doubts about advertising not paying should have seen the shoals of orders sent out. It took fifteen men nearly six hours to pack up and forward out-of-town orders and the whole force was worked to the limit February 13. Violets were easily the leaders, but gardenias, valley and cattleyas were called for by many.

W. S. Phelps, of Lexington, has a splendid lot of Nelrose and Phelps' White snapdragons. He started to cut anemones in quantity this week and these will be followed by large batches of Spanish iris. His carnations are doing uncommonly well, especially Beacon and Rosette. His other leaders are White Wonder, White Enchantress, Benora, Pink Delight, Pocahontas and Winsor.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, is now getting an excellent cut of yellow marguerites. His leading quartet of carnations is composed of Benora, White Wonder, Beacon and Gloriosa.

Another meeting in the interests of the Credit Protective Association was held February 13 and further progress was made toward the formation of such a body. The credit system is surely more loose in cut flower circles than in Galvin's had a good business for St. Valentine's day. I noted some pretty old-fashioned bouquets here, in which the flowers used were Mlle. Cecile Brunner roses, single violets and Erica melanthera.

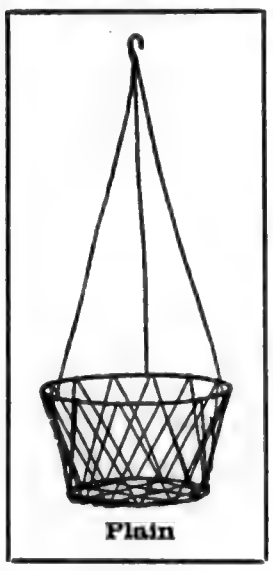
William T. Walke, of Salem, has one of the finest lots of Easter lilies I have seen this season and all are in just the right condition. He is marketing now a fine lot of genista plants and bulbous flowers.



Wax Bros. report a satisfactory demand for St. Valentine's day. They had a large proportion of the floral designs for the funeral of Senator Proctor, of Vermont. A design made of cattleyas and Farleyense fern and another of Hadley roses and valley were specially noteworthy.

February 13, at H. R. Comley's, I noted among other plants and cut flowers, crinums, strelitzias, colored freesias, odontoglossums, phalænopsis, calanthes and white lælias.

Anderson Bros., of Woburn, are now among the largest shippers of Easter lilies, daffodils, tulips and hyacinths.

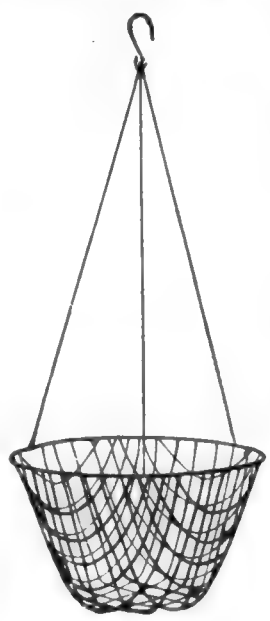
several short lectures, attracted a large and interested audience. Wilfrid Wheeler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, and several professors from the Massachusetts Agricultural College were the lecturers. There will be no lecture February 20.

J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, in addition to carnations are now sending in some fine lily of the valley and Purity freesias.

Southworth & Greene, of West Stoughton, are sending in good single violets and a nice assortment of well grown carnations.

The West Street Greenhouses, of Reading, are having an extra fine cut of the newest Spencer sweet peas, which realize high prices. They also are large growers of calendulas and daffodils. Their carnations are now in heavy crop. Their best varieties are Pink Delight, Benora, Mrs. Ward, Beacon and White Wonder. The two last named outbloom all others.



J. Newman & Sons, of Tremont street, had a good St. Valentine's day business and have had good trade so far this winter.

The violets of Kidder Bros. always sell quickly. The flowers are of splendid quality and beautifully bunched. Some growers can produce fine flowers, but have not yet learned how to bunch them properly, and careful bunching, so as to show the individuality of each flower, means a great deal. W. N. C.

GREENWICH, CONN.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society, in Doran's hall, February 12. President W. J. Sealey was in the chair. Several new members were elected and a number of proposals for membership were received. It was voted to hold the annual fall exhibition as usual. Prizes have been offered by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in the chrysanthemum classes, and John Canning offers $20 in gold as a sweepstakes prize for the best chrysanthemum bush plant.

Visitors present were M. C. Ebel, Chas. H. Totty and Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J.; A. L. Rickards, representing the Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York, and W. J. Collins, of Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., Boston. Each spoke briefly, complimenting the society on its progress and the fine exhibits that are a feature of all the meetings. Mr. Herrington spoke about the preparations for the show to be held in New York in March. He is manager and asked the coöperation of the society. The Honorable John M. Brown, mayor of Stamford, addressed the meeting, assuring the members of his hearty support and good wishes. Henry Kelly, of New Canaan, Conn., delivered an in-

A feature of the evening was the competition for the John Canning prizes for roses. The first prize was awarded to James Stuart, for a beautiful vase of Killarney Brilliant. The second prize went to Robert Grunnert, for a fine vase of the same variety. The trade exhibit staged by Chas. H. Totty and S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., was fine and attracted a great deal of attention. Mr. Totty staged four new varieties that appear to have a great future. The varieties were September Morn, Gorgeous, Mrs. George Gordon and Mrs. F. F. Thompson. Reuter & Son had a fine vase each of Killarney Brilliant and Crimson Queen. Both exhibits were highly commended. The judges made the following awards in the non-competitive exhibits: A cultural certificate was given to Robert Allen for a vase of mignonette, also honorable mention for a display of cineraria plants. Honorable mention was awarded to James Linane for a display of cyclamen plants and a vote of thanks to Carl Hankenson for a bunch of violets. A. ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Business has been good all the week, finishing up with an excellent St. Valentine's day trade. Unusually fine novelties were seen at the flower stores, which attracted many people and consequently good sales were made. Most of the store windows bore some resemblance or other to St. Valentine, and advertising on a larger scale than usual brought good results. There was plenty of good stock on the market all the week, which cleared fairly well. Carnations are more plentiful than any other kind of flower, the demand being fair. The darker shades, as previously, are somewhat slow in selling. Large quantities of daffodils and jonquils arrive each day, but the single ones are somewhat glutty. Despite the dark days, there has been a good supply of roses and they are of good quality. All shades sell well. Sweet peas are scarcer than usual, while the supply of mignonette, forget-me-not, long-stemmed freesia, etc., are moving well. There are a lot of tulips, chiefly yellow shades, on the market, which move rather slowly. The use of pussy willows with cut spring flowers is becoming still more popular. Paper Whites have shortened up considerably. Valley is quite plentiful, but does not sell as fast as it should. Easter and calla lilies are in good demand. Violets sold well for the holiday and larger shipments were made. Acacia is selling quite freely.

Various Notes.

Harry E. Bates and Colin B. Ogston were delegates to the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs, which were in convention at Ithaca, February 10.

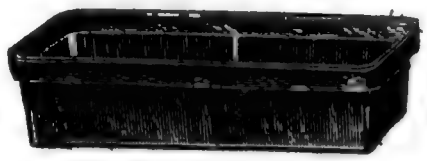
Morris Cohen, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, was in town this week.

Charles H. Vick, president of the Rochester Florists' Association, has been on an extended business trip, visiting Philadelphia, Boston and New York city.

Horace J. Head has had a bad attack of rheumatism, which prevented him from working last week.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lady Florists' Association was held February 9 at the Elm bowling hall. The usual business was transacted, after which the ladies bowled. Later, Mrs. Charles Suhr was presented with a handsome cut glass vase and Mrs. E. R. Fry, treasurer, and Mrs. E. P. Wilson, secretary, were each given a 2-pound box of chocolates in appreciation of their services for 1914. There was a good crowd and refreshments were provided. It was decided to hold a bowling party, to which the gentlemen will be invited, February 22, at the Elm hall.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at headquarters, 95 East Main street, Monday, February 8. Plans for a flower show to be held at Exposition park next fall were discussed. The management of the industrial exposition suggested the idea and the florists have entered enthusiastically into the plan. A committee composed of George B. Hart, chairman; T. J. Keller, A. H. Salter, H. E. Bates and Charles H. Vick will work with the industrial exposition committee.



A movement is now on foot to bring the annual meeting of the American Rose Society to this city in the spring of 1917. H. J. H.

TOO COOL FOR SPRENGERI.

Kindly tell us what is the matter with our Sprengeri. It seems to grow well enough, but will not turn green. It throws long shoots and lots of them, but they all stay brown and yellow and do not show true life. We keep it in a house with a temperature of 48 to 52 degrees. We feed it about once a week with liquid cow manure and it is planted in fairly rich ground, consisting of rotted sod mixed with horse manure. If you can give us the desired information, you will greatly oblige. H. J. V. & S.

The trouble with the Asparagus Sprengeri is caused by too low a temperature. This plant requires a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees to keep it in good color and even a little more heat than that will do no harm. Sprengeri will exist in a low temperature, but will not make a paying growth under such conditions. Liquid cow manure is a first-rate fertilizer for this plant, or for any of the asparagus family, but without the proper temperature it will not give results. W. H. T.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Conditions in the wholesale market last week were splendid in every respect, especially in the latter part of the week, when the demand became so large that the markets were cleaned up early in the day. The prices also stiffened. This was caused by the large demand for St. Valentine's day, which becomes more profitable each year. A few years ago violets only were sold for this day, but now all kinds of flowers are in demand. There was a heavy cut of single violets, with only a few doubles. The best of these brought $1 per hundred and common, short-stemmed stock brought 50 cents per hundred. Next in demand came sweet peas, of which a large cut was sent in. Fancy Spencers sold at $1.50 per hundred and common varieties at 75 cents per hundred. The market was cleaned up nicely at these prices. Roses are increasing in supply and a few more bright, warm days will bring on a large production. Beauties and all other roses sold well. Carnations met with a large demand. These, too, will soon be in full crop. Tulips sold well, as also did valley and daffodils. Of lilies, Romans and Paper Whites there is a good supply daily. Asparagus and ferns are in great demand. Smilax has been dragging badly of late.

most interesting meeting February 11, in Odd Fellows' hall. The attendance was large. President Bourdet opened the meeting, with all officers in their places. The Chicago Carnation Co. staged vases of their new carnations, Aviator and Peerless Pink, which graced the president's desk and attracted a great deal of attention from the carnation growers present.

Communications were read from the Chicago Carnation Co., the Kansas City Florists' Club and W. S. Wells.

The trustees reported that they could not make a final report of the recent dance, owing to the fact that all tickets had not been turned in. They were given until next meeting to make a final report.

H. C. Irish reported on the advisability of organizing a state florists' association. After a discussion, it was decided that this matter would be taken up again at a later meeting.

Application for membership was received from H. M. Biekert. Mr. Kendall, of the daily press, spoke on the value of advertising for all holidays and said he was present to interest the club and its members in these different events as they come each year. This matter will be discussed at the next meeting.

It was decided to hold the annual carnation exhibition in March, at the salesrooms of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. This exhibition will be in charge of the club's trustees.

J. F. Ammann was called upon for a talk on the recent convention of the American Carnation Society. His address was of great interest and at its conclusion a rising vote of thanks was extended Mr. Ammann. A motion was made that this report be written in the minutes and a copy sent to all societies in the state.

The president appointed J. F. Ammann, W. C. Young, E. W. Guy, W. J.

Pilcher and R. J. Windler as a committee to name all the committees that are to entertain the Carnation Society when it holds its next convention in this city. A report of the appointment of these committees is to be made at the May meeting.

R. J. Windler, state vice-president, spoke on matters pertaining to S. A. F. The next meeting will be held March 11.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a most pleasant afternoon February 10 at the home of Mrs. Theo. Miller, on Delmar boulevard. Mrs. Conrad Bergstermann will entertain the circle at her home, 3117 South Grand avenue, March 10.

The Chicago Carnation Co. exhibited vases of its new carnations, Peerless Pink and Aviator, at the club's meeting last week. The judges, Messrs. Schneider, Ogle and Ohlweiler, reported that each variety scored 75 points.

All holders of tickets, which were sent to members for the club's dance January 27, would confer a favor on the trustees if they would return them to William Ossick at once, so that they may wind up the affairs of this event.

J. F. Ammann brought back from Buffalo a good report on John Steidle's new flesh-colored carnation, Sunbeam, which is being grown for him by W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo. The report pleased Mr. Steidle greatly.

Visitors last week were: John Bubach, representing the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Arthur Schwerin, secretary of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., and Frank Farney, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa. Both Mr. Schwerin and Mr. Farney displayed a fine lot of samples at the Hotel Jefferson.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, who supplies this market with extra fine carnation blooms, will again have an exceedingly fine lot of lilies, coming just right for Easter.

souri State Horticultural Society, say that the chances are good for the society to hold its annual meeting in St. Louis this fall. All florists in the state should attend this meeting, as efforts will be made to perfect a Missouri State Florists' Association.

Charles Young and W. S. Wells did jury service last week. Both had to miss the Florists' Club meeting, and as they are counted among the regulars the members missed them greatly.

Henry C. Ostertag is now in line for the appointment as minister to Dahomey, since he made the decorations at the Coliseum for the Colored Society's fancy ball and was guest of honor that evening, occupying Box 64.

The big aquarium in the show window of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. recently was robbed of goldfish. The boss discovered Mr. Thomas Cat helping himself. Paddy Patton says we can't afford to let the cat eat dollar-apiece goldfish when we have to subsist on corned beef and cabbage.

All five wholesale houses handled many thousands of violets February 12 to 14. The demand, they say, was larger than ever before and the prices ranged from 40 cents to $1 per hundred. The local trade consumed the greater bulk of them.

The florists in the downtown district report that St. Valentine's day was as good as last year and some say even better. The window displays of Grimm & Gorly, the Riessen Floral Co., F. J. Foster and the Mullanphy Flower Co. were greatly admired.

The west end florists, too, say that the demand on St. Valentine's day was excellent. Some artistic window displays were made by Newman, F. C. Weber, F. H. Weber, Kalisch Bros., Sanders and Young. Violets had a great call, as also did yellow and red flowers.

In the south end, Windler, Schoenle, Bergstermann and Beyer made attractive displays, which drew large crowds last week. They say trade was as good DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The weather for the last week was the reverse of what it was at my last writing. The snow has all disappeared and real spring weather prevailed all the week. Saturday the thermometer registered 66 degrees; Sunday evening the weather became cooler. Robins and bluebirds have been seen, making people think that spring is here. Blooming stock is not any too plentiful in this vicinity; consequently prices are high for the time of year.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club met at the Y. M. C. A. building February 9. General business prospects were discussed and there were expressions of hope for more business in the near future than for the last six months, which have been discouraging, while the cold weather has entailed large coal bills.

W. Allen Barber, the promoter of the floral and landscape gardening exhibition which will be held here March 1 to 6, met with the club and gave an interesting talk. The general opinion, however, among the florists present was that the time of year was not favorable for making much of a display; a month later would have been much better. However, no doubt some of the larger establishments will be represented. The enterprise was heartily endorsed.

Various Notes.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson reports brisk business for Valentine's day. Cut flowers and plants sold well.

Mrs. B. Haschke reports good business in all lines.

The Heiss Co. was kept on the jump taking care of the patrons with baskets, potted plants and cut flowers.

Miss K. Young was well satisfied with the business done.

W. W. Horlacher was kept busy. Besides St. Valentine business, he had a good many table decorations.

The Dayton Floral Co. was well satisfied with St. Valentine business. They had a large decoration for February 15, the occasion being the debut of Ex-Governor Cox's daughter, which was a big social affair. Mr. Matthews has just recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

John Boehner says he was so busy with funeral work the latter part of the week that he did not have flowers to spare for St. Valentine business.

The Miami Floral Co. reports the St. Valentine business done as fifty per cent above last year's, both at the greenhouses and the store. They have had a good call for Rose Ophelia, both grafted and own-root.

H. H. Ritter says sweet peas sold better than violets. He was well satisfied with business.

Mr. Anderson has opened another branch in the arcade. He was well satisfied with business last week.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Market conditions are good. Everything is pretty well cleaned up, both in cut flowers and pot plants, at a fair price. In the beginning of last week there was nothing worth while in decorations, but there was a large demand all the week for corsage bouquets, largely on account of the automobile show and the mildness of the weather. On the whole, however, business would have been light if it were not for St. Valentine's day. Every florist in the city reports that St. Valentine orders were larger than in any previous year. It seems that the fancy paper valentines are losing popularity, while the florists are winning more favor every year for their pot plants, baskets and cut flowers.

Roses are exceptionally scarce, except in the $8 to $10 grades, and these are none too plentiful, but the retailers are not worrying much about roses at present, as there are plenty of good carnations and bulbous flowers. Sweet peas, violets and orchids were in large demand all the week and there seemed to be plenty of them to fill all wants. Freesias are more plentiful and seem to be gaining in favor each year.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a special crop of violets, orchids, pansies and yellow daisies, grown at the firm's own greenhouses. These were all disposed of in fancy basket work and more could have been sold if available.

Arthur Newell reports the best St. Valentine's business in his experience. He prepared for a rush, but still did not have enough stock to meet the demand. Pot plants and basket work were the leaders.

Samuel Murray had an attractive window for the week, displaying well flowered lilacs and a few neat novelties. Novelty baskets were the leaders. He is well pleased with business in general.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. sold out the cut flowers and almost all the pot plants. The firm is cutting some excellent stock at present at the greenhouses. Roses have been scarce at their place for the last three weeks.

The Rosery reports business more like Christmas than St. Valentine's day and is more than pleased with the business done for the week.

The S. Bryson Ayres Co. is sending in some exceptionally fine Spencer sweet peas and says that business in this line is better than last year.

T. J. Noll & Co. had a heavy run of baskets and chiffon and practically sold out all cut stock. The violets were sold before they could get them into water.

W. J. Barnes had a better business than in any previous year and sold an unusually large lot of pot plants, from primroses up to rhododendrons. He says it was surprising how fast the large plants sold. W. J. B.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather for the last month has been dark and cloudy, with only a few bright days, and stock has been scarcer than ever before at this season of the year. This seems to be the condition all over the country, as it has been difficult to obtain stock from other markets. However, the sun has shone for the last day or two and, if this continues for a few days, stock will again be plentiful. Rose and carnation plants are full of buds, which will only require a small amount of sunshine to open them.

Various Notes.

The Knoxville Florists' Society held its regular monthly meeting February 8, at C. L. Baum's store. Among a number of subjects discussed, one of the most important was that of closing the flower stores on Sunday. This has been before the society for some time and a committee has been working on the matter, but so far without any definite results.

C. P. W. Nims, who has been representing A. H. Hews & Co., of Cambridge, Mass., for the last forty-two years, was in Knoxville February 9. Last year Mr. Nims was present at the February meeting of the society and was unanimously elected an honorary member. He is one of the oldest salesmen on the road, and although he suffers from high blood pressure, which bothers him somewhat in warm weather, he continues to make his rounds and take orders for flower pots.

Chas. L. Baum had one of the best St. Valentine's day windows seen in the city for some time. Although stock has been rather scarce and he has been obliged to turn down wholesale orders every day, he had a sufficient supply of good stock to handle a good St. Valentine trade. During the last few weeks he has disposed of a large number of primroses, which in many cases made up for the scarcity of cut flowers. He is now cutting a sufficient supply of carnations and has a surplus in orchids, which are fine.

Addison J. McNutt is cutting a large crop of sweet peas and some fine violets, a great many of which he is selling to the other florists of the city, and although the cut is heavy he cleans up every day and sometimes is compelled to turn orders down.

A. H. Dailey is doing a good business, taking into consideration the fact that stock has been extremely scarce. His main crop at present is sweet peas.

funeral work. The only trouble is to get enough stock to fill all orders.

C. W. Crouch's force have been exceedingly busy, having had a great deal of business for social affairs of late, and funeral work has held its usual high standard. It has been necessary for them to work from early in the morning until late at night to get all orders out. They, too, have been at a disadvantage on account of the scarcity of stock; however, if the weather remains bright for a few days, they will be cutting a heavy crop of carnations and roses. R. E. M.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The week brought almost uninterrupted sunshine and the temperature stayed above the freezing point practically all of the time. As a result, things are hustling to catch up with themselves. Outdoor vegetation is about a month behind time thus far, but, judging from the snowdrops and the red maples, it will not remain behind long. Outdoor violets are beginning to be seen on the street, but they were not sufficiently numerous to prevent this being by far the best St. Valentine's day ever seen in this city. While the demand was for violets and valley above everything else, other flowers sold well, especially roses. Pot plants moved better as a result of the day and, all in all, the preparations made for the day were profitable. There had never before been so much preparation for this day in this city and that may have been the reason the business came.

With the return of the blooming season, there has been the usual demand for hyacinth and other such bulbs from those who will never learn that they cannot expect results from these bulbs the day after they are planted. Pruning, tree planting and gardening are the order of the day all over the city and business is good for those who cater to this trade. Roses are coming in freely and the quality is good. Hyacinths and daffodils are plentiful and good. As there is no competition from outdoor-grown stock, the chance for profit on these is better than for several years. Carnations are plentiful and the price is weakening.

Various Notes.

Hillcrest School Farm is already planting gladioli and other hardy summer bulbs, and is also pushing the propagating of dahlias and perennials. They say that the freezing and thawing this winter have necessitated the replanting of a great deal of stock, even some of the evergreens having been lifted.

Geny Bros. have a good display of Golden Spurs in pots, the first I have seen this season.

The Joys sold the most violets for St. Valentine's day that they have ever sold in one week at retail.

McIntyre Bros. have some choice pot hyacinths. Their orchids continue plentiful.

Joe Browne is selling a lot of trees and shrubs and is also doing a good cut flower business.

The Mount Olivet Cemetery Co. is getting busy with the lawns and flower beds. There is a fine line of bedding plants on hand.

Frank Cornell is planning to put the largest line of plants on the market, through his peddling wagons, that he has ever handled.

C. C. Waggoner & Co. will handle bulbs and a few bedding plants this season for the first time.

Haury & Sons say that business has been improving of late. F. B.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

RALPH M. WARD has returned to New York after a quick trip across the continent.

CHARLES H. VICK, who is president of the Rochester Florists' Association, has started a campaign to secure 100 new members for that organization.

W. CUTHBERTSON, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, who is known in the trade the world around, has written a monograph on the sweet pea. It is for the grower rather than the seedsman, however.

THE houses that get their catalogues out early report about as good a January as usual, but the majority of the mail-order houses are only just beginning to feel the pulling power of their books, distribution having been rather later than last year.

J. W. RATEKIN, Shenandoah, Ia., this season has his brother, Archibald Ratekin, as assistant manager. The concern early in February began working in double shifts, so that business goes on night and day. Orders are more numerous than ever before in February.

THE Holland bulb salesmen in America, who at this date last year numbered over 100, are not quite so numerous as usual this season. But they are covering the country as with the usual fine-toothed comb. A fair amount of business is being booked under a promise to meet the market on prices.

THE total amount of business done by the seed houses at Shenandoah, Ia., in 1914, was $640,000, according to figures obtained by C. A. Wenstrand, president of the Commercial Club there. Four concerns, Henry Field Seed Co., Nishna Valley Farms, Ratekin's Seed House and Armstrong's Seed House are represented in the figures.

W. S. HILL, president of the Dakota Improved Seed Co., of Mitchell, S. D., was at Minot, N. D., recently to hear the discussions on seed at a midwinter fair and was given twelve hours' notice to prepare an address on seed breeding. W. A. Wheeler, of the same concern, lectured on alfalfa before a convention at Aberdeen February 9.

R. B. BUCHANAN figures the business of the Memphis seed houses as a little below that of last year to date, but believes it due solely to the fact that January, 1914, was unusually mild and dry, giving the season an exceptionally early start. He believes the diversification of crops will mean the largest spring busi-

"John Baer" Wins in Competition with "Tresco"

J. R. Robinson, Fall River, Mass., writes Oct. 4, 1914: "The 'John Baer' Tomato is by far the best Tomato I have ever grown, and I have grown all the new varieties for years, including the new English variety 'Tresco,' but will have to say 'John Baer' has it on them all. The weather conditions have not been very good, we had a late Spring, but for all that the 'John Baer' Tomato has done fine. I let several friends have plants and each one says, 'John Baer' is the finest Tomato they have ever grown.

"Last January I sent to England for a package of 'Buck's Tresco' Tomato. The package contained 28 seeds. I sowed 14 of them and raised ten plants. Tresco is all right as a novelty, as it will grow about fifty Tomatoes in a bunch, but they are not fit for market."

In Canada—First to Ripen Fruit Out of 28 Varieties

Mr. C. L. Ireland, Colborne, Ontario, Canada, writes Aug. 10, 1914: "'John Baer' Tomato turned out better for me than I expected it would. I have fourteen (14) acres in Tomatoes this year of twenty-eight (28) different kinds ordered from a good many different seedsmen in the United States and Canada, and of all the several varieties of which the seed was sown at the same time as 'John Baer' and transplanted at the same time, your 'John Baer' was the first to ripen early fruit. I sowed the seed on March 28 and about April 15 transplanted into flats 16 inches square, 100 plants in a flat. About May 15, I retransplanted some of them again into 16-inch flats, planting nine (9), twenty-five (25) and fifty (50) plants to each flat. I grew them in cotton-covered hotbeds and hardened them off by removing cotton coverings before setting plants to the field. All the plants grew nice, stalky plants, as good as the best of any other variety and a lot hardier than a great many others. I was very much interested in them and certainly pleased with the plants as they suited me to perfection. I set these 'John Baer' Tomato plants out by themselves in a piece of sandy loam on medium low, flat ground, which had been an old quack grass sod broken up and sowed to Oats last year. I kept this well cultivated before and after setting plants and as there was quite a lot of humus from the quack grass roots worked through the soil, I did not use any manure but just a handful of 2 am —9 ph.—6 pot. fertilizer around each plant at time of setting.

"The plants grew large in proportion to number of plants set in the flats (9—25—50 and 100); and continued to hold their same size in proportion all through their season of growth. I planted them out in rows 4 feet apart by 3½ feet in the row. One row of the 9 plants to a flat, one row of the 25 plants to a flat, one row of the 50 plants to a flat and one row of the 100 plants to a flat.

"The largest plants from the row of 9 plants to a flat gave me my first picking of ripe fruit, before any of the other rows had started to show color. This was on July 28. On August 3, I picked some more from first row and Aug. 6 I had a picking from both first and second rows and again Aug. 9 I had some from first, second and third rows, but none from the last row of 100 plants to a flat.

"There is a very marked difference in the size, number and early maturity of the fruit on the four different rows and this was evidently governed by the size of the plants at setting time.

"We had a cold, backward Spring at setting time, with continued cold and dry weather. Throughout June and July there were practically only two good rains, one on June 29 and the other on July 23, and when the last rain of July 23 came, the soil was so baked the best effect of the rain was lost, because before the moisture had penetrated to any depth it had mostly evaporated.

"I see by Market Growers' Journal of Aug. 1 that W. F. Massey says that Earliana was ripening plentifully ten days before a sign of color appeared in 'John Baer,' and he seems to think it is Chalk's Jewel renamed. As he says, if it is not Chalk's Jewel renamed, it is so much like it there is no reason to keep them separate. My Experience with 'John Baer' Tomato has been just about the reverse of W. F. Massey's, and I am a practical Tomato Grower, for Chalk's Jewel is not the same shaped Tomato as 'John Baer.' Chalk's Jewel will crack badly at the stem end and will not ripen around the stem.

"'John Baer' Tomato in comparison with Langdon's strain of Earliana and Philadelphia Crown Setting Earliana, 'John Baer' was six days earlier than Langdon's, and ten days earlier than Philadelphia Crown Setting. 'John Baer' ripens up better around the stem end than either of them, is much larger and smoother, with heavier vine and foliage. 'John Baer' is also solid and a good keeper after being picked when ripe—August 10. I now have the first 'John Baer' Tomatoes, which I picked over two weeks ago, lying on the roof of the house in the hot sun, and they have only just started to wither up. 'John Baer' Tomatoes picked Aug. 6 appeared as quite solid yet. In weight 'John Baer' Tomatoes will average from 6 to 12 ounces each, and about seven Tomatoes to a cluster or first setting, which ripens right up to the stem, perfectly solid, and they do not crack, like Earliana and Chalk's Jewel, around the stem.

"The only difference in treatment given 'John Baer' and Earliana is that Earliana was given a good coat of manure, plowed in before planting, while 'John Baer' got none, and were considerably larger, more solid, smoother and a brighter deep red color. 'John Baer' Tomato suits me to perfection."

"John Baer" Very Good Tomato for Vermont

George H. Mass, Windsor Co., Vt., Sept. 3, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is quite early. We find it a very good Tomato for this climate. It is of good size, smooth, round fruit and a good yielder."

"JOHN BAER"

THE EARLIEST AND BEST

PRODUCES PERFECT, SOLID, HIGH CROWN, BEAUTIFUL,

From large, strong, well matured plants in veneer band with roots undisturbed.

QUALITY

Earliest and best in 28 varieties.

Brilliant, deep red color, smoothest, no core, almost free from seed, delicious flavored, far more solid and meaty than any other; no culls. Ripens even up to the stem. Perfect beauties. Uniform in size and ripening. Picks two to one of any other variety—from 108 to 122 perfect fruit to the vine. A perfect shipper. Blight proof.

EARLINESS

Ten days earlier than Earliana in Canada. Earlier and better than Earliana in New Jersey. Ten days earlier than Globe in Florida. Planted six weeks later but come first in Texas. Three weeks ahead of any in Virginia. Three weeks ahead of any in New York. Three weeks ahead of any in Washington. Two weeks ahead of any in Maryland. Set out May 30, picked ripe fruit June 17 in New York.

"John Baer" Tomato

Earliest and Best Tomato on Earth

1st—"John Baer" Tomato produces large, beautiful, solid shipping Tomatoes in 30 days from large, strong, well matured plants grown in Veneer or Paper bands, with roots undisturbed.

2nd—"John Baer" Tomato produces the most perfect High Crown Tomatoes ever grown, entirely free from core.

3rd—"John Baer" Tomato produces an enormous crop of Tomatoes, 50 to 100 fruit to each plant.

4th—Every "John Baer" Tomato ripens evenly, right up to the stem.

5th—No cripples, no scalds, no blight, no cracked, no wrinkled, no one-sided, uneven, scarred fruit. When dead ripe "John Baer" Tomato will not burst.

6th—"John Baer" Tomato has a wonderful glistening, brilliant, bright red color.

7th—"John Baer" Tomato has a mild, deliciously sweet flavor. The finest flavor you have ever tasted.

8th—In shape and form exactly like its photograph in colors, on the front cover.

9th—"John Baer" Tomato is almost seedless; it requires 6 to 8 bushels of "John Baer" Tomatoes to make one pound of seed. A marvelous Stem Setter, often ten fruit in first cluster; solid and meaty.

10th—"John Baer" Tomato has just enough foliage —will stand plenty of manuring without going to vine. Set plants 3x3½ feet.

11th—"John Baer" Tomato is the most perfect shipping Tomato ever grown—24 fruit exactly fill a six-carrier basket.

12th—Each beautiful "John Baer" Tomato weighs about 6½ ounces.

13th—"John Baer" Tomato Seed was saved only by John Baer, the originator, who personally selected and picked every Tomato, from which he saved this seed, selecting only the most beautiful, perfect fruit of the Early Stem Set Clusters.

14th—"John Baer" Tomato is the offspring of two marvelous Tomatoes—one great specialist having devoted ten years in selecting and improving one parent, and another expert devoted five years in selecting and improving the other parent. The "John Baer" Tomato is, therefore, the result of Fifteen Generations of Improvement and Selection for earliness, quality, shape, fruit, color and shipping quality.

15th—As a Packing Tomato, "John Baer" is a miracle. They all pack Fancy, no seconds, and all pack whole. Peelers can prepare three bushels "John Baer" Tomatoes to one bushel of any other Tomato. Being such a tremendous yielder a bushel of "John Baer" Tomatoes can be gathered in one-third the time of any other Tomato. A large Baltimore Tomato Packer had all the "John Baer" Tomatoes he could secure packed separately, running them through a special process for his fanciest trade and his own private use.

"John Baer" Earliest and Best Tomato in Texas

Mr. N. T. Wells, Caldwell Co., Texas, writes June 21, 1914: "The 'John Baer' Tomatoes are the best Tomatoes I have ever raised. I planted them six weeks later than other early varieties and the 'John Baer' ripened first. They are well meated, fine flavor, perfect, round, ripen even up to the stem. They have done more than I expected them to do in spite of the weather conditions. We have had a continuous rain all year, had seven floods in six months. I don't want any other Tomato. Enclosed find my order for more 'John Baer' Tomato Seed."

"John Baer" Tomatoes Pay Him More Than $1.00 per Plant

Mr. N. S. Britt, Hancock Co., Ga., writes July 27, 1914: "I can't say too many good things about 'John Baer' Tomato. I have a patch I planted very early, from which I have already realized $1.00 per plant, besides furnishing all that we needed for my twenty-eight room hotel, and these same plants are still bearing. My main crop of 'John Baer' Tomatoes are just beginning to bear and they promise well."

"John Baer" Is the Poor Man's Tomato—It Yields So Abundantly

Mr. Gustav Bartholme, Onondaga County, N. Y., writes, Sept. 1, 1914: "I am glad of the opportunity to say that 'John Baer' Tomato is highly satisfactory. It is the poor man's Tomato, for it can be bountifully raised on very little land. I planted seven rows 'John Baer' Tomato, 350 feet long, which so far yielded 110 bushels with promises of many more.

"I did not intend to raise Tomatoes to sell. I have always raised them solely for my own home use, but I found they bore so many I could not make use of them all, and so I am supplying my neighbors and friends, who are well pleased with them. 'John Baer' Tomatoes are firm and round, with very few crippled ones among them."

Picking Two "John Baer" Tomatoes to One of Chalk's Jewel

Mr. Harry F. Hopkins, Baltimore Co., Md., writes July 29, 1914: "'John Baer' Tomatoes have proved to be as you represented them. I planted them along with other early varieties. 'John Baer' made a very much larger growth than the others. I found them to be the best cropping as well as early Tomatoes I have ever grown. I find 'John Baer' Tomato will stand the drought better than other Tomatoes on account of their large foliage, which protects the fine fruit from the hot sun. 'John Baer' is a good cropper. I am picking two 'John Baer' to one Chalk's Jewel in spite of the fact that we have the driest season on record. It is the worst growing season I have ever known in this section, and I have been here in the trucking business for forty years."

"John Baer" Tomato the Earliest of Six Different Kinds

James S. Casey, Middlesex Co., Mass., writes Sept. 11, 1914: "'John Baer' Tomatoes have done fine. They were the earliest of six different kinds I grew this year and now, the middle of September, are still full of ripe and green fruit, in spite of the season being cold and wet. Shall grow more of them another year."

"John Baer" Proved Earlier, Larger, Stronger, More Prolific, and Stands Extremes of Weather Better Than Bonny Best

Mr. E. G. Bell, Grower of Specialties in Vegetables, Pike County, Pa., writes Oct. 23, 1914: "I tested 'John Baer' Tomato with Bonny Best Tomato. I took 100 'John Baer' Tomato plants and planted them on an inside row of a patch of 8,000 Bonny Best, and the 'John Baer' proved earlier, larger, stronger grower, more prolific, and will stand extremes of weather better than any other Tomato I have ever grown or seen. 'John Baer' Tomato is a tremendous cropper of large, smooth, solid Tomatoes of good quality."

"John Baer" All Smooth and Fine — Chalk's Jewel Were No Good at All

Mr. Peter J. Losson, Floyd Co., Ind., Aug. 16, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is the smoothest and best all-round Tomato I have found in my experience of twenty years in Tomato growing. I have had the Chalk's Early Jewel as my best early Tomato for eight years. I planted half 'John Baer' and half Chalk's Jewel this year. We had a bad Spring; first too cold, then extremely hot, then long drouth. The Chalk's Jewel were no good at all, but 'John Baer' were all smooth and fine all the way through."

"John Baer" — 3 Weeks Ahead of Any Other Tomato

Mr. R. T. Scott, Nottoway Co., Va., Aug. 24, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes were ready for market three weeks before any other Tomato in our locality. I have been picking fine, large Tomatoes off of them for over two months. I had a very successful crop."

Never Saw Such a Wonderful Grower or Prolific Fruiter as "John Baer" Tomato

L. L. Adsit, Greene Co., Ohio, writes Sept. 25, 1914: "Last Spring I bought of you some 'John Baer' Tomato seed, planted it carefully and gave it special attention, staked each plant, kept the suckers off of them. I treated the 'John Baer' as I do all my early sorts for early market. I have made a hobby of Tomatoes for twelve years, and have tried all sorts in almost every way of growing them. Yet I was not prepared for the great surprise I had in 'John Baer.' To say I was pleased was putting it mild. I never saw such a wonderful grower or prolific fruiter in my life. As to quality, it was simply fine. Beat all other sorts I ever tried, and I have tested seventy sorts in one year."

Hurrah for "John Baer"—He That Laughs Last, Laughs Best

Mr. Edward Faidley, Sullivan Co., Tenn., Aug. 7, 1914, writes: "The 'John Baer' Tomatoes are the finest I ever had. I bought an ounce from you last Spring. Some other gardeners hooted at me paying $4.00 an ounce for them. Now I am selling Tomatoes at fancy prices, while others are selling at any old price they can get. I have always found Bolgiano's seed A No. 1."

'John Baer" Three Weeks Earlier and Far Superior

Mr. William Peterson, Asotin Co., Wash., Aug. 13, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes are far superior to two other well-known early varieties of Tomatoes. The 'John Baer' picked three weeks earlier and are far superior to the other two varieties in size, color and productiveness. Although we are having a long, hot, dry season, the 'John Baer' plants are holding up in fine shape."

Never Tasted Such Nice Tomatoes as "John Baer"

Mr. G. P. Butler, Jr., Santa Cruz, Calif., Aug. 25, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is all you claim for it. It is certainly a good one. All my customers say they have never tasted such nice Tomatoes before. I shall plant the same Tomato next year."

J. Bolgiano & Son,

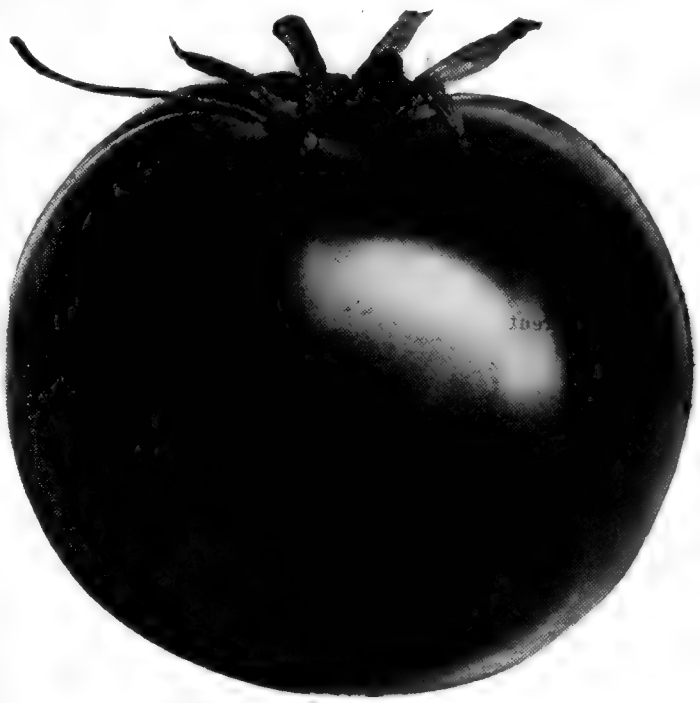
Gentlemen: Your ad. of February 6, in "The Florists' Exchange," is some puff for "John Baer" Tomato which is all true. I tried the "John Baer" last year and there was not one in your ad. that had one on me.

From 620 plants I sold over 2½ tons of Tomatoes. Set 3 feet each way and trained to Bamboo stakes trimmed to one shoot. When they became heavy with Tomatoes, I tied the top of four stakes together, as shown in the enclosed photo, and as the season was cold in the Spring could not set the plants until the last of May and commenced to market on the 17th of July. I raised Celery between the rows. Enclosed find check for 1 ounce of "John Baer" Tomato seed.

Very truly,
(Signed) S. D. PRICHARD.

"John Baer" Bore Tomatoes Two Weeks Earlier Than Any Others



Mr. Richard Bowles, Niagara Co., N. Y., R. F. D. No. 30, Sept. 1, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato proved to be a success. It bore Tomatoes two weeks earlier than any other seed and we had a very fine yield. We are thankful to have found a Tomato earlier than what we have ever had."

"John Baer" Earliest, Heavy Bearer, Smooth, Fine Flavor

Miss Carrie B. Bankard, Carroll Co., Md., Sept. 3, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomatoes are the earliest I have ever had. I have been very successful with them. I find the 'John Baer' a very heavy bearer, very smooth and round, and of a fine flavor."

"John Baer" Tomato Wins in Competition with Comet

Herman Brownschweig, Marlboro, Mass., writes Sept. 20, 1914: "I bought some of your 'John Baer' Tomato last Winter and I must say it is far superior to any other Tomato. I grew 'John Baer' Tomato under glass and it produced more and better fruit than either the Comet or Dwarf Stone."

J. Bolgiano & Son,

Gentlemen: Glad to see your ad. on "John Baer" Tomato Seed again. I bought $1.00 worth of "John Baer" Tomato Seed from you last year. All the people gave me the laugh for paying such price for Tomato Seed, but when they found me picking Big, Fine, Solid, Fine Tasting Fruit on the 3rd day of July, 1914, then all the neighbors came to see them. I could have sold all my fruit, but to please the "wise ones" I presented them each with a nice basket. Out of 50 "John Baer" Plants I picked on an average of ½ bushel every other day, where on my other plants I did not average a small measure a day. I saved 12 of my largest and best "John Baer" Tomatoes for seed, there wasn't enough seed in them to give me 50 plants this year, so you see why I must send for some to be sure I will have good old "John Baer." By me it is more than you claimed for it, in your last year's ad. in "The Florist Exchange."

A Week to Ten Days Earlier Than Livingston's Globe

Mr. H. E. Ruckert, Sec.-Treas. Terrell Land and Development Company, Florida, writes May 22, 1914: "After careful and exhaustive tests, 'John Baer' Tomatoes, planted on hammock land, rich soil, heavily fertilized, produced the best results of all. Produced a heavy vine, full of fruit and matured a week to ten days earlier than Livingston's Globe, planted at the same time under like conditions. The soil is naturally moist and fruit was only damaged slightly by the drought."

"John Baer" the Best Tomato in Kansas

Mr. H. W. Drake, Atchison, Kansas, Aug. 17, 1914, writes: "The 'John Baer' Tomato was the earliest Tomato for its size of the five varieties I raised. It was much the best of all Tomatoes I have ever raised. 'John Baer' is early, large, smooth, good flavor, a good slicer, and a perfect canning Tomato. It is the best Tomato I know."

"John Baer" Is Earlier than Earliana, and Far Superior

Mr. William A. Bridle, Monmouth Co., N. J., Sept. 3, 1914, writes: "'John Baer' Tomato is exceptionally early—earlier than 'Earliana,' and far superior to that variety. It ripens well up to the stem perfectly smooth, solid and of fine flavor, fine color and very prolific; altogether I would consider it the best early Tomato to date."

SENATE CUTS OUT FREE SEEDS.

The Senate committee, in reporting the agricultural appropriation bill February 16, eliminated the paragraph providing funds for the congressional free seed distribution of 1916, for which contracts were let a fortnight ago. It must not be considered, however, that the seed distribution is seriously endangered. The same thing happened last year: the House provided for the distribution, the Senate cut it out and then the conference committee put it back. The same thing is more than likely to happen in the present instance, but perhaps some day the conference committee will arise to its opportunity and end this oldtime abuse.

BODDINGTON MAKES STATEMENT.

Arthur T. Boddington gave out the following statement February 15:

"At a meeting of the larger creditors of A. T. Boddington, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York, held Thursday afternoon, February 11, the consensus of opinion was shown to be unanimously in favor of continuing the business, looking to the best interests of all concerned. Accordingly, a creditors' protective committee was appointed, the following gentlemen being elected to serve thereon: C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nursery Co.; Chas. Schwake, of Chas. Schwake & Co., Inc., and Remson S. Mills. This committee will take full control of the business, Mr. Boddington giving his active cooperation. It was demonstrated that a forced sale at this time would leave creditors absolutely without any dividend whatsoever, whereas under the economies to be put in force by the cerditors' protective committee, and with the coöperation of the creditors themselves, there is every possibility of the business being eventually restored to a profitable basis. The house of Arthur T. Boddington is well and favorably known to the purchasing public, it has expended large sums in ad-

SEED LAW IN WEST VIRGINIA.

The seed trade of West Virginia should take prompt action with respect to Senate Bill No. 82, now before the lower house of the state legislature for concurrence. The bill provides for the collection, examination and testing of seeds sold in West Virginia for agricultural purposes and requires certificates for their purity. Section 1 provides that no person, firm or corporation shall, by himself, his agent, or as representative of any other person, firm or corporation, sell or offer for sale within the state, for seeding purposes, any agricultural seeds exceeding one pound in weight unless the same shall have attached thereto a label on which is plainly printed or written, in the English language, the following:

(1) The commonly accepted name of the kind and variety of seed.
(2) Full name and address of seedsman, importer, agent or dealer.
(3) Statement of purity of the seed contained therein.
(4) Germinating power of seed.
(5) Locality where seed was grown, if known.

Section 2 defines agricultural seeds as follows:

For the purposes of this act the term agricultural seed shall include seed of the red clover, either medium or mammoth; white clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, timothy, orchard grass, Kentucky bluegrass, red top, Bromis inermis, oat grass, rye grass, the fescues, the millets, other grass and forage plant, flax, rape, buckwheat and cereals.

No agricultural seeds as defined in Section 2 of the act shall be sold or offered for sale or distribution in the state which contain greater numbers than one to 3,000 of the seeds under examination the seeds of the following named noxious weeds: Canada thistle, Russian thistle, couch, quack or quitch grass, clover dodder, alfalfa dodder, field dodder, English charlock or wild mustard, wild oats, corn cockle, ox-eye daisy, Indian mustard, butter and eggs, sow thistle, ribwort or English plan-

SIT UP.

Here is a new one for you. It shows the effect of being dug from a bed and potted for the occasion, but that matters little when it also shows something that no other snapdragon on earth can. There are over SIXTY flower shoots, all making their way up to blossoms. We were experimenting for Xmas blossoms and got there, cutting the first December 10. You can see what will soon happen again and keep it up until July. We see no reason why this lot of plants will not yield ONE HUNDRED blossoms each.

Now, what we are doing any one can do. Our simple instructions make it plain. Our S. P. Seedling is easy to do. There is absolutely no need for disbudding. They come as nearly taking care of themselves as any plant we know. It does just the same trick in the garden or field, and as a bedder it is a great, showy, profitable proposition. Secure at once a few packets of seed and have a block of nice plants ready for outdoor planting. Price of seed of our Silver Pink, $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00.

SACRIFICE OF PLANTS—Our seed boxes are crowding us. While the supply lasts we will sell XX plants as follows: S. P. Seedlings, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1,000. Yellow, Garnet Gem, Nelrose, $4.00 per 100; 300 for $10.00. Buxton's and mixed, $2.00 per 100. All of this stock is first quality, and you had better move quick if you would get your share of it.

tain, velvet weed or star thistle, and wild carrot.

Where the seeds of the weeds mentioned above are present in fewer numbers than one in 3,000 of the seed being examined, a statement shall be made on the label attached to the package naming the weed seeds present therein.

The seeds of the following named weeds shall be classed as impurities in agricultural seeds, as defined in Section 2 of the act: Sheep sorrel, green foxtail, yellow foxtail or pigeon grass, night flowering catch-fly, black seeded plantain, common plantain, curled dock, pigweed, lamb's quarters, lady's thumb or smart weed, yellow trefoil, burr clover, sweet clover, chick weed, orange hawkweed, black bindweed, ragweed.

When such impurities, or any of them, are present in quantity exceeding two per cent of said agricultural seeds, the approximate percentage of each shall be plainly stated on the tag attached, as specified in Section 1 of the act. When foreign matter is present in excess of two per cent the percentage of each kind of impurity shall be stated on the label. If the seed contain five per cent or more by weight of some other seed the percentage shall be stated on the label.

Agricultural seed shall be considered as misbranded:

(1) When seeds low in value are submitted under the label for those of similar appearance but greater value.
(2) When southern-grown seeds are labeled as northern-grown.
(3) When seeds are in any other respect not true to the label under which they are sold or offered for sale;
(4) When seeds are sold under any label other than that of the dealer selling same;
(5) When labels or tags supplied by a wholesale dealer are attached to lots of seed not purchased from such wholesale dealer, or to lots of seed other than those for which they were intended to be used.

When so misbranded, agricultural seeds, as defined herein, shall not be sold or offered for sale within the state.

Elaborate tests and inspections are provided for under the direction of the commissioner of agriculture.

The penalty for violation of any of the many provisions of the act, if it becomes a law, will be a fine of from $10 to $100.

IF YOU HAVE NOT THE WINTER-FLOWERING ORCHID SWEET PEA

in your greenhouses, see and ask your neighbor how they pay. It is still time to sow some now.

Now is the time to sow some of the Summer Sweet Pea Seed, outdoors or in cold frames, to have good crop for Decoration Day. I have only the best commercial varieties, like: Frank Dolby (lavender), Nora Unwin (white), Gladys Unwin (pink), etc.; 1 lb., $1.50; 5 lbs. of each, at $5.00.

My reselected Pink Spencer, White Spencer, Lavender Spencer, Lilac Spencer, Orange Spencer, Red Spencer, etc., at $5.00 per pound; in 5-lb. lots, at $4.00. Guaranteed over 90% true.

Countess Spencer, White Spencer (Burpee), Blanche Ferry Spencer, C. Routzahn, King Edward Spencer, at $1.50 per lb.; in 5-lb. lots, at $1.00, as long as surplus lasts.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

The Dahlia Farm, East Moriches, N. Y.—"An Approved List of Dahlias, Gladioli and Peonies," a closely printed 32-page booklet.

R. H. Bath, Ltd., Wisbech, England.—Two wholesale catalogues. One of them is a 12-page, illustrated seed list; the other is a plant list, in pocket form and containing thirty-two closely printed pages. The plant stock includes chrysanthemums, carnations, dahlias, cannas, peonies and other perennials, strawberry plants, etc.

J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.—An illustrated catalogue of dahlias, gladioli, cannas, irises and other such stock, small fruits, perennials, flowering shrubs, etc. Careful instructions are given on the culture of the dahlia, which is the Alexander specialty and which occupies twenty-nine of the total forty-eight pages of the book.

M. Crawford Co., Cuyahoga Falls, O.—An 8-page catalogue of strawberry plants and gladiolus bulbs. A number of the Kunderd varieties of gladioli are included.

Thornton Bros., Lawrence, Mass.—An 80-page, illustrated catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds, sprayers, garden hose, lawn mowers and miscellaneous supplies; contains some tabulated matter with reference to the number of plants from seed and the time for germination and maturity.

Carters Tested Seeds, Inc., Raynes Park, England, with branches at Boston, Mass., Seattle, Wash., and Toronto, Ont.—A highly creditable seed catalogue, bound in a tasteful red and gold cover and printed on a fine quality of paper, which shows the typography and illustrations to the greatest possible advantage. A little more than half of the total 190 pages are devoted to flower seeds; the rest of the space is occupied by the vegetable lists, with the exception of a few pages of tools and sundries.

State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont.—"Silver jubilee number" of catalogue, containing lists of seeds, outdoor and greenhouse plants, fruit-bearing and ornamental nursery stock, vegetable plants and roots, tools and other supplies; 120 pages, freely illustrated.

H. Cannell & Sons, Eynsford, England.—A 62-page, illustrated catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds, greenhouse and hardy plants, fruit trees, small fruits, winter-flowering shrubs and horticultural sundries.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—With this latest arrival added, this year's quartet of Burpee seed books now becomes a quintet. The former four books have already been referred to, separately and collectively, in previous issues of The Review; the present book is entitled "New Edition of Thirty-fifth Anniversary Supplement," and contains an interesting account of the different departments of the Burpee business, with numerous illustrations showing indoor and outdoor operations.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Michell's Specialties for Florists, for Early Sowing and Planting," a 6-page bulletin containing lists of canna roots and gladiolus bulbs; also seeds of asters, petunias, salvias, stocks and verbenas.

VALLEY PIPS FROM COPENHAGEN.

At a time when, in former years, valley pip importations were past and being forgotten, they continue to arrive in varying quantities, increasing a total that is already considerably larger than last year's. The consignments on the steamer Hellig Olav, which arrived at New York February 10, from Copenhagen, were as follows:

Consignee.	Cases.
Heydemann, D.	118
Loechner & Co.	10
Schwake, C., & Co.	59
American Express Co.	171

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Baker, Ore.—Frank F. Hacker, grower for the Baker Floral & Seed Co., was operated on, February 10, for appendicitis, being the first patient in the new $300,000 hospital.

San Diego, Cal.—Miss Kate O. Sessions has divided her 37-acre tract overlooking the part of the city known as Pacific Beach into plots of from one to two acres, on which she has planted not only trees and plants for foliage and flowers, but also plants for perfume. These plots she is now putting on the market.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is still a scarcity of first-class stock in the market, especially Beauties. The few small growers of this popular rose do not have enough so that the retailers can depend upon a regular supply; consequently northern points are depended upon for quantity orders. Other rose orders are well taken care of, though even of these there has been no surplus. Carnations have held up much better and may be described as good. Bulbous stock, such as daffodils and late Paper Whites, are good, but the futility of growing the early tulips in this section has again been proved by the short-stemmed, ridiculous looking little flowers being sent in. They are absolutely useless for anything except wiring up for cheap funeral work and there are plenty of things that can be grown for less money for this class of work. Violets are fair, but the heavy rains seem to have washed all the fragrance out of them. Valley is plentiful. The large fronds of the native woodwardia are fine for decoration, standing well for days and always keeping stiff and green. There is a great abundance and variety in the green stock shipped from the north, mostly shrubs. Mexican ivy is not so much used as in former years. Plant trade is a little better.

Club Meeting and Lecture.

It was the consensus of opinion among the members of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society that the lecture by E. D. Sturtevant at the postponed February meeting, on "Water Lilies," was the best ever given under the auspices of the society. Unfortunately, the evening of February 9 was, if possible, worse than that of the previous week and there was only a limited attendance, but Mr. Sturtevant held the audience from the start and there was not a minute during the hour and a half taken up by his speech that he was not followed with the closest attention.

A little personal talk as an introduction, referring to his early rambles in the east for wild orchids and aquatics, led up to his remarks upon the wild lotus or Nelumbium luteum, which is so well known in eastern states. Pictures of acres of this beautiful native were shown, also of the magnificent Victoria regia, which Mr. Sturtevant grew back in New Jersey, with leaves six feet across. His cultural advice on this plant and other aquatics was listened to with great interest. He pointed out the need of a heavy loam or clay for these plants and advised blood meal as the best stimulant or fertilizer for all.

The need of raising young seedlings, and holding them in a more or less starved condition at first, was also pointed out and then Mr. Sturtevant gave a brief history of the water lily as he has known and followed it for over forty years. He paid tribute to M. Marliac, the French hybridist, who has done so much for the family, and also alluded briefly and pleasantly to the origin of the Swedish pink form of nymphæa used in the earlier crosses. He spoke of his own success in raising hybrids from N. gracilis, the first of the race to stand out of the water like a lotus instead of floating, and of the suitability of this class for cutting.

At the close he invited those present to ask any questions they had in mind, and by this means many interesting and instructive cultural points were brought out. Mr. Sturtevant, in short, showed how closely he had followed and studied this beautiful class of plants, being never at a loss for any point of information asked, and a hearty vote of thanks, with all rising, was given at the end. Adjournment was not had until quite a late hour, but everyone was fully satisfied that the evening had been well spent.

The address at the March meeting will be on "Vegetable Culture," by W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre.

The California Evergreen Co. is showing a splendid grade of cut lilies.

J. M. Ridley, the proprieter of the Harbor Floral Co., at Wilmington, says he is well satisfied with the start they have made, his opening having been a great success.

At Darling's Flower Shop I noted a splendid lot of cut camellias. H. Reeve Darling has just returned from a business trip to San Francisco.

John Polder, of Polder & Groen, Montebello, has purchased a Buick automobile for his own and his family's pleasure, and the firm has purchased a delivery truck.

The Market.

There has been plenty of business during the last week, and conditions seem to be slightly improving. There has been considerably more funeral work the last few days, which has helped to clean up the moderate quantities of cut flowers coming to market. Good roses are now arriving in fair quantity, and there is good sale for all of them. Carnations are not overplentiful and some days were quite scarce, with not enough to fill orders. Daffodils are fairly plentiful, and some stores have been cutting prices on them, with the idea, possibly, of catching a little cheap trade, when the regular price might just as well have been maintained. Tulips are in fair numbers and are being cleaned up well. There are more and better freesias offered now than is customary, and they are being used for various purposes. Callas are selling well, and though there is no great demand for Paper Whites, the ones that are coming in are being disposed of.

There is no great variety in pot plants. Cyclamens are not selling fast. Bulbous stock in pots is selling better than almost anything of that description.

brought up before the present state legislature, has given the bill full and mature consideration and made several amendments to the bill. A committee from the Tacoma Florists' Club met with them and their approval was secured to the proposed amendments. The committee appointed one of their number, J. J. Bonnell, to confer with the legislative committee, and he, accompanied by two members of the Tacoma committee, George Seaverns and H. Benthien, journeyed to Olympia for that purpose Tuesday, February 9, and met the committee there.

Gus Peterson, of the Rosaia Bros. store, is mourning the loss of his father, who passed away last week.

John Holze, of the Queen City Floral Co., went to Olympia, Tuesday, February 9, with the delegations from the Seattle and Tacoma Florists' Clubs, and on his return called at Tacoma and Kent.

J. Sahli, of Kent, was calling on his old friends in the Brighton district, Wednesday, February 10.

As an example of the want of knowledge of some of the men who receive appointments as fruit and horticultural inspectors, the following instance is worthy of record: One of our local nurserymen sent a shipment of Lupinus polyphyllus to a neighboring state and the inspector there condemned them on account of "something on the roots." Now, every person who knows anything of leguminous plants ought to know that the nodules on the roots are anything but harmful, and as on lupines they are unusually prominently developed, possibly that inspector thought he had found a terrible disease. Would it not be a benefit if some of our appointive officers were selected for their practical knowledge rather than for their political value?

The father of Mario Bianchi, an employee at the Paris Florist store, who was employed as watchman at a coal mine at Bayne, was robbed and murdered Friday night, February 5. No clew has yet been found to his assailant. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

A few bright, warm days, suggesting April weather, have made trade brisk with the seedsmen and nurserymen and have caused considerable inquiry for bedding stock. St. Valentine's day, and Chinese New Year's, February 13, added materially to the volume of business. The Chinese are becoming good customers, and show a preference for potted stock in bright colors. Azaleas are quite popular with them, and they want large full-blooming plants.

Reds and yellows in both potted plants and cut flowers were the best selling colors for St. Valentine's day.

Carnations and local-grown roses are scarce. Supplies of roses are brought from California. Bulbous stock, both cut and potted, is more abundant, but hardly equal to the demand. Orchids are in full supply and are of excellent quality. Normal prices prevail, both to the grower and to the retailer.

SUPERIOR-GROWN ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

September Morn Our sensational light pink rose. Throws extra strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet, producing high-grade stock without pinching. Wonder ul keeper, full, double, with petals of grand substance waved on edges, giving it a most distinct appearance. Light shade of flesh-pink on outside, shading to pure rose-pink in center. We planted 10,000 of it for cutting and have had more repeat orders on it than on any other rose and at better prices. Flowers every day in the year and never soft in the hottest weather. Strong stems, no mildew or spot. (See our full-page ads in issues of January 21 and 28.)

Own root plants only, from 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000, 5000 for $1000.00.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. F. F. Thompson The beautiful shell-pink sport of the well known Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. It combines all the fine qualities of its parent, and this surely is recommendation enough when added to its magnificent coloring. Always in bloom and already proved a money-maker.

$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000

Hadley Brilliant, deep, velvety crimson, a color which it retains all the year round. Flowers borne on stiff, upright stems, and a first-class variety in every particular.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys—an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color; is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season. We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

Near the corner of Twenty-third and Overton streets, in front of a small range of glass houses, stands a little salesroom. The name across the front is Henry Ehlen, Florist. Here is located Portland's oldest active florist. Reaching Oregon in 1869, Mr. Ehlen started in business in 1872, on a spot near the city's center now occupied by a skyscraper hotel. He sold his property for a large sum and moved farther out, where he remained several years, until the growing city crowded him out again. He reached his present location about ten years ago. His chief pride is his large rose garden, which has cement walks around and through it. He grows small lots of many varieties of pot plants and has some benched stock, all of which he retails. PORTLAND, OREGON offer an immense crop of superb "Private Stock" Mastodon Mixed seedlings, our elite strain. Classy, stocky plants; per 1000, $4.00; per 5000, $16.00; all prepaid, anywhere, any time. Mastodon Mixed seed, ⅛-oz., $1.00; oz., $7.00.

erty interests place him beyond the necessity of engaging in active business, but he cannot change the habits of a lifetime and could not be happy without a lot of growing things to care for.

S. Lubliner displayed for St. Valentine's day some heart-shaped flower boxes for holding corsage bouquets and short-stemmed flowers.

Robert Fulton, a member of the firm of L. Boehmer & Co., nurserymen and seedsmen, of Yokohama, called on the trade last week.

R. Hoffman conducts the store of Hoffman Bros., at 768 Glisan street, and is interested with his brother, Wm. Hoffman, in a range of glass at Silvan, where they grow considerable stock for wholesale. Business at the store, they say, shows an improvement over January of last year.

Max Smith is showing some fine red tulips and has an attractive window in yellow.

Clarke Bros. featured for St. Valentine's day red roses, violets, valley and potted red tulips.

The Tonseth Floral Co. specializes in potted tulips and azaleas. The firm had considerable trade from the Chinese for their New Year's day.

The Wilson-Crout Co. and the Holden Floral Co. are both busy handling stock for Easter and for bedding purposes.

Niklas & Son have some excellent valley, grown at Clackamas.

W. Hennings, recently with the Hollywood Gardens, near Seattle, has taken a position with Hendee Bros.

G. J. Burkhardt and A. C. F. Burkhardt started in business as Burkhardt Bros. in 1883, locating on a small piece of ground at what is now Twenty-third and Glisan streets. Later they added to their ground area until they occupied the greater part of two blocks. In 1905 they dissolved partnership and have continued in business independently, on opposite sides of Glisan street. The city has grown toward them until they suffer from the shade of tall apartment buildings and from the blighting effects of high taxes. Both establishments grow a variety of stock, benched and in pots. The proximity of two large hospitals helps out their trade. S. W. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that the Swiss Floral Co., East Seventh and Hancock streets, Portland, Ore., offers for registration the salvia described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Description—In habit of growth similar to Salvia Bonfire; the corolla, or petals, bright scarlet; calyx, creamy white, slightly flushed with a tinge of red on the surface exposed to the sun's rays, giving the calyx an appearance of salmon pink on white ground; free and profuse bloomer; result of crossing Salvia Bonfire with Salvia Bavaria. Name—Red Cross.

Public notice is hereby given that Richard E. Loeben, Gloversville, N. Y., offers for registration the carnation described below:

Description — Sport of Carnation Benora; growth, foliage and formation of plant identically the same as those of the parent; a light red in color, same as red striping on Benora.

John Young, Sec'y.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE obituary column this week contains a notice of the death of William Smith, for fifty-five years in the nursery business at Pittsburgh.

FROM Vacaville, Cal., it is reported that C. J. Uhl and C. R. McBride have formed a partnership for the purpose of carrying on a nursery business.

J. S. KERR, of Sherman, heads a committee of Texas nurserymen that is assisting the state commission in maintaining a horticultural exhibit at the San Francisco exposition.

NURSERYMEN are hoping for an early and prolonged season. As a rule the number of orders on hand is not so great as usual, but there will be a good showing if the season is not too short.

IN a circular letter to creditors the executrix of the Hiram T. Jones estate, Elizabeth, N. J., states that it is hoped eventually to pay fifty per cent or more on the claims. Creditors are offered the immediate opportunity to take one-fourth their claims in nursery stock.

THE Vermilion Parish Nursery & Orchard Co., capitalized at $25,000, has been organized at Abbeville, La. R. J. Montagne is the president of the company, John Nugier, Jr., treasurer, and J. Camille Broussard, secretary. The company has purchased 100 acres and will plant 20,000 Satsuma orange trees and thirty acres as a nursery.

MARK AUKEMAN has resigned his position as foreman of Schneider's Greenhouses, at Springfield, O., and is starting in the landscape gardening business, with a temporary office and salesgrounds at the corner of Pleasant and Limestone streets. He is a native of Holland, 24 years old, and has been in the landscape gardening business since he was 12, in Holland and Germany. He came to the United States in 1912.

THAT seventy-five nurserymen and growers have signified their intention of complying with a more rigid inspection of nursery stock, and that from 2,000 to 120,000 trees are being inspected daily, are two important features of the report of Horticultural Inspector Fred P. Roullard made to the supervisors of Fresno county, California. During the preceding month 2,386 shipments were made from the county, while only 101 shipments of trees were imported. Most of these were deciduous stock from Oregon and Washington. A few cases came from Angers, France.

HARRISONS' NEW COMPANIES.

The interests in the Harrison nurseries at Berlin, Md., are adding to their orchard investments and have just incorporated two Delaware companies for that purpose. In each case the incorporators are Orlando Harrison and George A. Harrison, of Berlin, and John G. Townsend, of Shelbyville, Del. The Redlands Orchards Co., capital $100,000, and the Riverside Orchards Co., capital $50,000, are the titles. The head offices are to be at Berlin. The former is licensed to "grow, cultivate and deal in fruits, trees and shrubbery," but the latter also is authorized to do a general cold storage business.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

MAY BAR ALL EUROPEAN PINES.

It is reported that because of the danger to American nursery stock, an investigation is being made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to discuss a proposed quarantine on the importation of all pines from Europe. During the last year imported pines have been found to be infested with the European pine-shoot moth. In Europe this is said to be one of the principal insect enemies of pines and is especially destructive in nurseries, young forests and ornamental plantations. It kills or injures the young twig growth and deforms the tree to a serious extent.

In this country the insect seems to be still confined to the European pines in Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia. Strenuous efforts are already being made to stamp it out, and it is believed that these will be successful if no further importations of infested stock are permitted. The white pine blister rust has already resulted in the exclusion of all five-leaved pines from Europe and Asia. The proposed quarantine will extend this prohibition to all classes of pines from Europe. No restriction is proposed on the importation of pine seed.

PROPAGATION OF GRAPE VINES.

I would like to know how to propagate hard-wooded grape cuttings under glass. What is considered the right time to put them in the propagating bench? I understand February 1 is about the proper date. Should the wood be cut in the fall and stored in a damp cellar, or can it be cut later? What is considered the right temperature for them? Should the bench be boarded in for bottom heat; if so, what should the temperature be in the sand; also on top? Would a bench suitable for rose propagation do for grape cuttings? Is it necessary to shade them?

J. P.

I am not certain from your letter whether you refer to greenhouse grapes, varieties of Vitis vinifera, such as Muscat of Alexandria, Black Hamburg, Gros Colman, etc., or to the American hardy grapes. If the former, the best plan is to put single-eye cuttings in 2¼-inch pots of fibrous loam early in February and plunge these in a bottom heat of 80 degrees. The top heat should be 60 to 65 degrees. Keep the cuttings well watered, but use care when growth is starting to prevent damping off of the young shoots. Pot along before the small pots become crowded with roots. Cuttings could also be rooted in the sand and potted later. Little shade is needed.

If the outdoor grapes are referred to, make cuttings containing two or three eyes and insert in the sand in just the same way as suggested for the regular greenhouse grapes. Indoor propagation is not to be recommended, however. If the cuttings are made early in the winter, tied in bundles and packed in damp loam in a cold cellar, then planted outdoors in nursery rows and firmly tamped, they will make decidedly better plants than when rooted under glass.

If, however, you wish to propagate some under glass, give them a bottom heat of 70 to 75 degrees and treat as advised for greenhouse grapes. If you are desirous of good plants, the best plan would be to put each cutting in a 2½-inch or 3-inch pot. Stand them where they can get some bottom heat, water carefully, and nearly all will root. Plant outdoors in nursery rows as soon as warm weather arrives. I prefer outdoor propagation, however, in every way; first, because it curtails labor, and second, because the chances of rooting and making strong plants are greater.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business in this city for St. Valentine's day was brisk. In fact, it far exceeded the expectations of many in the trade. The demand was for practically everything the retailer handles. Of course, only moderate-priced articles were sold in quantity. Plants ranging in price from $1 to $3 were in big demand, as were boxes of cut flowers and baskets of flowers. Violets and other flowers for corsage use sold well. Extra help was required by many of the stores to handle the many deliveries. Much credit is due those retailers who keep everlastingly decorating their windows appropriately and advertising these special days in many ways. Some few of the stores still refrain from doing anything special in the way of window display for special occasions and it is no wonder that business with them is dull.

Various Notes.

J. Breitmeyer's Sons are now advertising the opening of their new branch store in the beautiful David Whitney building, just across from the new Statler hotel. This opening is to be about March 15.

Another most important change in the retail business will be the removal of E. A. Fetters, who will open a fine store at the corner of Woodward avenue and Clifford street about March 1. Mr. Fetters' store will occupy a space 20 x 60 feet. Being right in the heart of the city, his rent will naturally be high and it is understood that it will run close to $1,000 per month. This is by far the highest rent ever paid by a florist in this city, and only a man as well established and well thought of as Mr. Fetters would be safe in undertaking such a proposition. Mr. Fetters will then give up his Farmer street store. H. S.

Belvidere, Ill.—Lyon & Anderson have discontinued operating the Fairview Greenhouses and will conduct those at the Riverside location only, also maintaining the store on South State street. Their lease from the Eldredge estate expired January 16 and was not renewed, as the work of running the two ranges was too much. John Eldredge will manage the Fairview Greenhouses. The superintendent in charge is James Leek. Lyon & Anderson will buy the flowers grown at the Fairview Greenhouses.

This Ought to Be OF INTEREST to YOU

that local growers have placed the largest individual orders for my new Carnation "ALICE," offered to the trade this season. Some have doubled and trebled their orders on successive visits.

The color is an exquisite shade of clear, soft pink, midway between Enchantress and Gloriosa. Habit of plant, ideal, strong, very early and a continuous and without doubt the most productive commercial variety I have offered to date.

Prices—Per 100, $12.00; per 1000, $100.00; per 2500, $237.50; per 5000, $450.00; per 10,000, $800.00.

QUEEN MARIE

THE NEW LIGHT MAGENTA POMPON

We have grown it four years and know it is a good money-maker. Very productive. Planted in June from 2-inch pots, with two pinchings, you can get 15 to 18 sprays per plant, each spray carrying 15 to 25 flowers. Needs no tying, stems being strong and stiff enough to support themselves. Flowers very double. Holds petals until dry. Plenty of foliage—excellent as a pot plant as well as for cutting. We offer this as a money-maker for florists.

From 2-inch pots, $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000. Delivery at once.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade was heavy here for St. Valentine's day and for several days before, as there was a great deal of funeral work. St. Valentine's day has become one of our best flower days, though a few years ago it amounted to nothing. Violets were first choice, but it was not long before they were all gone; then sweet peas got their share of attention and immense quantities were disposed of. All other flowers, such as roses, carnations, valley and even bulbous flowers, were cleaned up and Monday found everyone scratching around trying to find stock to fill orders, as there was a busy time in funeral work. Potted plants also moved well, and though the trade called mostly for bright colors, about everything was cleaned up.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens has been cutting loads of bulbous flowers and reports that these are being cleaned up in good shape.

C. A. Roth reports that funeral work has been heavy of late.

The Livingston Seed Co. had a big trade for St. Valentine's day and the sales of violets were especially large.

T. J. Ludwig had everything running in good shape and reports business fine for a new firm.

The Columbus Floral Co. sold out everything that looked like a flower and says that on Monday it was difficult to promise anything until the cut came in.

Richard Winters had a good cut of sweet peas, of which he makes a specialty.

Fred Bauman said St. Valentine business was fair for a beginner, as he had been started only a little over a week at 956 West Broad street, but he hopes to work up a fine neighborhood trade, as he is away out from the shopping district.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. cleaned up on everything in the way of cut stock and about all the plants that were ready to go out.

Graff Bros. report heavy sales for St. Valentine's day. J. M.

Buy for Quality

We are frequently complimented on the high quality of the cuttings we are sending out. They are so short and stocky, and so well rooted. Well, that is the kind of cuttings we believe in. We select the cuttings that are propagated for selling, just as carefully as those intended for our own stock. That's why they give satisfaction. We are propagating:—

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Flowers last week were more plentiful than they have been for some time, the only shortage noted being of American Beauty roses, of which there were hardly enough to supply ordinary demands. St. Valentine's day business was heavier than in previous years. Baskets of cut flowers, sprays and potted plants sold well, and in addition there was a number of large party decorations. White and yellow tulips are quite plentiful and good. There is a better demand for snapdragon. Violets are sold on the street at prices almost below those at which the storeman can purchase them at wholesale. Mignonette is good and in fair demand.

Various Notes.

Adolph Gude has quite recovered from the recent accident in which he was badly scalded by steam when a pipe which he was endeavoring to blow out slipped and allowed the steam to touch his body.

The Washington Florists Co. announces that it will take possession of its new quarters, on Fourteenth street, near New York avenue, March 1. This store is neither as large nor as imposing as the old one, but will be quite attractive when the work of remodeling the front is completed. J. Harper is manager of the store.

C. Albert Small, of the New York store of J. H. Small & Sons, visited Washington last week to be present at the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club, the season's biggest event here.

A large number of florists aided in the celebration incident to the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Washington Board of Trade at the new Willard hotel last week. The large ballroom on the tenth floor was handsomely decorated by J. H. Small & Sons. The ceiling was entirely masked with greens, and hundreds of Japanese lanterns aided in the making of a garden scene.

C. L. L.

Durham, N. C.—The sun does not shine often during the winter months, even as far south as this place. Fred Roll says that for three weeks in December he had no sun, and January 29 was the first day it appeared in the first month of this year. Although his roses are what is to be expected under these conditions, his carnations are looking fine, as they have been all winter.

Our New Rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong, upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large, handsome, dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink, deepening toward the center, with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose. It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

READING, PA.

Club Meeting.

It is believed the Reading Florists' Association enjoys a unique distinction, that of having made it unanimous—every eligible person within its district is a member, including the florists of Reading and those of the surrounding boroughs and towns—West Reading, Wyomissing, Brookside, Shillington, Sinking Spring, Hyde Park, Rosedale, Temple, Tuckerton, Mt. Penn and Stony Creek Mills. J. Stanley Giles is president and F. H. Lauck secretary. At the monthly meetings it is usual to find almost the entire membership present. Usually there is a lecture, the address at the February meeting being by Cyrus T. Fox, a nursery inspector for the state, with a luncheon and smokes.

Thursday, March 4, W. H. Girvin, of Lancaster, Pa., a carnation specialist, will speak on "Carnations and Their Growth." Arrangements are being made for the first annual banquet sometime in March, the date and place having not yet been determined.

NEWPORT, R. I.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society February 9, attracted by the principal topic for discussion, the advisability of the society having a horticultural hall of its own. A committee of five was appointed to further investigate the proposition.

John C. Hass has taken the local agency for B. F. Wallace, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The United States Senate February 13 confirmed the nomination of John B. Sullivan, a well known gardener, to be postmaster here.

William Murphy has been drawn for grand jury duty and Sven W. Johnson for the petit jury.

Charles D. Stark has resigned his position as gardener for T. Suffern Tailer after a service of twenty-eight years.

Funerals were numerous last month. One florist filled an order for a funeral every day in January except one.

DENVER.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business was quite satisfactory, much better than it was last year. This was due, I think, to the special advertising done by two or three of our leading retailers. Boxes of spring flowers and corsage bouquets of peas and violets found a ready sale. Tulips, especially red, had a good call.

Daffodils, jonquils, hyacinths and tulips in pans also sold well. A few azaleas are offered and are bringing good prices. The supply of roses and carnations, while not so large as it was two weeks ago, is sufficient to take care of all orders.

Various Notes.

John Tegelaar, of the firms of Van Meeruwen & Tegelaar, Lisse, Holland, and Drevon, Tegelaar & Co., Ollioules, France, called on the trade last week.

Wm. Butler, of Longmont, Colo., was in town last week. Mr. Butler says his business this January was seventy per cent better than in any January for three years. His range consists of three houses 16 x 105 feet and one house 10 x 60 feet. He grows carnations, mostly the Enchantress varieties, and a general line of pot plants.

Bert Clippinger, manager of the Clippinger Greenhouses, at Cheyenne, Wyo., was among the recent visitors.

Fixtures for a new flower store are being put in place in a store room at the corner of Fifteenth and Arapahoe streets.

Several of the retail stores had attractive window displays for St. Valentine's day. R. S.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

St. Valentine's Day.

St. Valentine's day was within an ace of last year, which is saying a good deal, considering the circumstances. Fully 110,000 Princess of Wales violets were picked and sold without any difficulty whatever, and bulbous stock was much in demand, as were also valley and orchids. February seems to have brought more life to the flower trade than January for some reason or other, and payments are remarkably good.

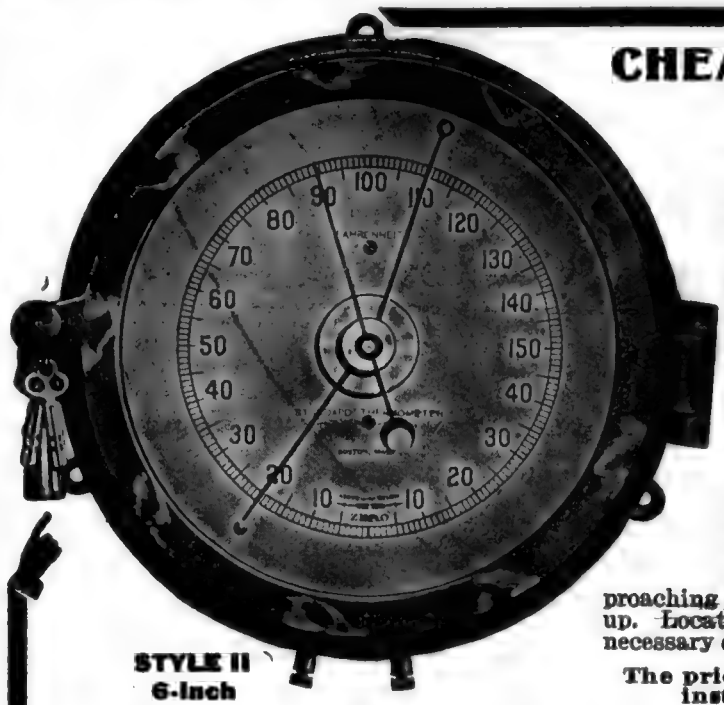
OLD GAS PIPE FOR HEATING.

I shall appreciate it greatly if you will give me some information. Would you advise me to use, for hot water heating in the greenhouse, pipe that has been used as gas pipe? Do you think it would cause an odor in the houses and, if so, do you think this would be injurious to the plants?

G. C. S.

So far as any likelihood of injury to the plants is concerned, I would not hesitate to use the pipe referred to, since, if there is any tar or similar substance on the outside of the pipe, it may be easily burned off. However, it will be necessary to be absolutely sure that the inside of the pipe is free from tar, for if there is any considerable amount of deposit it will hinder the circulation, while even a slight coating would lessen the amount of heat radiated by the pipe. I have known of cases where gas pipe has been nearly choked with tar. If the pipe is much rusted, this also would check radiation.



SIZE AND SLANT OF PIPES.

I am building a greenhouse, 28x100. The side walls will be six and one-half feet high and will contain three feet of concrete and three and one-half feet of glass. The east end will be glass; the west end will be attached to the service building. The ridge will be thirteen feet nine inches high. I shall use about 1,760 feet of 2-inch pipes, arranging them along the side walls, below the glass, as shown in the enclosed diagram. There will be four 2-inch flows and four 2-inch returns along each side wall and along the east end wall to the door in the center. The boiler will be placed in a pit. What temperature could I maintain with such piping, when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero? My location, you will notice, is southern Pennsylvania. Would you arrange the piping for this house any differently, and why?

This house will have side ventilation and one row of ventilators at the ridge. They will be hinged at the ridge. The house will run east and west. On which side of the ridge would it be better to put the ventilators, north or south?

N. E. S.

The amount of pipe mentioned is about what I would use in a greenhouse 28x100, with three and one-half feet of glass in each side wall, if I wished a temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. While it would answer for 60 degrees in ordinary weather, heavy firing would be required to keep the temperature above 52 degrees when it is 15 degrees below zero outside. Of course these may be considered average figures only, since a good deal depends on the construction of the house, as well as on the amount of exposure to the wind.

I would prefer, unless the top of the boiler is well below the returns, to use larger flow pipes and run them downhill. I would run a 2½-inch flow pipe on each plate around to the middle of the east end of the house and connect each of them with four 2-inch returns. A third 2½-inch flow pipe should be run about four feet below the ridge and connected with four 2-inch returns to be brought back under the benches. If it is not possible to use the four returns under the middle benches, I would run a 3-inch flow pipe upon each plate, with six 2-inch returns on each wall below the glass.

The reason why large flow pipes run downhill are better than small pipes run uphill, is because the circulation of the water in the pipes is due to the difference in the weight of the water in the pipes, considering on one side the water between the boiler and the highest point of the system, and on the other that between the highest point of the system and the boiler; or, in a system piped as described by the inquirer, in the flow pipe on one hand and the returns on the other. It can be seen, then, that as the water in a small uphill flow pipe cools it becomes heavier and acts as a sort of drag on the circulation. When the highest point of the system is nearly over the heater, the cooling of the water is almost entirely in the downhill portion of the system, and this results in a "pull altogether" which causes a rapid circulation.

A reason for having medium large flows is that the circulation is better than in small pipes, and it makes it possible, considering them principally as pipes to carry the water to the coils, to distribute a larger proportion of the heat near the floor of the greenhouse, where it would be more effectual than when near the glass. Of course it would be possible to use one 4-inch flow in the present case, instead of three 2½-inch flows, but the weight of the water in proportion to the radiating surface would be several times greater and the smaller pipes would be less conspicuous in a small house. I prefer to have the ventilators open away from the prevailing strong winds.

TO LOOSEN SOOT IN FLUES.

Please let me know whether there is any mineral that could be burned in the fire-box of a boiler so as to clean the flues or loosen the soot, which is hard and of a gummy nature. J. J. S.

I do not have in mind any feasible way to loosen soot or prevent its formation in the flues. In some cases scraps of zinc are thrown into the fire and this is more or less effective in small heaters, but I do not consider it feasible in large boilers.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made a GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

277% MORE BLOSSOMS

on plants raised in Square Paper Pots than on plants raised in clay pots of same size.

There were 456 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch Square Paper Pots and 105 stems of blossoms on 40 plants raised in 4-inch clay pots.

The above was taken from the following report in the Market Growers' Journal, January 1, 1914, page 6.

NUMBER OF STEMS IN BLOSSOM

	June 9	June 20	June 27
On 40 plants from clay pots	45	47	121
On 40 plants from paper pots	105	229	456

When set in the field May 15th, the root systems of the plants from the 4-inch square paper pots were 4-inch cubes (64 cubic inches of soil and roots) and from the 4-inch clay pots the root systems contained 31 cubic inches of soil and roots (the amount that a 4-inch clay pot holds).

The third count of blossoms was made June 27, 42 days after the plants had been set in the field.

The plants from the square paper pots were then more than twice as large and vigorous as those raised in clay pots.

All plants raised in square paper pots are larger and more vigorous than those raised in clay pots, because they have about double root room for the same size pots.

Measure the two pots and you will find that the 4-inch square paper pot holds as much soil as two 4-inch clay pots.

It is the same with square dirt bands, which are square paper pots without bottoms (the bottoms being furnished by old newspapers spread on the bench).

The theory that it is only necessary to have a big top to the plant has been proved misleading. There must be a big root system to push the top or the plant will grow slow and small.

Try some square paper pots or dirt bands with your clay pots and see if you can afford to use any clay pots.

Some of the florists around Philadelphia are using large numbers of square dirt bands and paper pots.

We have shipped to Mr. P. B. Dilks, Bridesburg, Phila., Pa., 150,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 20,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. Geo. W. Dilks, Frankford, Pa., 10,000 2-inch square dirt bands and 10,000 3-inch square dirt bands; to Mr. M. H. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., 20,000 2½-inch dirt bands and 6000 5-inch dirt bands; Mr. H. B. 393% MORE EARLY FRUIT

120 early tomato plants reported in Market Growers' Journal, Jan. 1, 1914, raised in 4-inch clay pots (31 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded up to Aug. 11 7⅝ peach baskets—$4.75 worth of ripe tomatoes, while 120 plants raised in 4-inch SQUARE paper pots (64 cubic inches of soil and roots), had yielded 33 peach baskets—$23.50 worth of ripe tomatoes—393 per cent more.

"The THOROUGHLY DEPENDABLE QUALITY of the material in your Paper Pots commends them to users everywhere. Tomato plants which without your Pots sell here at $1.00 per 100, raised in your Pots sell at $4.00 per 100."—The Dalles Floral Company, The Dalles, Ore.

"From about 2700 Tomato plants I picked 1140 MARKETABLE CRATES of Tomatoes, which brought me $600."—D. B. Moses, Purchase, N. Y.

"Tomato plants raised in the 4-inch size sell readily at FIVE CENTS EACH."—W. J. Symonds & Son, Decorah, Ia.

"We have used some of your Paper Pots for young roses, which are doing fine."—Casa de Flores Greenhouses, Corpus Christi, Tex.

"BANDS WILL GIVE BETTER PLANTS THAN POTS." (Clay Pots.)—F. B. Murdock & Co., Kingston, Pa.

"We got BETTER PLANTS, BIGGER PLANTS AND PLANTS WHICH WERE HEALTHIER AND MORE VIGOROUS THAN IN CLAY POTS."—Wm. Schruers, Gardener, Oil City, Pa.

"We find that WATERING ALONE SAVES TIME ENOUGH TO PAY OVER CLAY POTS, and with proper handling there is NO QUESTION BUT A BETTER PLANT CAN BE GROWN."—H. Russell & Son, Market Gardeners, Boonville, New York.

"I find them SUPERIOR TO EARTHEN POTS IN EVERY CASE, requiring about half the water—at least that is the case after the sun gets well back and very drying."—W. L. Leeka, Fairmount, Ill.

"We grew Tomato plants and Chrysanthemum plants in your Dirt Bands last year and they proved VERY SATISFACTORY AND CHEAP, A GREAT SAVING OVER CLAY POTS."—L. M. Smith & Co., Laurel Greenhouses, Laurel, Del.

"They do not dry out as fast as clay pots and MAKE BETTER PLANTS in the same length of time. They hold the plants longer in fine condition without gettiug yellow than clay pots. They are also better for shipping plants, as they are light and pack better than clay pots."—Evan R. Miller, Florist, Bridgeton, N. J.

"All worked very satisfactorily and they DO NOT REQUIRE THE ATTENTION THAT SMALL POTS DO. We certainly like Dirt Bands."—Reimers Bros., Rapid City, S. D.

"We are MUCH IMPRESSED WITH THE FACT that Paper Pots give so much more root space than other pots."—Gallup Bros., Ashtabula, Ohio.

"The crop from the plants grown in your dirt bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS."—J. M. Gage, Market Gardener, Willimantic, Conn.

"I used the Rochelle dirt bands with VERY GREAT SUCCESS. I had an IMMENSE CROP of both tomatoes and cucumbers and both started picking fully 15 DAYS BEFORE THE USUAL TIME in this section."—Chas. H. Weaver (Choice Fruit and Vegetables), Dunnville, Ont., Can.

"I used your Dirt Bands for tomatoes, peppers and eggplants—also for mignonette, heliotrope and helichrysum. I AND MY TRADE WERE PLEASED WITH THEM. I shall use more the coming season."—Chas. C. Roberts, Lansdowne, Pa.

"We highly recommend your Dirt Bands. We had tomatoes the FIRST OF JUNE, and the only tomatoes in Kay Co., Okla., this year, DUE ENTIRELY to using your Dirt Bands and getting them out early."—Nichols & Son, Market Gardeners, Blackwell, Okla.

"We raised vegetable plants and asters in your Paper Pots. They accomplished their purpose. They gave BETTER PLANTS THAN THOSE IN CLAY POTS AND SOLD AT DOUBLE PRICE."—Mt. Gilead Floral Co., Mt. Gilead, O.

"There is abundance and famine, prosperity and adversity. What the first mentioned is to the latter so are Square Paper Pots to the clay variety. The better results obtainable and the ADVANTAGES OVER THE CLAY POTS are due to the fact of their shape allowing the roots to spear out, instead of becoming cramped. They are a good thing for the grower."—George F. Braybon, Kent, O.

"We used about 3000 of your Dirt Bands last year. We think they are great. Plants grew fine in them."—West View Greenhouses, Knightstown, Ind.

"I think I never had anything that is so good as your paper pots. I cannot say too much for them."—Mrs. James Weber, East Liverpool, O.

"A visiting florist recommended your Dirt Bands. Please ship by freight the following (55,000)."—A. A. Lohman, Hastings, Neb.

"Please send us 10,000 4-in. Paper Pots. We liked them last year very much."—Stiles Gardens, Inc., Stiles, Wis.

"I planted tomato seeds in the pots and had tomatoes a month earlier. I would not do without them."—Maurice Tressler, Columbus, O.

"The crop from the plants grown in your Dirt Bands PAID ME THE BEST of any crop of tomatoes grown SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN BUSINESS."—J. M. Gager, Market Gardener, Willimantic, Conn.

"I raised tomatoes and cucumber plants in your Dirt Bands, and found them to raise BETTER AND EARLIER PLANTS than any other method."—B. von Bavel, Castle Hayne, N. C.

(Mr. von Bavel used 20,000 4-inch Dirt Bands in 1913 and 20,000 in 1914.)

"Inclosed find P. O. money order for 7000 3-inch Paper Pots. Please ship by freight to Norwich, Conn."—Avery Bros., Norwich Town, Conn.

(Avery Bros. got 5000 3-in. pots in 1913, 5000 in 1914 and 7000 this year.)

"Inclosed find check for 10,000 2-in. Dirt Bands, 10,000 4-in. Dirt Bands, 5000 2½ paper pots, 1000 4-in. paper pots."—G. H. Arnold & Sons, Braintree, Mass.

(Messrs. G. H. Arnold & Sons used 10,000 4-in. Dirt Bands last year.)

"I AM THANKFUL THAT THEY HAVE COME ON THE MARKET."—M. P. Scott, Castle Grove, Pa.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

With some of the manufacturing industries running full time and others starting, the outlook for the trade is somewhat brighter. Business recently has been fair. There has been a good supply of stock. Red roses are about the only flowers that are scarce.

Various Notes.

At the Whiting Greenhouses, of West Hartford, there is a fine stock of plants on hand, in preparation for a good Easter business.

W. W. Thompson & Co., Inc., are picking extra fine double violets. Their sweet peas are among the best in the market.

At A. N. Pierson's, Cromwell, the young rose stock is looking fine. A large stock is already in condition to ship out. Considerable replanting will be done this spring. All the Killarney Brilliant planted last year will be thrown out and replaced with selected stock. Great care is being exercised in selecting the cuttings; they are all taken from the best flowers when the flowers are fully developed. The only mistake the firm made last year with Hadley was that they did not work up enough stock, as they sold out so closely that they did not plant as many as they had planned. It will be planted more heavily in the coming spring, as it has proved to be one of the biggest money-makers on the place this season. Robert C. Smallwood, of the rose growers' staff, announces the arrival of a 10-pound girl February 6.

R. C. S.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Roses are still scarce and high-priced. Carnations are more plentiful than in the last three weeks. Tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, freesias and sweet peas of good quality are to be had at reasonable prices. Business was considerably benefited by the charity ball, held in the armory February 11; corsages of all kinds sold well for the occasion.

Various Notes.

Ernest Chamberlain, of Sixth street, reports business good. He had a large number of orders for the charity ball.

Joseph V. Peirce was on the sick list for a few days, but is back on the job again.

The Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, is sending first-class bulbous stock of all kinds to this market.

M. B. Sylvia says the cut flower business is steadily increasing.

As usual, H. V. Sowle is doing a big business in funeral work.

HOMELAND, GA.

Owing to the unusual amount of rain this winter, vegetation of all kinds is backward. This is a great sweet potato plant section, and all plantsmen are getting busy bedding sweet potatoes.

Last year J. L. White planted several thousand gladiolus bulbs, mostly America, Francis King, Augusta and Independence, for the purpose of experimenting in shipping the spikes north to some of the big cut flower markets. This proved a success far beyond his expectations and has encouraged him to plant a much larger number this year, which he has already done, expecting them to bring him in good prices for Memorial day. He finds that the bulbs grow to perfection here and that most of them measure four inches across, with no fertilizer, little cultivation and no irrigation.

On 500 violet plants set out in September, Mr. White has picked 20,000 blossoms and they are still blooming and were only cultivated twice. He grows the singles for northern markets. Outdoor roses bloom here almost continuously the year around. This is a great place also for watermelons; carloads of the finest melons are shipped to the north. The soil and climate are the best of their kind for most varieties of garden truck and flowers, as the location is almost on the north Florida line. Strawberries are in full bloom, with many half-grown berries showing on the vines. A big acreage of watermelons will be planted this year. The soil and climate are well adapted for Satsuma oranges and paper-shell pecans.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day gave quite a little impetus to general business, relieving to some extent the stagnation under which the florists' business has been laboring for some time. There was a large demand for violets and the stock was in sufficient supply to meet all demands. Single violets were scarce, but the supply of the double variety more than made up for lack of singles. The sale of this stock was brisk and brought fairly good prices. There was also a large demand for red carnations and these moved exceptionally well. There were plenty of carnations and all colors moved well, but reds were in extra demand. The prices were somewhat better than usual. Roses have shortened up, especially the fancy varieties. Pink and white Killarney in longer grades were most plentiful. Short stock was cleaned up quickly each day and trouble was experienced in meeting the demand for roses in general.

Tulips, daffodils, narcissi, etc., are fine and there are plenty to go around. Valley is short this week. There does not seem to be much extra demand, but, owing to the unusually dark weather, the cut is smaller than it has been for some time.

On the whole, St. Valentine's day business was quite satisfactory from a sales standpoint, but the amount of money received was away below normal.

Various Notes.

Mr. McDonald, manager of Gimbel Bros.' flower department, states that business has been so satisfactory since the inception of the flower department that this firm is going to enlarge the business materially in the near future. The space devoted to flowers will be more than doubled and will give ample room for a fine display of stock.

Get our catalog

This book points the way to bigger profits in gardening. It gives the actual experience of growers all over the country—tells how they, with the aid of Sunlight Double Glass Sash grew bigger, stronger, earlier plants which yielded the big, early market prices.

This catalog is free. If Prof. Massey's booklet on the care and use of a hot-bed, cold frame or a small greenhouse is wanted, send 4c in stamps.

Early plants make the profitable garden

You cannot possibly have vegetables ready for the early prices or flower beds to bloom right unless you use hot-beds and cold frames for starting and expediting them.

Now is the time

Sunlight Double Glass Sash make the earliest and strongest plants at the least cost of labor and money. They are complete without mats or shutters. As they are never covered the plants get all the light and warmth that the sun affords and are secure against the cold night and day.

Expert gardeners and florists, men who know from experience, look upon the Sunlight Double Glass Sash as the standard of efficiency in gardening.

E. T. Barnes Says:

Gladiolus Bulbs Grown Under the Skinner System of Irrigation Were Three Times Heavier Than Others.

Mr. E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, Indiana, writes us these convincing facts about his success with the Skinner System of Irrigation, in the driest weather for years.

"We grew Gladiolus last season, under Skinner System of Irrigation, and also under the old-time irrigation of running the water on the ground. Then side by side with this, we grew gladiolus without irrigation. After our crop was harvested we made our tests. Of course, you will understand we had a very severe drought in this section last season.

From our planting stock of gladiolus planted at the same time, under the three conditions above named, and harvested at the same time, each being plowed the same number of times, the following result was obtained:

Bulbs irrigated by The Skinner System of Irrigation averaged three times the bulk of those grown without irrigation.

We had practically no increase in bulblets from the non-irrigated stock; and those irrigated by Skinner System had approximately seven times the increase over those irrigated by the old-time method."

SPECIAL OFFER

We will furnish, complete, a line of Skinner System, with pipe drilled and cut to length; quick acting couplings, brass wheel roller hangers, Skinner System fittings and standard fittings, complete (except stakes to put it on), ready to connect to water. Waters a strip 60 feet wide.

The Market.

Business had smooth going last week, the demand, accelerated by several large funerals and a few pre-Lenten festivities, having kept pace with the supply. St. Valentine's day brought a splendid call in special lines. Roses, sweet peas and daffodils are coming more plentifully and relieving the pressure. Nearly all of the growers are preparing for Easter and the outlook at present is for a good supply.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

HANGING OUT ALL THE WASH

William Scott, the florist-philosopher, used to say, "Wash all you've got, and hang out all you wash." The linen on the line is what many of the neighbors judge your family by. Your particular public sizes you up the same way. Do you take the trouble to show them you've got the goods?

PERHAPS some Greek philosopher or Hindoo moralizer was the first to spring the remark about "putting one's best foot foremost," or a phrase to that effect. It was more than nineteen centuries ago that one of the world's greatest epigrammatists made the well-known statement that the place for a lighted lamp is not under a bushel, but on a stand, where it may be seen by all. The idea expressed by William Scott's housewifely metaphor is, most assuredly, old. It is familiar to everyone. But how about its application?

Another Story.

That, in the old phrase, is another story. All that is preached is not practiced, not by several miles, and although the soundness of this idea is quite generally recognized, its application is far from general. Of course, there is such a thing as going too far, as a rather joggled-up passenger remarked when the skyscraper elevator slipped its cable at the tenth floor and hit the concrete at the second basement. Some people have such facility in putting forward their best foot that they appear to be one-legged, for you never see the other foot at all. But such as these are happily becoming fewer, for they find that that foot is likely to be impeded with a ball and chain.

But these gentlemen, like the flowers that bloom in the spring, have nothing to do with the case. There is a legitimate distance which one's best foot may be advanced, and the business man who does not take a step in that direction is as much to be reprehended, though not in the criminal court, as he that goes too far.

This withholding of the better extremity is prevalent among retailers in this trade mainly because of the nature of the stock that is handled. The dry-goods man spreads his wares all over the place. The grocer's goods overflow onto the sidewalk in front of his store; sometimes it is hard to confine him so that the pedestrian has passage. Their lines are staple and not immediately perishable. The florist must sell his blooms within a limited time, or consign them, at a loss to himself, to the waste heap.

Where Caution Leads.

It is only natural, therefore, that there should be the temptation to get along with as little stock as possible. Indeed, some misguided aspirants to the retail trade occasionally appear who think they can take an order and then chase to the wholesaler for the flowers to fill it. These unfortunates soon learn their mistake, being either speedily converted or obliged to retire till they learn better.

There is a larger class, however, consisting of those who, being naturally cautious and having a limited trade, try to get along with just so much stock, figuring that they are thus avoiding the loss of wasted stock. They never figure what may be their loss in wasted trade through this economy.

Whether these figure on them or not, there are certainly customers lost by their meager showing. When a passer-by views a window and sees therein a few vases of flowers, or, gazing into the store beyond, sees only a few plants and vases in addition, he mentally classifies that store and its proprietor. When he passes another store, where there seem to him to be flowers of all kinds in abundance, he mentally classifies that store and its proprietor. But the two stores are not even in the same drawer in the filing cabinet of his brain.

False Economy.

When this same person, who is every one that passes your store, is going to buy some flowers, whither does he wend his way? To that place, naturally, where he, or she, believes he, or she, will have the largest and best choice. There is, too, always the idea lurking somewhere in this person's head, that he will get better for his money at the store of strong showing.

Now, as a matter of fact, the store of the bare look may have in its cool cellar, out of sight, more than in the entire store that appeared so well supplied. At any rate, it is quite possible that its prices, quality, service and assortment are on a level with the other store's. But it lost that customer. And how many more, for the same reason?

If a florist saves a few flowers and loses a few customers, where is his saving, compared to the neighbor who lost the few flowers and gained the few customers? The latter might, indeed, not class the item as a loss, but place it in the advertising expense account. For if ever advertising pays, it is that which consists of making an effective show of stock, even if the icebox and cellar, like the wife's linen closet, be emptied in the process.

How Penn, of Boston, Showed 6,000 Roses One January Day.

PENN'S STRONG SHOWING.

On a day in the latter part of January, when roses were scarce in Boston, Penn had a display in the refrigerator that could not but attract the attention of those who came into the store, for every inch was taken up with roses. This refrigerator, 6 x 16 feet, with a glass frontage nine feet high, held that day, according to H. S. Rogers, 6,000 long-stemmed roses, in twelve varieties. They were: Cardinal, American Beauty, Hadley, Prince d'Arenberg, Black Prince, Killarney, Killarney Queen, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Charles Russell and Mignon. How the display looked to visitors may be seen from the illustration on the preceding page.

In the adjoining store, a refrigerator of about the same size held carnations and other flowers. In all, Penn has three display refrigerators on the street floor and three vaults in the basement in which are carried the regular daily stock. That is why this firm maintains that its variety of flowers and plants is larger than in any other retail store in New England.

EASTER OSTRICH FLOWER FAN.

The accompanying illustration shows a pleasing novelty intended for the Easter season. It is a pure white fan of ostrich feathers, that may be used as a shield. In the picture, it has been made the background for a cluster of Sunburst roses, which the introducers, the M. Rice Co., of Philadelphia, selected as the flower that would be especially effective with it.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Rose Society will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston, March 18 to 21. The New York flower show at the Grand Central Palace occurs March 17 to 23.

It has been arranged to stage roses at these exhibitions to conflict as little as possible and the American Rose Society wishes to call attention to these dates: Roses in pots and tubs will be staged at Boston on Thursday, March 18. All cut roses will be staged on Friday, March 19, on which day the annual meeting will be held, at 3 o'clock.

At the New York flower show all pot-grown roses will be staged on Wednesday, March 17. All classes of cut roses, except the special class for display of 1,000 blooms, will be staged on Thursday, March 18. This special class will be staged on Saturday, March 20.

This arrangement allows an exhibitor the opportunity of exhibiting in New York on Thursday and in Boston on Friday. It allows visitors from a distance the opportunity of participating in both the New York flower show and the American Rose Society's annual exhibition, which, in conjunction with the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, will be especially attractive.

The American Rose Society invites your attendance and your exhibit. Schedules may be obtained from Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y. We trust that our exhibition will be a credit to the American Rose Society and worthy of the excellent premium list prepared.

Wallace R. Pierson, President.

MUSIC AND FLOWERS.

A combination that ought to work well is found in Huntsville, Ala., where John Scott's flower shop shares a store room with a grafonola parlor, as is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is in the new Twickenham hotel block. Whether the people buy grafonolas or not, or only come in to listen to the music, they evidently buy flowers, for John Scott says it is a "great combination."

PREPARATION OF SOIL.

Please advise me as to the best way to prepare a piece of ground to have soil suitable to grow a general line of cut flowers under glass. The ground was an old prairie pasture of the common black loam variety, by experts said to be somewhat rich in acid and unfit to grow some kinds of crops in unless limed to some extent. It was plowed the first time in the spring of 1914 and kept free from weeds by harrowing and dragging several times last summer. Early last fall a crop of cowpeas was sowed and turned under late in the fall, when rye was sowed. This came up nicely and is green now. The location is Missouri. How shall I proceed with this ground this spring and summer so as to have the best possible soil for the greenhouses in the summer of 1916?

C. A. C.

You have been following the best possible course in preparing your soil. You can easily test for acidity with blue litmus paper. Moisten some of the soil and cover the paper with it. If it causes the paper to turn pink, your land needs lime and 2,000 pounds per acre will not be too much to apply. Autumn is the best time to apply the lime. Do not use it when applying barnyard manure, or you will lose much of the nitrogen from the latter. The rye and cowpeas will add considerable humus to the soil. What you now need more particularly is fiber and, if you had seeded your land down to timothy or a mixture of grass seeds last fall and left it in grass until the spring of 1916, you would have put considerable fiber in your soil.

Sunburst Roses Against White Ostrich Feather Fan as Shield.

Spring in your state is not a particularly good time for sowing grass seed. Therefore, the best thing would be to continue on much the same lines during the present year. Plow in the winter rye and, after a thorough cultivation, sow down with cowpeas or soja beans. Either one is good and will put a lot of nitrogen into the soil. Plow these in when they have made their growth; then lime, if a test proves that your soil needs it. Cultivate thoroughly for a time to keep down weeds; then sow with rye again. In spring, plow the land and mix with well rotted manure for greenhouse use. The mixing can be done right on the field.

NOTED NAME OF NASHVILLE.

Three years ago, early in 1912, the firm then known as McIntyre Bros. bought an old dwelling at a low price on a live business street of Nashville. A coat of cement on the brick walls, the installation of a store front and the addition of a curved-eave conservatory made it one of the best flower stores in town. Not only has the property proved its value as a flower store, but as a real estate investment it proved a good one, as it is now worth three times what the firm paid for it in 1912.

The brothers have incorporated since they purchased this store and now form the McIntyre Floral Co. The members of the firm at the time of its incorporation were Dan McIntyre, Thomas McIntyre, Nellie McIntyre and William McIntyre. Its capitalization was then $37,000. Since that time the company has added largely to the area of the greenhouses, which are on the Hillsboro road.

SOLID CROSS ON PILLOW.

Those who look to illustrations in The Review for suggestions in the making up of funeral pieces will find something worth examining in the illustration on this page, showing a solid cross on a pillow. The piece was made recently by the Hill City Greenhouses, at Forest City, Ia., of which Willard Secor is proprietor and C. B. Simons manager. Chrysanthemums, roses, cycas leaves, ferns, asparagus and a little alyssum were used in its construction.

MAINE FLORISTS TO ORGANIZE

Alexander Lurie, instructor in floriculture and landscape gardening in the horticultural department of the University of Maine, at Orono, is one of the most active participants in the movement to organize a state association of florists. He announces that a meeting for the purpose of completing the society's formation will be held at the College of Agriculture, Orono, March 10, during Farmers' week.

Though the chief object of the meeting will be this work of organization, the gathering will take the form of a typical all-day convention and exhibition. There will be exhibits, says Professor Lurie, from the florists of Maine and from several members of the trade outside the state. An interesting program of addresses and discussions has been arranged, as follows:

Opening address, by Alex. Lurie, Instructor in Floriculture, University of Maine.

Organization of Florists' Society.

"Educational Problems in Floriculture," by Prof. E. A. White, Head of Department of Floriculture, Cornell University.

"Carnations," by C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me.

"Hothouse Fruits as a Commercial Value," by J. H. Stalford, Bar Harbor, Me.

"Private Estate Gardening," by W. T. Burton, Superintendent, Kennedy Estate, Bar Harbor.

"Greenhouse Heating," by F. J. Elder, Manager Lord & Burnham Co., Boston Branch.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

PLANTING POMPONS.

How many plants of pompon chrysanthemums would it take to fill a bench 4x20? Kindly give us the names of three good commercial varieties, with their colors. What is their average height and how far should they be set apart? E. C. C.

We plant our pompons a foot apart, which would give E. C. C., in his measurements, twenty plants in a row or eighty plants in the bench.

There are, of course, many varieties that can be grown. Three good commercial sorts are Golden Climax, deep yellow; Queen of the Whites, and Lillian Doty, pink. Two and one-half to three feet is sufficient room for Golden Climax and Queen of the Whites, but Lillian Doty will run up to four and one-half feet. This latter variety is so wonderfully fine that it is becoming exceedingly popular. If E. C. C. does not wish to allow this head room, Dawn, Rita or Ruth will make a good substitute so far as color is concerned.

Chas. H. Totty.

TILE DRAINAGE IN MUM BEDS.

I am planning to put tile drainage in some beds on which to grow chrysanthemums. The beds are 5 x 45 feet. Will you tell me how many rows of drainage tile, and what size, should be put in each bed? Please inform me, also, whether the same sort of drainage would answer for carnations.

H. A. C.

I think nearly every florist who uses ground beds has come to the conclusion that he does not need any drainage tile at all; most growers seem better satisfied with a bed that has eight inches or more of gravel stone, or ashes with a lot of clinkers in them, which furnish ideal drainage without any further trouble. Ashes are the cheapest thing one can use, as there are generally plenty of them lying around in greenhouse establishments. A bed so prepared, with about six or seven inches of good soil on top, seems to be the best form of ground bed.

Personally, in growing chrysanthemums I would prefer to have the stock planted on raised benches—the usual benches with 6-inch boards for the sides, allowing four and one-half inches of soil. This is not saying that mums cannot be successfully grown on solid beds, but when they are grown in raised benches the roots are more directly under control and consequently are easier to handle. Ashes for drainage, as described, also furnish an ideal bed for carnations. Chas. H. Totty.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting and Exhibition.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held at Cleveland, O., November 10, 1915. The annual exhibition, in conjunction with the Cleveland Florists' Club, will be held at the same place November 10 to 14.

An exhibition of chrysanthemums under the auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in conjunction with the gardeners and florists of the Pacific coast will be held at the Panama-Pacific international exposition, San Francisco, Cal. The date and other details will be announced later.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

SEEDS FAIL TO GERMINATE.

I wish to learn how to grow campanulas from seed. I have planted the seeds several times in flats in my greenhouse, giving them the same treatment as I give other flower seeds, but have never succeeded in getting them to germinate. I also wish to know how to grow lantanas. I made two plantings of lantana seed last year, but had no success. I have tried several times to grow lemon verbenas from seed, but this, too, refuses to germinate for me. Do you think the seeds are probably poor or that I do not understand how to handle them? J. E. C.

The seeds of some campanulas are slow to germinate, but I presume you refer to C. Medium, better known as the Canterbury bell. Its seed is among the easiest of flower seeds to start and I cannot imagine how you could fail with it, provided, of course, that your seed is of good quality. Neither should there be any trouble in raising lantanas, although the bulk of these plants are now raised from cuttings. Lemon verbena seed is somewhat uncertain. The demand for it is light and dealers may carry stock over from year to year. The best way to propagate lemon verbenas is from cuttings rubbed off with a heel, taken from dormant plants which had just started into growth. Be sure you buy the best quality of seed of whatever plants you need. Cheap seed is always the dearest in the end. Make a nice, even surface for your campanula seed and give it an extremely light covering of fine, light soil before watering. A temperature of 60 degrees at night, shade from all sun and careful watering are necessary to successful germination. C. W.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Mechlin, Belgium.—What has been described as the "rain of shells" that fell here, completely destroyed many of the greenhouse establishments beyond hope of repair. One bomb was sufficient to destroy one range of two houses and its boiler plant. The Buelens establishment, covering almost eight acres, was three-quarters of it shattered to bits by eleven bombs.

Yokohama, Japan.—The giganteum crop is reported to be about seventy per cent of normal only, and large sized bulbs will be especially short. Magnificum and rubrum will also be short, from present indications. It is stated that freight rates via the Panama canal have been advanced twenty-five per cent and ten per cent since January 25. This knocks all the saving and more, too, out of Japan bulb shipments that way, and the old routes will be cheaper now. The same advance in freight rates has been made via Suez canal to New York.

Paris, France.—Despite the great number of men belonging to the nursery trade who are at the front, the Paris flower markets go on pretty much as usual, as it is generally the wife of the proprietor who looks after the sale at market. The decision of the Chambre Syndicate des Fleuristes de Paris not to buy any forced lily of the valley, in order to avoid the possibility of the entry of German pips, under any pretext, is well maintained. For this reason none have been forced even by the nurserymen who had received pips before the war.

Mechlin, Belgium.—Growers are in a state of indecision in regard to continuing the cultivation of certain lines on account of the uncertainty of a market for their products and on account of the high price of coal, now 50 to 60 francs per thousand kilos, or, roughly speaking, $10 to $12 per ton.

London, England.—One of the interesting developments of the war has been the disclosure of quantities of valley pips "guaranteed English, Dutch or Danish grown." Few had appreciated that there were so many pips grown outside of Germany, and some still are skeptical.

Darmstadt, Germany.—"At the beginning of the war," says Ludwig Heyn, councilor of commerce and proprietor of the seed business of Conrad Appel, established in 1789, "our seed trade, as well as all other trades in Europe, was quiet, especially at first, during August and September. About half of my assistants and a certain number of my workmen left my office to enter the army, and even now a few are leaving every week to join the colors. Notwithstanding, I was able to continue my business in a regular manner, with my older clerks and workmen. The crops of nearly all grass seeds were good and above average and, although the war had just started when the seeds had to be harvested, the crops were brought in safely with the help of women and older men. Recleaning has been completed only a little later than usual."

PROGRESS OF THE SWEET PEA.

Probably no flower has made greater advancement in popularity in the British Isles during the last ten years than the sweet pea, and its progress has only been slightly less noticeable in the United States and Canada.

In looking back to the time when Henry Eckford was assiduously devoting his energies to the extension of the range of colors on the type then existing, and known as the grandiflora, as now distinguished from the present-day Spencer, one cannot help wishing, from a commercial point of view, that at least half the amount of skill and labor had been expended on the cultivation of the older favorite that has been lavished on the Spencer; the results would have greatly enhanced the reputation of our old friend. But, unfortunately, the real science of cultivating the sweet pea was either not understood or was not systematically taken in hand until the Spencer type came into being. Its advent awakened public interest and general enthusiasm among florists in favor of a flower which had, in a comparatively short space of time, emerged, as it were, from a thistle to a rose.

The writer has many pleasant memories of his early efforts in connection with the production of sweet peas for the English markets, and he also has recollections of many sad disappointments during the first two seasons, in his endeavor to produce flowers of sufficient merit to command a ready sale and bring fair returns for the outlay. There is no place like a good flower market to make a man feel small, when he sees his produce by the side of that of hundreds of competitors who have long been successful in the business. But "Nil desperandum" is a good motto for all workers who would see the consummation of their ambitions.

There is undoubtedly a great future for the sweet pea. What would the average public be prepared to pay for sweet peas with 26-inch to 30-inch stems, surmounted by five or six well developed blooms? This will sound rather visionary to some, and perhaps beyond the range of possibility, but nevertheless it has been and is being done. When flowers of such merit are produced in sufficient quantity, we may then look with some degree of certainty to seeing the sweet pea classed with the rose and carnation and bringing the same returns per hundred as these two flowers. H. M. Swain.

SWEET PEAS FOR SEED.

Please advise us how to save seeds from sweet peas. We have the Australian new winter-flowering Spencer varieties and wish to save as much seed as possible. Would you allow every flower from the beginning to produce seeds? All the flowers are perfect. As soon as the flowers wither, the stem and all drops off. What is the cause of this and is there any way to prevent it, or do first flowers usually do this?

H. L. & S.

Conditions under glass are purely artificial and sweet peas will not set seeds so freely at this dark season of the year as when the temperature is higher and the days longer. Some of the earliest flowers are sure to fall off. As we get warmer weather and you can ventilate more freely, the flowers will set much better. C. W.

FORCING FRUIT BLOSSOMS.

Will you kindly tell us how long it takes to force plum, apple and cherry blossoms after bringing the plants inside? T. N.

Plum, apple and cherry flowers will open within a month after housing. Give them a temperature of 60 degrees and syringe freely. Move them into a cooler house as the flowers show color; this will give the blooms more substance. C. W.

FAILURE WITH RANUNCULI.

Please give me some instructions on the growing of the ranunculus, as I have failed with it several times. Will it do to plant the bulbs now?

W. A. W.

I presume W. A. W. refers to the cultivation of ranunculi indoors, since they would not be hardy in his section of Ohio. His previous lack of success might be due to putting the bulbs in a warm house. If they are potted now in sandy loam and kept in the coolest house on the place, say the violet house, there is no reason why they should not bloom about the end of April or early in May.

If they are to flower outside, plant them as soon as the frost is out of the ground, about two inches deep. It is always considered that ranunculi like a light, sandy soil. If planted outdoors, they should be lifted in the fall before the frosts.

Chas. H. Totty.

Des Moines, Ia.—A flower store will shortly be opened in the Shops building by U. L. Crawford. Mr. Crawford recently made a trip to Chicago to purchase supplies and fixtures.

Hinsdale, Ill.—That a stylish store steams up sales is the belief of Fred C. Morris. He has an excellent stand, just across the street from the railway station. The building is still comparatively new and Mr. Morris is careful to change his window display every few days. At the present time red begonias flag the attention of the passer-by.

Shenandoah, Ia.—The store and greenhouse of the Shenandoah Greenhouse which are being erected in the central part of the city are nearly completed, and O. B. Stevens hopes to be well settled before Easter trade begins. The present establishment in the southeastern part of the city will still be used. At present, says Mr. Stevens, the demand for stock is greater than he can supply without buying from wholesale houses.

Peoria, Ill.—Otto Von Siebenthal and John A. Nelson, who recently took over the Rue Floral Co., have removed the store from 301 Jefferson avenue to 408 Main street, where they have an excellent equipment. Otto Von Siebenthal has been in charge of the store for some years, and John A. Nelson is the practical man in charge of the greenhouses at 1101 Fifth street. Both men are well known in a business way throughout the city and each has demonstrated his ability in his own line.

Grinnell, Ia.—A stopped-up sewer near by has kept Wm. Bader's force busy bailing out the cellar. The water crept over the boiler grates February 13, but no harm was done.

Houston, Tex.—Robert C. Kerr is installing a tile irrigation system at his nurseries, which cover ten acres and are located five miles southwest of the city. Saturday flower sales, with special prices on certain flowers each Saturday, are attracting considerable attention at the store.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Miss Lucy Doussard, 309½ Collinsville avenue, has purchased the Paul Slack florists' business at 314 Collinsville avenue, and will consolidate the two concerns. Miss Doussard, who is the only lady member of the Commercial Club, states that the season has been the best in the history of her business and that there are all indications of a continuance of the prosperity. She now has three assistants.

Osage, Ia.—T. B. Sargeant, of Vinton, has traded his 270-acre farm for the greenhouses and business of Walter S. Hall, whose health has made it necessary for him to give up his present work. The business was started in 1885 by Mr. Hall and his brother William, who later moved to Iowa Falls. There is about 25,000 feet of glass, covering 15,000 square feet of concrete benches. Mr. Hall has not yet decided what he will do; for the present he and Mrs. Hall will make their home on the newly acquired farm.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

EFFECT OF SALE OF GOOD WILL.

When a florist sells his stock, fixtures and good will, without any express agreement as to whether he shall be at liberty to set up a competing business, question may afterward arise as to how far his successor can restrain his competition. The decision in the case of Ranft vs. Reimers, 200 Illinois Supreme Court Reports 386, shows the state of the law on this subject. These rules of law were laid down in this case: Mere sale of the good will of a business does not preclude the seller from afterwards establishing a competing concern; there must be an express agreement not to compete. Nor will the seller be prevented from using his own name in resuming business, unless it clearly appears that there was an agreement to the contrary. On the question of soliciting former customers, the court said:

"In England it seems to be settled that the vendor of a good will is not entitled to canvass customers and solicit them not to deal with the purchaser, but to deal with the vendor. The vendor will be restrained from such conduct by injunction. In this country the authorities are not agreed. In some states it is held that the purchase of a good will does not carry with it any obligation not to lessen its value by interference with it unless there is an express agreement to that effect, provided that the vendor does not hold himself out to the public as continuing the business which he has sold. In these states the seller may set up the same business in the same vicinity, and canvass the customers of the house, with the effect of destroying the good will. The English view, which we are inclined to regard as the more just and equitable, is adopted by other authorities.

"We do not think that the defendant ought to be allowed, after selling and warranting a good will to complainants, to purposely endeavor to prevent their receiving the benefit of it, or to attempt to disturb them in its enjoyment. The locality chosen by her was not near enough to have that effect. But to canvass old customers of the firm and endeavor to dissuade them from continuing to deal with complainants was a direct interference with the property which defendant sold, with the purpose of destroying it and preventing complainants having the benefit and advantage of it. The attempt to appropriate the telephone number which had been used in the business sold, and by which a large part of the orders had been accustomed to come, was of the same character." S.

A HOUSE OF DAPHNE ODORA.

There are just a few of us who know that R. G. Hanford, of Norwalk, Conn., is selling agent for a greenhouse place devoted to daphnes; in fact, there are a great many of us who have never seen a daphne and only know that it was one of the flowers used by the last generation of florists in making up those old-fashioned bouquets of which we hear so much nowadays. Yet N. Frederick Byzbee has spent his life growing the daphne; he grows it to perfection in four old-fashioned houses that do not mind a freeze in winter and have their low sides protected from the summer sun by armloads of grass thrown over them. To grow the daphne as it is grown here requires skill and knowledge so great that fear has been expressed lest the art should some day be lost. Phil.

THE TRADE SCHOOLS.

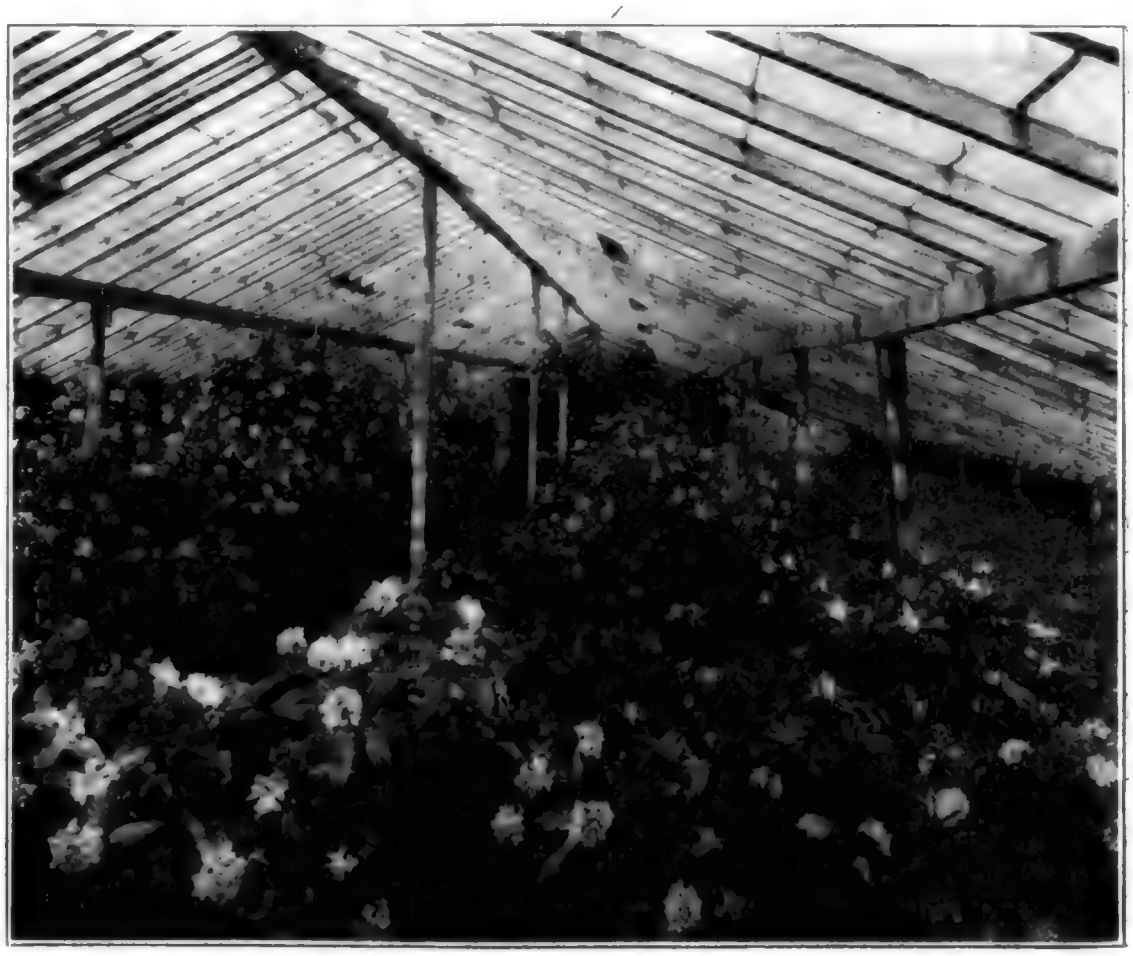
The following is from an article, "The Development of Floriculture in America," by H. B. Dorner, recently published in the Peoria Star:

"The advance of the profession has also been shown by the demand for research and instruction in floriculture in our universities. Work has been taken up at Cornell, in New Jersey, in Massachusetts and in Illinois. These institutions will no doubt rapidly be followed by others, until every state having large floricultural interests will be offering instruction along these lines to her citizens.

"Much money is now being spent by these institutions in building up glass ranges for floricultural research and instruction. Illinois heads the list with about 28,000 square feet of glass devoted to the work. Illinois is also the only institution offering a course leading to the professional degree of bachelor of science in floriculture.

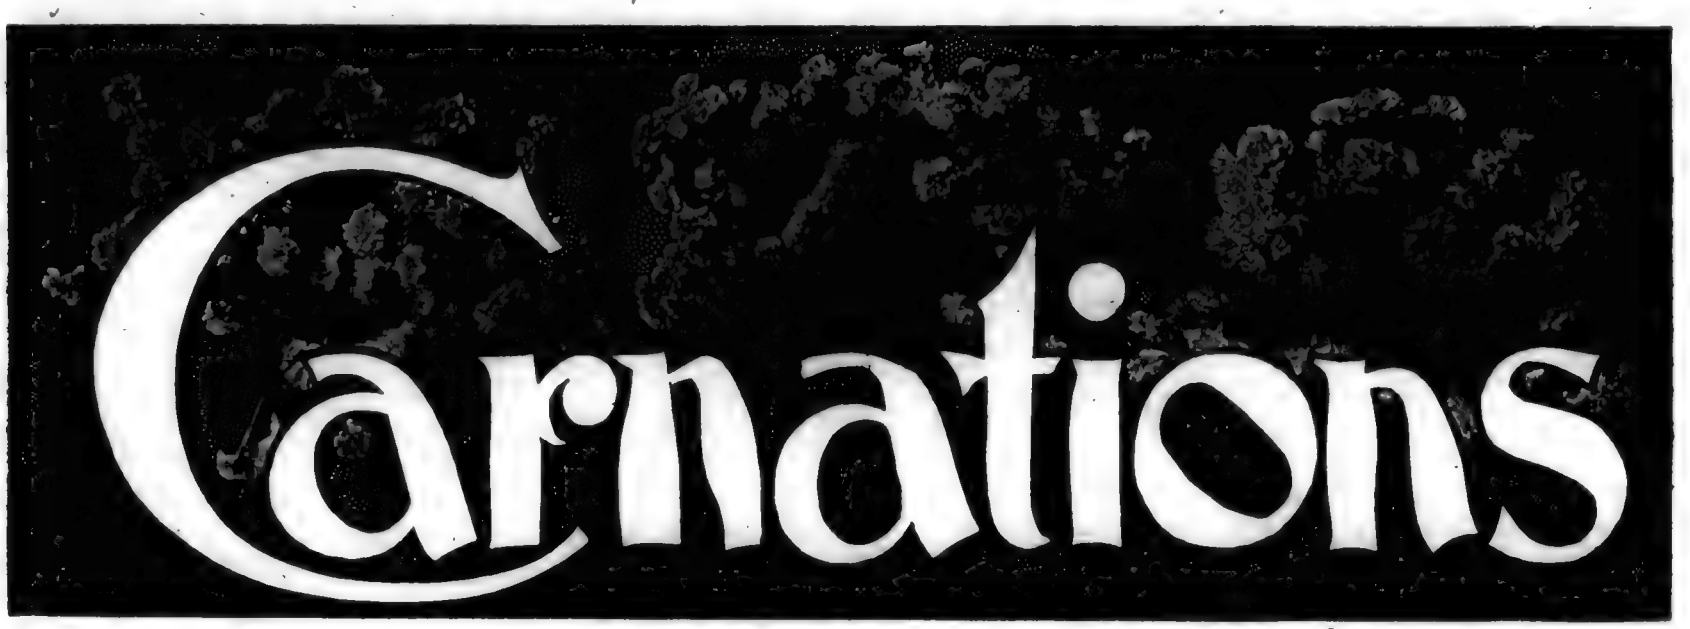
"Much has been said at various times as to the value of a college training in floriculture, but it will have to be admitted that the man with a thorough grounding in the rudiments of the work has much better chances for rapid advancement than the old-time apprentice. The man with a working knowledge of the structure and requirements of plants, of soils, of fertilizers and their uses, of business management, and the many other requirements of a successful florist, is surely better equipped to make a success of his chosen work. No university guarantees to turn out finished florists any more than it guarantees to turn out expert engineers, but the graduates are expected to be better fitted to cope with the florists' problems."

HIGH PRAISE.



Every now and then some one well pleased reader writes The Review how indispensable he finds the paper—but how many would go as far as this man?

Here is my dollar for another year. I would as soon think of doing without my good old pipe as getting along without The Review.—D. B. Kelly, Franklin, Ind., February 15, 1915.



Ashtown, Ill.—The greenhouse, 24x100 feet, which was erected last fall by Oscar Schade and his son, Otto, is now filled with vegetables of various kinds, with which they are having success. Their specialty is cucumbers.

Houston, Tex.—A feature of the meetings of the Rotary Club is exhibits and addresses on them by the members. February 4 R. C. Kerr and O. P. Jackson were among those who were to the front, one showing flowers, the other seeds, and telling about them.

Houston, Tex.—At the February meeting of the Florists' Club it was decided to assist the local newspaper with its season's gardening contests the same as last year. A fall show is planned, but it is intended to run it along different lines, so as to interest more amateurs than was done in 1914.

STIGMONOSE HERALDS SPRING.

I send you under separate cover a few tops of carnations that seem to be acting strangely. Only a few of the plants are affected. Can you inform me as to the trouble and the remedy?
B. W.

Your plants are affected with the common disease called stigmonose or bacteria. When these light spots spread across the width of the leaf, everything above that point dies off; hence the dry tips. I have discussed this trouble with many prominent carnation growers, but as yet have found no one who could offer a remedy for it. We see it appear on especially the Enchantress varieties toward spring, each year, and just why it should get worse at a time when the plants naturally are making a strong growth, we have been unable to determine. One would think that that would be the time when they would throw off any such disease that might have been giving trouble earlier. I am inclined to the opinion that a rapid, watery growth, with a lack of nitrogen, may be partly to blame for it. We have never seen it on young plants that have been kept growing on steadily, but have seen it where the young plants were allowed to get potbound, which at least strengthens our belief in the above theory. A. F. J. B.

CAUSE OF WEAK STEMS.

The stems of our carnations are a little weak. We have given them a dressing of dried blood and hard wood ashes. Might running the house a little too warm at night be the cause?

When should hyacinths be brought in to be forced for Easter in a carnation house? They were potted in November and December. Should tulips be brought in at the same time?
N. A. K. & S.

Running your houses too warm would affect the strength of the stems first of all. The application of wood ashes would likely correct the trouble if the weak stems were the result of a lack of potash in the soil. You will find that after three-fourths of a heavy crop has been cut, the rest will likely contain a rather large percentage of stems that are not so strong as the average during the earlier part of the crop. That is caused by the weaker shoots coming into bloom more slowly than the strong ones, and both the stems and the blooms will average poorer. This may or may not be the cause of your complaint. It cannot be helped.

As Easter is April 4, two weeks should be ample time for bringing in hyacinths and tulips that are well rooted. A. F. J. B.

TO REVIVE WILTED BLOOMS.

Can you suggest any way of reviving carnations that have just begun to shrink, or "go to sleep"? I often receive carnations that have been twenty to twenty-two hours in transit and are just beginning to shrink. I place them in deep water and put them in the refrigerator as soon as they are unpacked. In one day's time they are totally wilted. Is there any way—by adding salt or something similar—to revive them? L. B. W.

While twenty hours is quite a long shipment, considering the average, yet there seems no reason why carnations should not travel that long in perfect condition. If that is the distance to your regular source of supply, I would suggest that you buy such varieties as Pink Delight, Matchless, Rosette and Benora. These are noted for their exceptional shipping qualities and should reach you in first-class condition regularly. You have done perhaps all that could be done to revive these blocms, but I would suggest that you do not place them in icy water, but have it at about 45 degrees. Don't put them into the refrigerator, but set them in a moderately small room where there is no draft. Sprinkle the blooms lightly and cover with damp tissue paper. Cut the ends of the stems and set in water as deeply as possible. A. F. J. B.

TOADSTOOLS IN BEDS.

I have had an entirely new experience. Toadstools have come up in my carnation beds by the bushel and continue coming. Is this due to the manure used or to some other element of the soil? Is there anything I can do to stop it? A. S. C.

Your experience is not an altogether unusual one, except that the toadstools may be more abundant than is common. The spawn was no doubt introduced into the soil with the manure that was mixed in last year. A heavy application of air-slaked or hydrated lime should eradicate them. A. F. J. B.

FLYSPECKS NOT DANGEROUS!

Under separate cover we are sending you a sample of our carnation plants now in bloom, and ask that you give us your opinion as to what is the matter with the plants. R. F. C.

The specks you notice on your carnation leaves are flyspecks. They should cause you not the slightest degree of worry. A. F. J. B.

FLIES OR LARVÆ?

There is a small black fly eating holes in our carnation buds. What is it, and what is the remedy for it? I have grown carnations in a small way for twenty years and never saw it before. It also eats the lily and geranium leaves. I see the same fly in the lettuce house, but it does no damage there. Fumigation does no good. A nicotine spray seems to kill the ones it hits, but they are just as thick the morning after. I think the flies are the cause of the trouble, as I find them in the buds.
M. G. & F. G.

I am inclined to the opinion that your trouble is not caused by those flies, as you suspect, but rather by one of the larvæ that are frequently found in greenhouses during the winter and spring. There is one in particular, that hides in the soil at the base of the plants during the day, coming up to the flower buds during the night and feeding on the tender young petals. Make a mash of corn meal and Paris green moistened with water, and drop a spoonful of it here and there, where you have noticed them working. We have found a different variety working on the geraniums. It is light green and difficult to detect. A spraying of arsenate of lead has quickly cleaned them out for us. A. F. J. B.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

WHO PAYS THE FREIGHT?

It would seem that President Wilson's shipping bill, if it passes, will be a benefit to florists in America. It is a notorious fact that foreign lines give rebates to shippers, thus giving the foreign shipper an extra profit at the expense of the consignee who pays the freight. Florists are careless about paying freight. If they would add the freight and advance charges to the invoice price of their bulbs it would surprise some of them to know how much they actually are paying. The foreign steamship lines usually work "under agreement," thereby limiting competition. For instance, the Holland line will take no plants, and the Red Star line will take no bulbs, in normal years, and each line charges what it pleases. Because these lines fly foreign flags they are beyond the jurisdiction of our laws, which, relative to shipping, are an international joke. When the Panama canal opened, we thought we would get cheaper freight from Japan to New York. January 25 the steamer lines via the canal raised their rates twenty-five per cent and ten per cent. So it is still cheaper to ship the old way, across the continent by rail, than by the canal we so generously built for the benefit of steamship lines. Florists cannot do much, as they seem to be a class of tradesmen who will not organize collectively for their mutual benefit; but they can watch carefully what freight they pay, and buy their goods f. o. b. American cities, thus compelling the foreigners to pay their own freight to their own corrupt lines.

HOLIDAY PROBLEMS.

A few years ago, when I told in The Review about one of my dismal failures on a holiday, after having gone the limit in advertising, one of your readers replied that I "didn't strike the trade from the right angle." Being new and green in the business, I was greatly impressed by that remark and I have been trying to hit the right angle ever since, and this is my experience in connection with St. Valentine's day: I advertised in the movies for one week with a handsome special slide; I advertised in the local paper and sent special cards to customers and prospective customers; our window looked well enough to get a free compliment from the newspaper—and I sold just ten bunches of violets, a few carnations and no roses.

Now, if that kind reader knows of any other angle I could have tried, I shall be thankful to hear from him.

The florist who was polite to the small customer, as narrated recently in The Review, has nothing on me. A short time ago I arranged a "casket spray" for 25 cents. However, I took long enough to do it to get in my talk, so she ordered a 5-dollar pillow the next day. The patron had lots of money and I knew it; I also knew that these were the first flowers she had ever bought.

The high prices at Christmas, 1913, almost ruined what little business we had, and I decided then and there to sell just as few carnations the following Christmas as I could. I sold potted plants, and it worked in great shape. I entered my store just as a clerk had packed twelve carnations, at $1.25, in a box for a customer. I knew the customer and asked him why he did not take a basket of plants at $3.50; he said, "Yes, I'd rather have it." Customers will also pay for nice wide ribbons, used generously.

We work for the growers, selling their stock, the year around, and my business is so small that it makes no difference—I am studying every day how not to sell carnations next Memorial day. A Country Florist.

NO RULE OF THUMB.

It should not be considered that the articles in The Review point out a way to easy money—that, followed blindly, they lead invariably to success.

The purpose of the special articles that are a feature of The Review is to get its readers to think for themselves—to devise ways and means of increasing their own business and profits by reading how others have turned the trick.

Sometimes the suggestions contained in The Review can be adopted literally, but usually they are to be adapted rather than adopted.

Also, it must be plain that publicity is one of the features of most of the successes here recorded. Don't leave out any of the ingredients or your cake may not be so good as the recipe sounds.

Cherryvale, Kan.—F. W. Meyer has moved here from Lincoln, Neb., to take possession of the Cherryvale Greenhouses, which he bought from Mrs. Clara B. Grew.

Davenport, Ia.—F. G. Bahr has been on the sick-list for eight weeks, but is now well on the road to recovery. An attack of the grip caused the bursting of a blood vessel in his head and almost cost him his life.

Clinton, Ill.—Andrew Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., has purchased the greenhouses of C. W. Moore, of which he takes possession March 1. Mr. Peterson has leased a storeroom on the west side of the square, which he will use as a display room.

Atlanta, Ga.—Robert Barrett, a member of the local trade, has filed suit in the Superior court against the city of Atlanta, to collect the $1,000 reward offered for the arrest of the murderer of Mary Phagan. He claims he discovered the strand of hair and blood spots on the floor of the pencil factory which led to the arrest and conviction of Leo M. Frank. He charges that city officials disapprove his claim for the reward.

Geneva, N. Y.—The civil service examination, held January 23, for the vacancy as florist at the Geneva Experiment station, salary $1,000 per year, brought out twenty-two candidates and it has just been announced that all of them passed, all scoring 75 or better. Those who attained marks of 90 or above were: Robert Jones, 96; James Macfarlane, 95; Robert E. Ballantyne, 94; James Cassidy, 93; Carl Armbruster, 92; George W. Beattie, 91; William H. Blackwell, 90.

Middlebush, N. J.—E. C. Matthes, who does a wholesale and retail business, uses the trade name of Middlebush Rosery.

Canton, O.—Charles Lindacher has learned from an aunt near Friedrichshafen, Germany, that he has seven cousins at the front.

Findlay, O.—William Cavins, until recently in the employ of Geo. M. Palmer, is now decorator and designer at the City Greenhouse.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—C. C. Philips, formerly of Washington, Pa., and later manager of the Rosery here, has sold his interest in the firm of Harding & Philips, of which he had been a member since August, 1913.

Sedalia, Mo.—F. J. Norton plans to make extensive improvements in his greenhouses this coming spring. He will combine two of the sections and on the street line will have a plate-glass front, giving a clear view of the interior.

Astoria, N. Y.—Assisted by their five children, twenty-six grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a large number of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pritchard celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at Morissee's hall, Sunday evening, February 14. Mr. Pritchard is 71 years old.

Baltimore, Md.—Michel Hilpert, on Belair road, denies that he has any immediate intention of lengthening four of his greenhouses, as reported. As he puts it: "Business in cut flowers was not prosperous enough this year, but if my half million cuttings sell good perhaps I then will think about this proposition."

Ferns

CATERPILLARS ON FERNS.

We are greatly annoyed by a green worm which eats the tips of our Amerpohlii ferns. In the spring we notice some sort of moths flying among our plants and we suppose these are the starters of the trouble. We find the worms when we are weeding and they do all the damage in the summer. The ferns are grown in a lath house, here in central Florida. Is there any good way of destroying the pest? We do not see how we can spray, as that would mean the use of poison, which would burn the ferns. N. & W.

This caterpillar pest sometimes proves extremely troublesome to fern growers, especially in the south, and there seem to be only two methods of fighting it, namely, either spraying or hand-picking, and the latter method takes up a lot of time. Spraying with a weak solution of Paris green, or with a solution of nicotine, is the most effective remedy, but needs to be done carefully to avoid injury to the young fronds. W. H. T.

MEALY BUG ON BOSTON FERNS.

What can be done with Boston ferns to rid them of mealy bug? J. F. C.

A good force of water from a spray nozzle on the hose will clean them. Lay the plants on their sides before hosing them over. C. W.

SAMPLES FOR IDENTIFICATION.

I am enclosing fronds of two kinds of ferns. Can you give me the name of each? I am also enclosing a leaf of what we know here as mountain laurel, but I have heard that it goes by some other name. F. L. M.

The leaf known as mountain laurel is Rhododendron Catawbiense.

The larger portion of a fern frond is from one of the pteris family, but the specimen is not complete enough for positive identification. The smaller fern fronds are from an asplenium, probably A. ebeneum. In forwarding fern specimens for identification it is best to send a whole fertile frond, for the classification depends chiefly on the form and arrangement of the spores on the leaf, and none of the enclosed samples were fertile fronds. W. H. T.

BUILDING A LATH HOUSE.

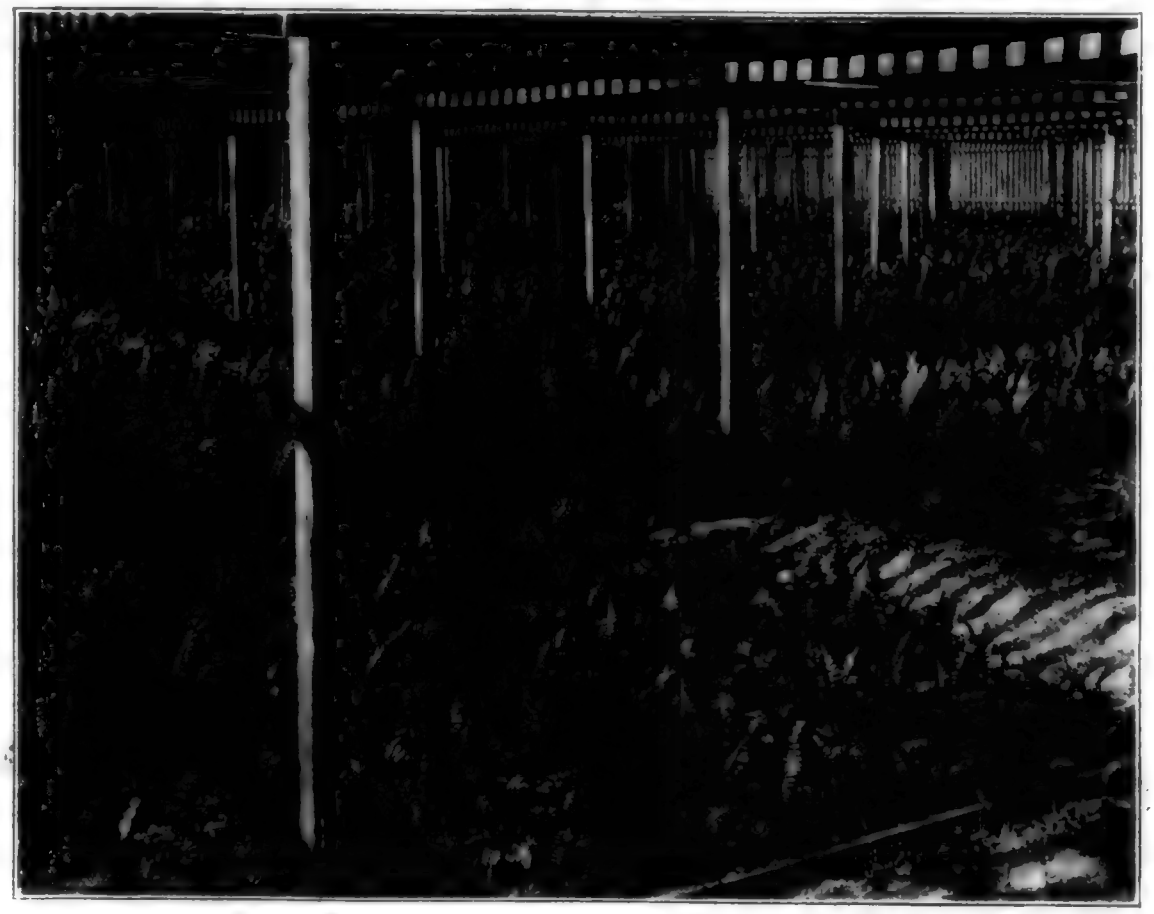
What is the best way to build a lath house for storing palms, ferns, etc., in summer? How wide should the laths be and how much space should there be between them? We are located, you will notice, in southwestern Michigan. V. B. & B.

The most convenient lath house for summer use is one that is in outline something like an even-span greenhouse, with only a little pitch to the roof. For example, the walls may be six to seven feet high to the eaves, and the ridge eight to ten feet above the ground. The framework should be of 2x4 or 3x4 lumber, according to the dimensions of the building. Unless it is unusually wide, a single row of posts under the ridge will support it.

Ordinary building lath will answer well for the purpose, and would necessitate the framing to be spaced four feet apart from the centers. The laths themselves should be spaced about three-fourths of an inch apart. If you are troubled with heavy snows in your locality, it will be advisable to build the lath house in sections, so that it may be taken down and stored away for the winter. W. H. T.

A STRONG COMBINATION.

Although not the oldest, among the best known of the fern growers of Florida is the firm of Newell & Ustler, at Apopka, Fla., composed of W. P. Newell and H. J. Ustler. If the second initial were omitted from the latter's name, it would serve to describe each of the partners. To this quality is largely due the firm's success, which is to some extent indicated by the view of the interior of their slat houses given in the accompanying illustration. Another factor and its part in the building of the business is set forth in the following paragraph, from the letter of Newell & Ustler which accompanied the photograph:



"Two years ago this coming January 1, this plot of ground was the toughest proposition that ever 'a nigger run up against with a grub hoe,' but by hard work and pluck, which are the main things in Florida, and the advertising done in The Review, we made it the show place of Apopka. The Review's classified ads have worked wonders in building up our business; we have on our books the names of all the leading florists in all the large cities. As an advertising medium, we cannot speak too highly of The Review, which we welcome every week."

Middletown, O.—Joseph R. Goldman has taken over the business of J. R. Johnston and will conduct it in the future.

Scranton, Pa.—Arrangements for the annual flower show, to be held in Town hall, March 25 to 27, have been perfected by the Scranton Florists' Club.

Scranton, Pa.—Baldwin the Florist has removed from his old stand on Spruce street to his new store at 118 Adams avenue. Although only in business here for two years, Mr. Baldwin has built up a good business, which, it is expected, will increase now that he is established in more commodious and pretentious quarters. M. L. Ruch is manager at the store. An automobile delivery service is a recent addition.

Evansville, Ind.—Joseph M. Wilkin, secretary and treasurer of the Carnation Support Co., announces that the concern has increased its capital stock from $2,000 to $5,000. The purpose was to put more funds at its disposal to enable it to carry a larger stock of made-up supports. Carl R. Houghton is president and Michael Ganley vice-president. The directors are Joseph E. Huston, Robert T. Huston and the three officers.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Ericas.

Ericas always appear at Easter in moderate numbers; the varieties mostly seen are melanthera, Caffra densa and Mediterranea. These must be retarded in a cold pit to hold them and the glass will require shading to keep them in condition. One good point about ericas is that they have wonderful lasting properties and can easily be kept some weeks in perfect condition in a cool pit. This also is the time to put in cuttings of these plants if it has not yet been done. They take longer to root than genistas, but can be treated much the same.

Lilacs.

The first week in March place lilacs in a temperature of 60 degrees. They now start to grow quickly. Let the flower trusses become well drawn out and showing color; then let them open in a cooler house. This will make them nice and hard and they will not present the wilted appearance so often noticed on overforced plants.

Miscellaneous Deciduous Shrubs.

Miscellaneous deciduous shrubs are quite popular at Easter. It is a mistake to start them too early. Usually a month suffices, and plants given 60 degrees early in March will, in nearly every case, be in time. It should be remembered that it is best to have only a few flowers open on these when sold. This allows customers to get more pleasure from them. They open out quickly in a warm room. In this class are forsythias, prunus, malus, wistarias, laburnums, cerasus, magnolias and double almonds. Allow Azalea mollis a few more days to develop properly.

Roses.

Roses are among the most valuable of Easter plants and probably come next to lilies and azaleas in importance. It does not pay to start these too late. All plants should now have growths well advanced and, if buds can just be detected on the ramblers, they are not too early. Full light, freedom from drafts, a spraying on clear days and a moving around or elevation of the plants, to give them every chance to come well furnished, are necessary. Tausendschon will come in earlier than the other ramblers and the so-called Baby ramblers need less time than the true ramblers. The hybrid perpetuals need not show any buds before March 10 and they will then be on time.

Primulas.

Plants of all the various primulas must be kept in a cold house and shaded from bright sun. It is not easy to keep P. Sinensis in decent condition until Easter, but P. obconica comes in useful, while the newer P. malacoides is easily the most decorative and graceful of the whole family. Cyclamens also must be kept cool. By the way, it is time seed of P. obconica and P. Sinensis was sown for flowering next winter, but do not sow the beautiful malacoides before June, or the plants will be far too large.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

Keep Dutch bulbous plants as cold as possible until a month before they are wanted. Even a month may prove too long a period if the weather is hot, but it is easy to retard them. The finest and stockiest pans of bulbous stock for Easter are grown in coldframes where they are close to the glass. Here, also, it is easy to shade the plants from the sun and they can be darkened and retarded by means of mats and board shutters. Where frames are not available, give the bulbs a cold but light house. Be sure to lay papers over the tulips as they commence to open.

Lily of the Valley.

Lily of the valley is a valuable Easter plant. Allow it four weeks in a temperature of 60 degrees. Do not have the plants too long in the dark. Plants for Easter should be well foliaged and it is far better to give the plants full light the last two weeks of their growth. Protect them, however, from bright sunshine.

LEMOINE'S NEW BEGONIA.

E. Lemoine thus describes Begonia Nancy, which would have been disseminated in the trade this season had not the Germans invaded France, closing transportation out of Nancy:

"Like Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, raised by my father more than twenty years ago, B. Nancy is a hybrid of B. Socotrana, but while B. Dregei was the male parent of the Gloire de Lorraine, Begonia Baumannii, a tuberous sort with large, pink, sweet-scented flowers, was the pollen parent of the present novelty. Therefore, this, being unlike the numerous sports of Lorraine, is easily distinguished by its different habit, although it retains the superior qualities of floriferousness of this most useful plant.

"The short stems, of a bronzy pink, are erect, and well furnished with a good foliage, the leaves being round or kidney-shaped, sometimes peltate, of a dark green. The inflorescences are borne by upright and stout flowering stalks, springing from every axil and standing well above the foliage. They are in form of regular dichotomous cymes, carrying a quantity of flowers, nearly all male, with four petals, the lateral ones being longer. These vary in quantity, in size and in color, according to the age of the plants and the manner in which they are grown. They are generally about two inches wide, but flowers of three and three and one-half inches are frequently to be found, principally on younger plants. The color is a rich, rosy carmine with apparent nerves and chrome-yellow stamens. The female flowers, with five petals, are produced in small number at the end of the clusters, which are slightly sweet-scented. Though commencing to bloom in the middle of October, December, January and February are the best flowering times of this beautiful plant."

Swett has secured forty acres, which, he says, is ideal bulb soil. His postoffice remains Stoughton.

Spiraea Van Houttei, Probably the Most Widely Planted Flowering Shrub Grown in the United States.

IS IT YOUR FAVORITE SPIRÆA?

Perhaps the people of your neighborhood may sometime have engaged in a voting contest to decide which was the most beautiful or most popular young lady in town. If that form of amusement were to be varied by deciding in like manner which is the chief favorite among the hardy, outdoor spiræas, for which spiræa would you cast your ballot? Would not Spiræa Van Houttei, familiarly known as Van Houtte's spiræa and frequently as the bridal wreath, have an excellent chance of receiving the majority of votes? Most of the nurserymen have already voted for it publicly by stating in their catalogues that "it is the grandest of all spiræas and one of the best of all shrubs," "the most satisfactory shrub in cultivation," or something to that effect. And a big, dignified, conservative horticultural cyclopedia asserts that Van Houttei "is one of the most beautiful, or perhaps the most beautiful, of the early-blooming spiræas." Thousands of owners of homes, also, throughout the country have already expressed their preference on the subject by planting the Van Houtte spiræa in some conspicuous place near their front door, as did the citizen of Rochester, N. Y., whose residence is partly shown in the accompanying illustration.

Many readers may question the right of Spiræa Van Houttei to be called the bridal wreath, since that highly complimentary nickname has long been held almost undisputedly by another pretty member of the spiræa family, S. prunifolia flore pleno. In many localities, however, especially in the western states, the tendency seems to be to transfer the name to Van Houtte's spiræa. In some carefully edited catalogues, S. Van Houttei now is listed as the bridal wreath, while the prunifolia variety is referred to as the double-flowered bridal wreath.

Among the most evident reasons for the special popularity of Spiræa Van Houttei are its beautiful foliage, its neat, symmetrical habit of growth and its lavish abundance of beautiful white flowers, under the weight of which the slender branches droop gracefully, as if bending beneath a covering of snow. Its gracefulness of form is so natural and so persistent that little or no pruning is needed to keep the shrub in perfect shape. It is appropriate, too, for a great variety of positions on the home grounds, since it is neat enough and compact enough to suit the narrow spaces around the porch and doorway, and yet, if allowed free scope for development, may grow to a height of five feet or more. As an ornamental hedge plant it is excellent.

The shrubby spiræas, in general, succeed in almost any moderately moist soil. They are easily propagated by means of cuttings.

Chickasha, Okla.—Bitsche Bros., who deal in seeds and poultry supplies as well as bulbs and plants, have remodeled their store and expect to double their business this year. A new post-office building next door has just been completed and will draw people to their entrance.

El Paso, Tex.—The Wright Nursery & Floral Co., recently organized, has opened a downtown office at 305 North Stanton street. J. M. B. Wright, the head of the concern, has been in the nursery business here for some time and will take charge of this branch of the company's work: John Thornhill will have charge of the cut flower and decorating lines. The greenhouses and nursery are at 2131 Commerce street.

Moorhead, Minn.—If the consent of the Northern Pacific Railway Co. can be obtained, the city will erect a greenhouse on the land now known as Stoddard park. In the deed by which title to the property passed to the city the railroad stipulated that it was to be used for park purposes only. The plan is that the proprietor of the greenhouse take care of the park. Though it is not definitely known, it is thought W. R. Briggs will be the proprietor.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

Chrysanthemums.

The present time is a good one to prepare chrysanthemum cuttings, especially of the earlier varieties, whether for indoor or outdoor culture. The cuttings are plentiful and will still root readily in the greenhouse propagating bench. A month later, especially in the more southern sections, they will have to be rooted in coldframes and shaded well during the day. These frames may be from twelve to eighteen inches high, in order to protect the cuttings from drafts as much as possible, and whatever kind of shade is used must be elevated both front and back to provide thorough ventilation.

Clean sand and charcoal dust make an excellent combination for a propagating bed. Charcoal dust alone practically eliminates danger from cutting bed fungus, and may be used for more than one year.

Shade must be removed entirely at night, which is the proper time to do any watering the bed requires.

During extremely warm weather, rot is liable to start in the soft tips of the cuttings and work clear down to the sand; so remove the tips from all the cuttings before inserting them in the sand, and the trouble is obviated. In fact, in hot weather the cuttings are better to be a little on the hard side, and often more than one cutting can be made from the same shoot. When the cuttings are nicely rooted, which will be in from twenty to twenty-five days, they can be potted in 2¼-inch pots in a good compost of three parts fresh loam to one part manure. They must be kept moving until you are ready to plant them out. A young plant that is allowed to become hard and stunted in a small pot never seems to lose its woody tendency, no matter how it may seem to flourish after being planted out.

Carnations.

Early propagation and early planting out in the field is the watchword for carnations. December and January are the best months for propagating, although it is not too late yet to put in a good-sized batch, as an anchor to windward. Select good pips from near the base of the flowering shoots for cuttings, taking them medium-sized or a little larger, and avoiding the smaller ones, which do not root well and never prove satisfactory when they do.

The propagating table should be five inches deep. A good layer of rough cinders in the bottom makes the best kind of drainage. The sand must be clean and free from all dirt. It does not matter whether it is coarse or fine, as subsequent waterings will be heavy or light according to its texture. I have used sand for propagating that required heavy watering three times daily, and some that hardly required that much in a week, with equally good results. The sand when pounded firm should be about three inches deep.

When the cuttings are first inserted they require a thorough watering. On every bright day give them a fine spraying before shading, and apply just enough water to keep the sand well moistened, but not waterlogged. The cuttings must be carefully watched and not allowed to wilt.

If you have to use the same sand for a second or third batch of cuttings, be sure to sterilize it by drenching it thoroughly with scalding hot water from the boiler or a solution of 200 parts water to one part formalin. If the latter is used, it is well to spread newspapers over the sand after it is soaked, to cause the fumes to be retained as long as possible. In three or four days the sand will be ready for use again.

A night temperature of 50 to 52 degrees must be maintained in the house. It is not necessary to have bottom heat under the propagating bench; without it the cuttings may take a few days longer to root and yet be all the better for so doing. In such conditions thirty days are required to root the cuttings sufficiently to be potted.

When they are rooted, pot them up in 2¼-inch pots, place on a bench and keep shaded for a week, until the cuttings begin to establish themselves in their new quarters. An excellent potting soil for this purpose is obtained by screening two inches of the top soil from one of the old chrysanthemum beds, adding about one-eighth to one-tenth leaf-mold and mixing thoroughly. No cow manure or other fertilizer is needed. Give a thorough watering after potting, spray every bright day and avoid giving too much water, but don't let the plants suffer from lack of it. Pay particular attention to the ends and edges of the tables, as you will find the plants there are liable to dry out quickly.

In about six weeks the plants will be ready for their first pinching and this should be attended to just as needed. I do not believe in pinching too close to the ground the first time, but allow the plants to get high enough so that after taking out the top joint there will be four to six other joints left. In eight weeks the young plants will want a shift. Instead of repotting, it is better to plant them out on a bench in not over two and a half to three inches of soil. They can be set out rather closely and will thrive until the time comes for planting in the field, which should be in March or the beginning of April, according to latitude. The advantages of planting them in shallow beds lie in the facts that such a bed is not easily overwatered, the roots are kept compact, and on lifting to plant in the field you can put the trowel under and practically lift all the soil and have the roots intact. L.

SOWING HARDY PERENNIALS.

We have been in the habit of sowing our hardy perennial seeds in July or early August for fall transplanting, but we do not have as good success as we would like. Would it be an advantage to sow in the early spring? When do the large commercial growers sow these seeds and what treatment do they give the small plants? W. M. R. S.

More perennial seeds are sown, probably, in July and early August than during any other period. Winter, however, is a splendid time to sow many varieties, a suitable time being from February 1 to March 15. Seeds should be sown in shallow flats of light soil containing a large percentage of leaf-mold. Use some fine sand as a covering after sowing. Give a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night; let the atmosphere be moist, and be sure that the soil in the flats is not allowed to dry out. Some varieties will germinate in a few days, others not for weeks, a few not for months, but when sown under glass there is a tolerable certainty of a good germination if the seeds are fresh.

You can move perennial seedlings to a slightly cooler house when they are well above ground. Seedlings can be transplanted into other flats, and planting out in nursery rows or beds can be done about May 1, or, if you have a call for perennials in pots, they can be taken from the flats and potted, and grown along in coldframes. Aquilegias, delphiniums, lychnis, campanulas, Shasta daisies and a considerable number of other sorts can be advantageously started now, and many will make strong plants for fall sales; some, also, will flower the same season. C. W.

SUNNYSLOPE FARM.

Part of the large grounds of the S. Bryson Ayres Co., of sweet pea fame, at Independence, Mo., known as Sunnyslope Farm, is shown in the illustration on this page. Although there is much besides this, the part shown is the center of activity and interest, for in the greenhouses almost in the center of the illustration are made the seed tests. The propagation of hardy plants also is carried on here.

PLANTING OUT FORCED BULBS.

It seems a shame to dump all hyacinth, tulip, daffodil and Easter lily bulbs after forcing. Can you tell us whether or not they can be planted outdoors and be made to bloom again? When should they be planted out?

H. & C.

It is too bad to throw away all the forced bulbs right after flowering. Some varieties do well in the open ground; others hardly pay for the trouble involved in planting them. It is necessary to wait until sharp frosts have passed before planting out the bulbs. Meanwhile they must be protected from frost, for, if left outdoors, all the foliage would be destroyed. Left-overs can be planted closely in nursery rows, in beds, or dotted here and there in borders. Some few sorts, such as Narcissus poeticus and Leedsi, are good for naturalizing purposes.

Plant Easter lilies out in your latitude, northern Ohio, on or about April 20. They will give you some flowers in July and August, but will be of no further value. Hyacinths will flower for one or two seasons with spikes much reduced in size. Roman hyacinths, Paper Whites, freesias and some other bulbs are not hardy, and it is of no use to plant them outside. Tulips will flower fairly well for more than one season; the Darwin varieties often improve from year to year. The large trumpet narcissi, such as Golden Spur, Victoria, Emperor, Sir Watkin, etc., will flower for several years. The white winged varieties are, as a rule, hardier than the yellow ones. The short trumpet varieties, such as poeticus, Leedsi, Barri and incomparabilis, nearly all do well after forcing. C. W.

GOOD STOCK FOR CUTTINGS.

I have left my chrysanthemum plants in the beds, thinking that I could thus produce my own cuttings. The shoots that came up, however, sprang from the roots and are extra strong, but do not seem to be woody enough to take root, being a good half inch in diameter. If I can not use them, I shall empty the bench to make room for spring plants.

B. A. A.

I think that the shoots referred to are ideal for making cuttings; that is, if the temperature has been suitable. A temperature of 45 degrees at night, all things considered, is about right, and the larger and stronger the cuttings the better the stock. B. A. A. can easily satisfy himself whether or not the cuttings will root, by trying them, but he need not have any fear that the cuttings are too big, as this is an indication that they are strong and vigorous. In the absence of information regarding the temperature, I should think he has ideal stock to work on. Chas. H. Totty.

BOXWOODS NOT THRIVING.

I am enclosing some pieces of boxwood, or box trees, which are badly diseased. Can you tell me what the disease is and how it can be checked? Some of the trees are in the open ground and others are in boxes, but all have the same disease and all of them seem likely to die. As I have a good many plants of good value, I shall appreciate any advice given. C. R.

I could not detect any special disease on the foliage, but the shoots sent were simply smothered with mealy bug and scale and I am inclined to think that these are responsible for the poor condition of your plants. Use the hose vigorously on them, using a spray nozzle to give the water more pressure. Also syringe with some remedy such as Aphine, kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap. These may scorch the ends of the young, tender growths, but will not harm the mature foliage. More than one application may be necessary to clean your trees, but keep up the work until they are clean. It is utterly impossible for them to thrive in their present condition. C. W.

THE VALUE OF SOOT.

Milton L. Putney, chief of the bureau of soils in the United States Department of Agriculture, says: "Coal soot is valuable as a fertilizer principally as a source of nitrogen. It usually contains less than one per cent of potash and phosphoric acid and from one to eleven per cent of nitrogen, averaging probably about three per cent. In addition to its fertilizer value it is considered to have certain insecticidal values. This material is quite widely used in England and in our opinion it will pay anyone making a quantity of soot to save it."

OBITUARY

H. Frank Darrow.

Horace Frank Darrow, of New York, died February 21 in the Long Island College hospital after a brief illness. He was for many years a resident of Brooklyn and leaves a wife and daughter. The funeral was held February 23.

Mr. Darrow was born at New London, Conn., in 1866. His first experience in commercial life was with the firm he afterward succeeded in business, so that his entire career was devoted to a single line of endeavor, in which he was successful to a marked degree. In 1887 the young man, having just attained his majority, secured a position with Theodore Pabst & Co., at that time a well known firm in the importing brokerage business in New York and American representatives of a number of European houses. They had a horticultural department in which Mr. Darrow found congenial surroundings. When August Rhotert took over this part of the Pabst business in 1893 Mr. Darrow continued with him, at length becoming chief clerk and later a partner. Since the death of Mr. Rhotert, in 1906, Mr. Darrow has carried on the business in his own name and it is understood the estate will so continue it. While a general business as a customs broker has been done, a specialty has been made of horticultural interests. Some of the firms that were represented in New York by Pabst & Co., a quarter of a century ago, still intrust their American interests to Mr. Darrow's organization, notably Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, and Louis Leroy & Co., Angers, France. Other widely known concerns with large American interests for whom Mr. Darrow was agent are the Haerens Co., Ghent, Belgium; John Palmer & Sons, Ltd., Annan, Scotland; P. J. Looymans & Son, Oudenbosch, Holland. In addition he handled noncompetitive stock for his own account and was widely acquainted in the trade in Europe through his periodical trips of inspection.

Mr. Darrow was at one time commodore of the Rockaway Point Yacht Club. The family home is at 2811 Clarendon road, Flatbush.

S. W. Call.

S. W. Call, of Perry, probably the oldest active nurseryman in the state of Ohio, was killed February 22 as he was driving an automobile across the tracks of the New York Central railroad at his home town. He was alone in the car, which was demolished.

Martin M. Doyle.

Martin M. Doyle, senior partner of M. Doyle & Son, at 2660 Douglas street, Philadelphia, died February 18 at his home at Lehigh avenue and Douglas street. His wife, Mrs. Margaret M. Doyle, and son, Clarence, survive him. The business will be continued by the son.

William B. King.

William B. King, for many years a grower at Apponaug, in the town of Warwick, R. I., died February 14. Death was due to a complication of diseases incident to advancing age, he being 75 years old. For a quarter of a century he conducted the florists' business, until two years ago, when he retired, leaving his son, Daniel A. T. King, to continue it.

Mr. King was born in East Hartford, Conn., in 1840 and was a son of Capt. Ira and Sarah Borden King. At the age of 16 he ran away from home and went to sea on a whaling vessel. Upon his return he enlisted in the navy at Philadelphia and during the Civil war served on six different vessels. After returning from the war he worked for a number of years as a lather and in 1888 built a greenhouse and started in the florists' business, which increased to considerable proportions. He was one of the charter members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, with which he continued an active interest until he retired from business. He was lieutenant colonel of the Kentish Artillery, one of the independent chartered military commands of the state; a member of Thomas Post, G. A. R., and of Perseverance Lodge, I. O. O. F. His widow and one son survive him. W. H. M.

H. Frank Darrow.

Edward Houck.

After a busy day superintending the rush of St. Valentine's day business, Edward Houck, one of the best known florists of Denver, Colo., suffered an attack of paralysis which resulted in death February 15.

Mr. Houck was 48 years old and was the manager of the Elitch-Long flower store as well as the secretary of the Elitch-Long Amusement Co. He had resided in Denver twenty-five years, removing there from his birthplace, San Jose, Cal. He was a brother of Mrs. Elitch-Long. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Woodmen of the World and the Chamber of Commerce.

He is survived by his wife and two sisters. The funeral was held at St. Leo's church February 17 and was largely attended by members of the trade.

Joseph Volz.

Joseph Volz, one of the old-time florists of Cincinnati, died in St. Francis hospital in that city February 16, at an advanced age. Many years ago he established himself on Dina avenue, where a prosperous business has been done. Later the firm became Joseph Volz & Son and in the course of advancing years the founder retired, since which time the business has been conducted under the name of Frank A. Volz. The name is well known outside of Cincinnati through a wholesale business in goldfish, conducted in connection with the retail florists' establishment. Mrs. Volz died some years ago. One son is in the piano business and four daughters also survive.

Harold Losee.

The bodies of Harold Losee and his bride of a year were found February 22 in their home on the estate of Alexander C. Humphreys, president of Stevens Institute, of Hoboken, on the outskirts of Morristown, N. J., where Losee was employed as a florist. Much mystery surrounds the deaths of the couple.

Lucius H. Mann.

Lucius H. Mann, of Randolph, Mass., died February 14, aged 76 years and eleven months. He had for over twenty-five years been keenly interested in floriculture. He had a fall two weeks before his decease and this, added to a weak heart, hastened his end. He worked until a few weeks ago in the greenhouses now managed by his two sons, who, with a widow, survive him. The establishment of Mann Bros. is a noted one. They are the largest bulb growers for the Boston market and the deceased gentleman lived to see it grow from a modest beginning. Interment was at Randolph February 17. Many beautiful floral tributes were sent by relatives and friends. W. N. C.

Mrs. Wellington Hughes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Porter Hughes, wife of Wellington Hughes, who, until his death, November 19, 1911, conducted the Hillsdale City Greenhouses, at Hillsdale, Mich., died recently at her home in Hillsdale.

Mrs. Hughes was born in London, England, November 19, 1836, and came to this country when she was 14 years old. For four years she lived in Monroe, Mich., moving then to Hillsdale, where she married Wellington Hughes, November 19, 1861. They conducted a greenhouse for many years on North Hillsdale street. In 1902 they sold this property and built the present greenhouses and residence.

Mrs. Hughes is survived by a brother, William R. Porter, of San Bernardino, Cal.; a son, Charles, who has been in charge of the greenhouses since his father's death, and a daughter, Clara.

Mrs. Adam H. Knaust.

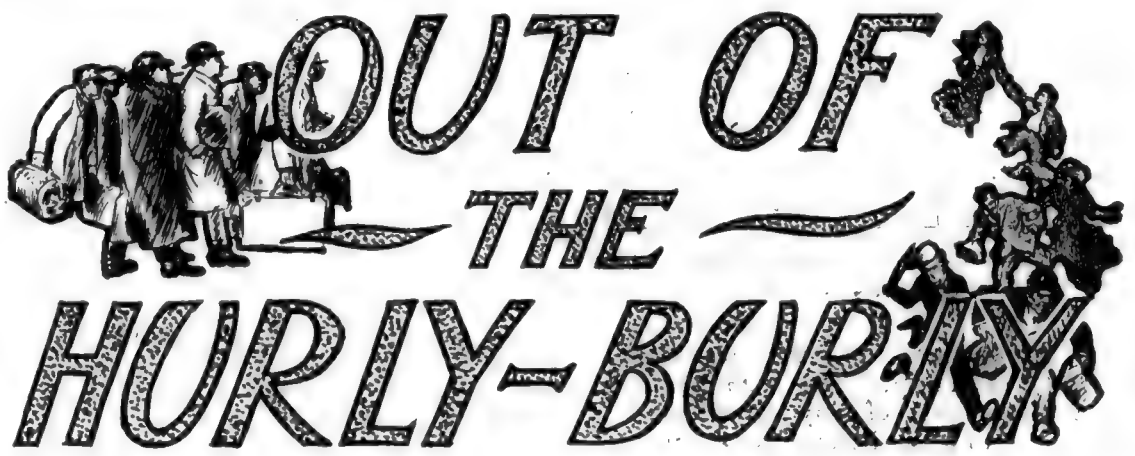
The wife of Adam H. Knaust, for many years in the florists' business at Saugerties, N. Y., died Sunday, February 14, of heart trouble. She was nearly 70 years of age. Her husband, a daughter, Mrs. David Bell, and a son, George, all of Saugerties, and a married daughter residing in New York survive her.

Mrs. Fred Kanst.

Eliza Kanst, wife of Fred Kanst, for forty years head gardener of the south side park system in Chicago, died February 19, at the family home, 6658 Kimbark avenue. Interment, February 21, was in Oakwoods cemetery.

Mrs. Kanst was 68 years of age. She was well known to the older members of the trade in Chicago, as her husband was one of the early leaders. Many years ago they took up their residence in a cottage in Washington park, when the park was an almost treeless tract, and there they lived until a short time ago, when the cottage had to be removed to make way for the new administration building. There are three children. One is Mrs. Stella Gurney, of St. Louis. The youngest son is Edwin A. Kanst, for several years secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and active in the management of its largest shows, now superintendent of Lincoln park, Chicago.

MAY BE DUE TO ESCAPING GAS.



Under separate cover we are sending you three plants for your inspection. Everything was doing finely here until January 8. For instance, the orchids were in perfect condition and had been blooming nicely. I know that on the date mentioned there were orchids ready to cut and other buds were nearly ready to open. On the morning of January 9 these blooms did not look right, and the next morning they showed decidedly that there was something wrong. From that time the flowers gradually dried up and died. In a few days the plants themselves began to show there was something wrong and they have continued until they are in the condition of the plant we are sending you. These orchids have been on the place more than five years, and have been cared for by myself for the last three years. The plant that we are sending you shows that it has had a good deal of water. There are other plants in the lot that have not been repotted for two years; half their roots are outside and they have never had too much water.

The lilies were potted about the middle of November and were stood on the cement floor in the basement in identically the same position in which we placed our lilies last year. They were benched about January 8, apparently all right, but never have grown as they should, although we have produced fine lilies heretofore. The whole bunch of geraniums look like the little sample sent, or worse. They have lost all their leaves and show a weak, spindling growth; some of the smallest ones have died. Kindly let us know at your earliest convenience what you think is the trouble. W. W. S.

The cattleya certainly looked as though it had been having a hard time of it. No overwatering or the reverse could cause your plants to go to the bad so quickly, and the same holds true of your geraniums. At the coldest season of the year there are always cases of serious injury to greenhouse plants from escaping gas. I am inclined to think that either sewer gas or illuminating gas is escaping into your houses. The injury is never serious until we get severe weather, with the ground hard frozen and covered with snow. During such weather a minimum of ventilation is given even in the daytime and none at all at night, and even our toughest palms and foliage plants will show the effects of the gas. Cattleyas have tough foliage, and no amount of neglect could produce such serious injury in so short a time.

I think an investigation, which, however, cannot well be carried out successfully while the ground is sealed tight, will prove that gas in some form is responsible for the condition of your geraniums and cattleyas.

As to the lilies, their condition also may be due to gas, or may be due largely to the unfitness of the bulbs. The enclosed lily shoot was diseased; the growth made had been feeble and the leaves were curled. Any giganteum lilies on which the foliage curls in this way, although apparently green and healthy, are utterly worthless. A frequent cause of this condition is premature digging of the bulbs. Your trouble is not at all a rare one; in fact, there are few batches of lilies to be found without a percentage of these diseased plants. Improper treatment after potting has a tendency to produce sickly plants. Too much moisture in the early stages of growth is bad, as is a low temperature. Giganteums must be grown warm from the start; 60 degrees at night is a suitable temperature, and they can have 10 degrees more when well started, if necessary. However, as your plants were all right a year ago, I conclude that your treatment is not at fault and that the condition of your lilies is due either to escaping gas, to immaturity of the bulbs or to a combination of the two causes. Cleveland, O.—Florists of Cleveland held a benefit card party Thursday afternoon, February 18, at the Hotel Hollenden. Proceeds were for the assistance of horticulturists of Europe.

Scranton, Pa.—William McClintock, C. W. Baldwin and William McDonald compose the committee named to make plans for the annual flower show to be held in Town hall, opening March 23, under the auspices of the Scranton Florists' Club.

Cleveland, O.—Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the clerk of the board of education up to noon March 8, for the labor and materials for a greenhouse on the East Technical high school property, in accordance with plans and specifications on file in the office of the architect of the board of education.

Newark, N. J.—The Essex County Florists' Club gave its annual banquet February 18, at the Krueger auditorium. A feature of the dinner was the elaborate floral decorations, each member trying to outdo his neighbor in displaying the choicest blooms. Plates were set for eighty-five. There was speechmaking.

New Orleans, La.—The motion for a new trial of the expropriation suit of the Orleans-Kenner Electric railway against the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., reported in The Review for February 18, was denied by Judge Edrington. Harry Papworth is now blocking the construction of the line through his property by an injunction.

Gibson City, Ill.—Andrew Peterson has bought the C. W. Moore greenhouses at Clinton, Ill., and leased a store on Court House square, where he will carry a general stock of cut flowers, plants and seeds, drawing the greater part of his supplies from the newly acquired greenhouses and from his range of 100,000 feet of glass in Gibson City. The business at both places will be conducted under the name of the Peterson Floral Co.

Massillon, O.—Fire at the greenhouses of Frank Whitmore February 8 destroyed the boiler room and damaged the greenhouses. The crop of lettuce was greatly injured.

Bucyrus, O.—F. J. Norton will enlarge his greenhouses on Charles street and Kaler avenue as soon as the spring rush is over. The two north houses will be replaced by one 34x84 feet.

Hudson, N. Y.—The greenhouses of Richard W. Allen, whose death, January 10, was reported in these columns, have been purchased by Leon Hatheway, assistant treasurer of the Union Mills. He will continue the business, moving to the Allen residence about April 1.

Zanesville, O.—In a quarter-page advertisement in the Zanesville Times-Recorder February 20 C. L. Humphrey offered roses at 75 cents, carnations at 35 cents and daffodils at 25 cents per dozen at a special sale at his market stand only. Cyclamens and primroses are also offered at his special sales.

Great Falls, Mont. — Appropriate notes on the bottom of January statements, general reminders with all orders sent out from the first of the month and a small newspaper advertisement made St. Valentine's day trade of more than usual importance at the store of the Electric City Conservatory. Corsages in red heart-shaped boxes pierced with arrows were the leaders, but spring flowers sold well.

Johnstown, Pa.—Bruce H. and George Walker, who recently took over the florists' business of William Schmidt, now occupy their new location at 111 Market street. Messrs. Walker will use the beautiful mahogany cases from the Coldren & Monaghen store, all of which are nicely adapted to the purposes of a flower store. The large central one in the rear of the room will be fitted up as a refrigerator, which will enable a fine display of cut flowers to be shown to best advantage.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

SOME men are florists by instinct, others by training, and a good many merely by force of circumstances.

PERHAPS it may strike some readers as interesting that Lent brings the busiest six weeks in the year for The Review.

THERE are plenty of men who can do business in any department of the trade; the ones who can make it pay steadily are much rarer.

THE man who does not like to find "Please remit" written on a statement might try getting in first with a "Please receipt and return."

WHEN half as much attention has been given to merchandising flowers as to growing them the trade will be a great deal larger than it is now.

IN recent years Lent has had little effect on the flower business. At first there is some slowing up, but after a week or ten days things are going again much as in the so-called social season.

THE secretary of the S. A. F. is having an experience of the parcel post. Heretofore the annual reports have been mailable at 1 cent for each two ounces, but this year they come under the zone system. The book weighs twenty-two ounces and would have gone for 11 cents under the old system. After the zone distance of each member as from New York is ascertained the postage required is: First zone, 6 cents; second, 6 cents; third, 8 cents; fourth, 11 cents; fifth, 14 cents; sixth, 17 cents; seventh, 21 cents; eighth, 24 cents.

FOR 900 weeks The Review has carried the message to Garcia. A good many things can happen in 900 weeks.

THE trouble with preaching is that it implies an obligation to practice along the same lines—and sometimes the preacher's foot slips. The editor could not forget it if he would.

NOTHING will more surely lead to a permanent business than for the plantsman to acknowledge receipt of every order, stating when it will be shipped, invariably good stock and careful packing. With these three things sure, prices become a secondary consideration.

F. T. D. MEETING POSTPONED.

The meeting of the directors of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery will be held March 3, at 10 a. m., at Hotel La Salle, Chicago, instead of March 2 as previously announced. Members are invited to be present.

Albert Pochelon, Sec'y.

HOOSIER FLORISTS TO MEET.

At the invitation of W. Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind., the next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held with them March 2. Register at the Hotel Adair as soon as you arrive and a conveyance will carry you from there to the greenhouses. Luncheon will be served and the business session will be held at the same hotel. Indianapolis florists will leave Union Station at 7:20 a. m., changing cars at Muncie.

O. E. Steinkamp, Sec'y.

THE BUSINESS BAROMETER.

Bank clearings are usually as good a single barometer as we have, as they are a measure of transactions and credit passing through the banks. It is, therefore, worth while to watch the trend. Compared with a year ago, bank clearings at the leading centers show an improvement of four per cent, while outside of New York they show an increase of six and one-tenth per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year. This is a noticeable change in the trend. These figures are taken from Bradstreet's journal.

UNCLE SAM, CITY SALESMAN.

Did you know your Uncle Sam has turned salesman? Well, he has, and if you live in the country perhaps he will act as city salesman for you. To find out, address the avuncular headquarters nearest you—the postmaster in the nearest large city.

For years the government has refused to help a city man by so much as giving him the address of a possible customer in the country, but it is a rule that apparently does not work both ways, as you will note. A while ago the postoffice department began working up business for country people—it found out what they had to offer, printed a circular and delivered the list to city people considered possible buyers, with the suggestion that they order shipment by parcel post.

Probably the idea was to assist in equalizing the prices of food, which ordinarily treble between producer and consumer, but we find the postoffice circulars offering city people all sorts of articles, including cut flowers, pot plants and nursery stock.

THE REASON FOR IT.

It has been a matter of more or less general comment that The Review is carrying a wonderful volume of advertising this spring and, especially, that the classified department is breaking records. There are nearly sixteen solid pages of the little liners in this issue. The reason for the continued growth of this section is plain. It works like this:

Please omit my geranium ad, as one insertion cleaned me out; had orders from east and west; could have sold twice as many if I only had the stock.—H. J. Potomkin, Muncie, Ind., February 22, 1915.

Please take my coleus ad out, as I am sold out for a few weeks. I have found ads in The Review certainly make the stock move and I will be there with ads as long as I have anything to sell.—R. P. Bohlander, Hillside, Ill., February 22, 1915.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Hornell, N. Y.—Frank J. and Paul L. Kennedy, father and son, copartners in the firm of F. J. Kennedy & Son, have filed petitions in bankruptcy as a firm and as individuals. The liabilities of the concern are scheduled at $3,966.53 and the assets at $2,732.12.

Birmingham, Ala.—John A. Lambert, formerly superintendent of parks at Chattanooga, Tenn., and for a time manager of the flower department of the McVay Seed Co., of this city, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy February 10. His liabilities are scheduled at $2,419.88 and his assets, consisting principally of accounts receivable, at $982.73. Judge E. H. Dryer appointed J. H. Lehman as receiver, with instruction to operate the store, at 2014 First street, as a going concern.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The condition is one of increasing ease. There was the usual let-down following Ash Wednesday, demand becoming, on the average, considerably lighter than it was before the arrival of Lent. With this, springlike weather has increased the production of stock. Decreased demand and increased supply have affected prices, which are easier all along the line.

If there is any shortage in the market today it is of first-class Beauties. There are considerable quantities of Beauties that lack in one respect or another, but there are extremely few that will score up on all points. However, the demand for long Beauties is not at all robust. Some of the novelty roses, like Ophelia, the wood for which is being used for propagating, are not in adequate supply, but of the standard varieties there are enough to meet all needs. The increase in the production of short stems has been heavier than the increase in the longer grades. It appears that quite a few growers, after the experience at Christmas, are not trying to crop their roses for Easter.

There has been a considerable increase in the cuts of carnations. Splits continue quite abundant, but there is plenty of strictly fancy stock and prices are on the downward grade, but they are not comparing unfavorably with the record for last year at this date.

Bulbous stock is everywhere. Tulips are abundant and some of the better varieties now are available in quantity. Murillo, always one of the popular varieties, has arrived, and many of the La Reine show splendid color. Jon-quils have fallen to the lowest prices of the season and have carried daffodils with them. Freesia and Paper Whites are slightly less abundant, although there still are so many that prices are easy. Easter lilies are more plentiful than at any time since Christmas.

Sweet peas are coming in much more heavily; it looks as though the crop were on at last. The Spencers continue to sell about as well as anything on the list. Violets, especially the Hudson river doubles, are so plentiful prices rule extremely low. The glut of cattleyas is slowly passing and prices are advancing. Valley is abundant. There are few gardenias.

The green goods situation remains without change. There is enough of everything.

Retailers Buy Together.

The Retail Florists' Association has selected H. H. Wilkerson as its salaried secretary and is preparing to set in operation a department of coöperative buying. Already a number of joint purchases have been made on behalf of the members. The idea is to obtain the advantage of the quantity price. In order to finance the purchases it is planned to sell stock to members, limiting holdings to one share each, in a separate organization to be known, probably, as the Retail Florists' Co. Mr. Wilkerson is a well known and thoroughly experienced young man. For the time that Henry Wittbold maintained a downtown store Mr. Wilkerson was his manager. Later he was city salesman for the A. L. Randall Co. At present he holds a similar position with the Botanical Decorating Co., in which he will continue until the new plan has been developed a little farther, the details for the present centering in the office of President George Stollery.

Chicago Carnation Co. Quits.

After an existence of seventeen years the Chicago Carnation Co. will cease doing business March 1. The greenhouses at Joliet have been leased to the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. for five years at a reported rental of $4,000 per year and the city store will be taken over by Pyfer & Olsem, who may continue it with their name or they may reorganize it as a separate business.

The Chicago Carnation Co., originally managed by J. D. Thompson and James Hartshorne, did not own the greenhouses it operated. The greenhouses were the property of H. D. Higinbotham and the operating company was owned by the various members of the Higinbotham family. Later all the stock of the corporation passed into the hands of H. D. Higinbotham. J. D. Thompson severed his connection with the Higinbotham interests to start the Thompson Carnation Co., recently managed with marked success by Charles M. Fish, with P. W. Peterson as greenhouse superintendent. The leasing of the older range amounts to a consolidation of the two concerns and will more than double the scope of the operations of the Randall Leases Permanent Quarters.

Burned out at 66 East Randolph street February 14 and now located in temporary quarters at 177 and 179 North Michigan avenue, the A. L. Randall Co. last week made a lease for ten years from April 1 on the entire second floor of the new Lemoyne block at the southwest corner of Lake street and Wabash avenue. The term rental is $105,000. The floor is 115x169, or approximately 19,000 square feet. The building is fireproof and thoroughly modern, not quite completed. The south end of the floor will be used for the cut flower department, the center for a complete sample line of florists' supplies and stock for city sale, with the offices along the north end. There is fine light on three sides. A building for storage, shipping and factory use will be secured outside the downtown district, as room is wanted for future growth. The agents now are making strong effort to get other wholesale florists into the new building, but have not as yet closed any other leases. The E. C. Amling Co., burned out at the same time as Randall's, has not yet decided on its permanent quarters and may go back to the old address, as the owner offers to rebuild within ninety days and renew the leases for two years at the old figure. Some half dozen other locations are under consideration, and one of them will be accepted within a few days, so as to get settled in new quarters for Easter.

In its temporary quarters the Randall Co. has taken in large shipments of supplies this week, has started up its basket factory and its wire factory, one order in the latter department this week being for 1,000 hanging baskets.

On account of the visit of the executive committee of the S. A. F. a special meeting and smoker, Monday, March 1, at 8 p. m., will take the place of the Florists' Club meeting. Secretary French states that lunch will be served and all members and trade friends are cordially invited to participate and meet the representatives of the national society.

Various Notes.

A. L. Vaughan calls attention to the fact that many out-of-town buyers forget there is no mail delivery in Chicago on Sunday. He says it is the regular thing to find orders in Monday morning's mail that were intended to be delivered in time for shipment Sunday.

Searching for a possible successor to deteriorating Enchantress, Wietor Bros. this week received 1,000 cuttings of Alice, Peter Fisher's new light pink. N. J. Wietor says they find Philadelphia excellent for quality, but so slow he fears it will not hold its place.

George Fisher won a watch last week on a raffle, held at Weiland & Risch's.

February has given better business, according to Erne & Klingel, than they ever before have had in the second month of the year.

A. L. Glaser, of Dubuque, Ia., was here this week on one of his periodical visits. He makes his headquarters with Kyle & Foerster.

Winterson's Seed Store expects to mail its retail seed catalogue this week.

According to Felix Reichling, Peter Reinberg's business shows the unusual record of having been better in the week that contained Ash Wednesday than it was in the excellent week that ended with St. Valentine's day. At the greenhouses the Beauty range has just been repiped, putting the coils underneath the benches, instead of overhead. There are 5,000 pots of Easter lilies this year.

Representing the Englewood Commercial Association, George Walther was a member of the committee of Sixty-third street business men who raffled an automobile valued at $1,675 February 23. Over a million chances had been issued with sales.

The trade will learn with sorrow of the death, February 19, of Mrs. Kanst, wife of Fred Kanst and mother of Ed Kanst.

Scarlet fever for several weeks has disturbed the home affairs of the Keenan family, at 6628 Woodlawn avenue. The sufferer is Ralph Keenan, son of Arthur F. Keenan, who runs two stores on Sixty-third street. Miss Florence Keenan is in charge of the one at No. 1222 and Miss Bessie Keenan at No. 1306, both sisters of the proprietor, and all kept out of their home for five weeks by the quarantine.

August Poehlmann likes the way Early Snow chrysanthemum acted last season and Guy French says it will be given a good bit of space at Morton Grove next season.

The contract for the erection of five greenhouses, 28x300 feet, at Greggs, Ill., was given February 17 to the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., by Bassett & Washburn. These houses will be devoted to roses. The first houses in the range were supplied by the John C. Moninger Co., last season's addition by "The manufacturers of 'Illinois' Self-watering Flower Boxes first offered their goods to us four years ago. We were interested, but before taking them up with any degree of enthusiasm we decided to test them thoroughly, under all conditions, for a period of time which would leave no shadow of a doubt in our minds as to their desirability, before we offered them to our own trade.

"We have made this test a severe and thorough one—both in and out-of-doors—and now offer these remarkable flower-growing devices to our customers with our own unqualified endorsement added to the manufacturers' claims and guarantee."

LANCASTER, PA.

A Trip to Manheim.

On Thursday, February 18, about twenty members of the Lancaster Florists' Association journeyed to Manheim and called on the different establishments there. At E. P. Hostetter's, we found houses of yellow marguerites with 15-inch stems and fine Spencer peas in height of bloom. Rose Queen attracted much attention by its delicate shade and extremely long stems, many of which bore five flowers. His yellow and white snapdragons with 3-foot stems were much admired. Beds of Primula Forbesi for cutting were noted. Matchless carnations were of exceptional size. But Matchless will not entirely displace White Wonder and White Perfection, both of which are largely grown here. Philadelphia was a sheet of bloom and is quite popular. Gorgeous is giving fine blooms. Victory, Ward and Winona are grown in quantity. Houses of Sprengeri and plumosus are producing lots of the "long green" now.

We next called at Phares S. Hostetter's, where sweet peas and carnations are well grown. Calla lilies are extensively grown, as well as houses of Asparagus plumosus.

At M. H. Hostetter's we found Spencer peas blooming, fine baby primroses, and carnations in good condition.

Club Meeting.

Returning to Lancaster, the club meeting was called to order at 7:30 p. m. by President B. F. Barr. Albert M. Herr read a paper on the Buffalo carnation show and gave us his private opinion about the new carnations seen there. This was one of the most valuable papers read at the club for some time. It was freely discussed and brought out many questions by the members.

Rodney M. Eshleman was elected to membership.

The exhibition tables were never filled with a finer lot of flowers than were staged at this meeting. Among the newer ones were Peace, shown by Guttman & Raynor, New York city, which is truly a wonderful variety. The flowers measured four inches, were pure white and deliciously fragrant. Laura Weber was also shown by the same firm. This is a beautiful, soft pink shade and was much admired. F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., showed Pink Sensation, a light pink of large size and fine form; also Good Cheer, a deeper pink, which looks as though it would displace Mrs. Ward in many instances. Morning Glow, shown by Edward Winkler, Wakefield, Mass., is small, light pink, fragrant, and of pleasing appearance. Nebraska, grown by C. H. Frey, Lincoln, Neb., and shown by S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., is a wonderful scarlet, and looks like a winner. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. Mrs. C. E. Akehurst, also shown by the Pennock-Meehan Co., was in fine form and the many local growers who have purchased stock of it are much pleased with their investment. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., sent a vase of Alice, which is truly a much sought after shade of pink, and we are expecting large things of it.

Elmer J. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., staged a bunch of his magnificent new white carnation, unnamed as yet. W. B. Girvin, Leola, Pa., showed vases of Matchless, Gloriosa and Mrs. Ward, showing exceptional cultural skill. Ira H. Landis staged Princess Dagmar, Benora and Yellow Prince of prize-winning quality. A bunch of Purity freesia shown by him was superb. Amos N. Rohrer, Strasburg, exhibited a vase of White Wonder which showed high quality. H. D. Rohrer, Lancaster, showed a vase of Scarlet Wonder, a red, disseminated by him several years ago. For color, fragrance, non-splitting and clean growth, it is excellent.

All the carnations from a distance arrived in fine condition and formed one of the finest exhibitions ever presented at the Lancaster Florists' Club.

At our next meeting, March 18, Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, will address the club on "Are You Ready?" The regular meeting for April will give place to a ladies' night at Brenneman hall. The Market.

The weather was fine last week and business good. There has been considerable funeral work, and flowers for social functions sold well. Business St. Valentine's day was good with all the florists. Roses are more plentiful this week and the quality is good. Carnations are excellent. Violet sales are in order now, since we have had a week or more of mild, sunny weather, which brings on violets in great numbers. Sweet peas are more plentiful and the orchid varieties bring a fair price. Bulbous flowers, such as daffodils, narcissi, freesias, hyacinths, etc., are almost a drug on the market and are sold at a low figure.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son had an interesting window last week. A Japanese pond with pink roses, white lilacs and freesias formed the center, and porcelain birds were scattered about near the pond. Baskets of spring flowers were set about at different angles, and live butterflies added life to the window.

Stroh's Quality Shop was filled with unusual cyclamens and baby primroses from their greenhouses in Attica. The Narcissus poeticus, pansies, freesias and calendulas were also fine.

The Colonial Flower Shop recently put in a new line of goods, such as fancy flower holders, porcelain ducks, birds, frogs, etc., colored in the natural tints. Then there are attractive Japanese bowls, ponds, bird dishes, dragon flower holders, etc. Boston supports a store which handles these things for people who have big purses and æsthetic tastes, and Buffalo ought to support a place of this kind also, in connection with floral arts.

If Joseph Streit was overwhelmingly surprised on Monday, February 15, when Mrs. Streit and the employees of S. A. They had been called over the telephone for an impromptu social evening, with a supper served by the guests themselves. Mrs. Streit was

BEAUTIES

Our growers expect to cut Beauties in larger quantity now, and we are in a position to give you the best in price and quality. Quality is always the first consideration when filling your orders, and you have the satisfaction that they are billed to you at the lowest market price. It would be impossible to market the enormous quantity we handle unless we offered our customers advantages not to be found elsewhere.

SPENCER PEAS

Considering the size and the quality of the flowers, they are not more expensive than the ordinary Peas. Offering your customers flowers of extra good quality will always help to increase your business. In colors, we have several shades of Pink, White and Lavender. Place your next order for Peas with us—the quality of the flowers will come up to your expectations.

SNAPDRAGON

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The first week of Lent leaves us with mixed feelings: Business was good when we were fearful and when we became hopeful it fell off. This was mainly due to the supply, which increased rapidly under the influence of the hot sunshine. We have rarely been favored with four days of such growing weather in February. Daffodils have been in such heavy supply that the market has been unable to take them all readily. Beauties have fallen in price quite unexpectedly; they can now be had at half the prices of last week. Sweet peas have arrived in such numbers that they have changed over from the scarce to the plentiful side, with, of course, a drop in the prices. These were the prominent features of a market that is generally described as fair for the season.

Riverton.

There are so many greenhouses stretching to the north, to the east and to the south of the great packing shed of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton, N. J., that the most satisfactory way to describe their contents is to select a few of the most important plants for description at one time. You walk through the houses, gather certain impressions, then you sift them. The system, neatness and cleanliness everywhere apparent stand foremost. Perhaps next come the aquatics, for which the house has done such valiant pioneer work. Aquatics will be their exhibit at San Francisco this year. The next impression left on the mind of the visitor is the care that is taken to keep stock in popular sizes of the great numbers of plants. (Of course, these are mainly stove plants in the houses today, but the same idea applies to the cool plants and to those belonging to the hardy herbaceous class, both annual, biennial and perennial.) It requires no small amount of skill and care to keep up a limited stock of plants quite as important to many florists in a small way as the every-day commercial plants are to them in a large way. Of these every-day commercial plants the stock becomes larger as the market expands. The impression created by a glance over the houses devoted to them is that it is not necessary for us to worry about the supply of palms from Belgium being cut off. There are enough right here at home to supply our probable wants, for the present at least. Take large kentias, for instance; there is a splendid stock of fine specimens good enough to use anywhere. This is merely an example. The medium and small sizes are well represented. The policy of limiting the Boston fern family to three representatives in the houses is being adhered to with success. It simplifies matters, and, while there are disadvantages, they are not to be considered when comparing them with the advantages.

Pandanus Veitchii is unusually well colored and well grown in abundance. This good old standard among variegated foliage plants deservedly retains its place in the front. It is encouraging to see that means have been found to prevent the usual spring scarcity that has nearly always occurred.

Flowers at the Tabernacle.

Every Philadelphian who leaves home is asked about the revival meetings now being conducted by the Reverend Billy Sunday. It may be that this interest warrants a brief description of the scene there on the evening of February 18, when the flower growers of Philadelphia visited the Tabernacle in a body. All arrangements had been made by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., who had seats reserved for 200, a wise precaution, for on this, the forty-seventh night of the services, every seat was occupied, all standing room behind was used and many were turned away. The party, all wearing badges, crossed Logan Square in a body and were soon ushered to their places by William Graham, aided by the P.-M. leaders. The sight inside was impressive, an immense building completely filled by earnest-looking men in all walks of life. The atmosphere, while serious in the main, was by no means restrained during the preliminaries, and at the close talking and laughing seeming quite natural. During the sermon the closest attention was given. The choir-master asked the flower growers to rise—almost everybody you know was there—and then to select their favorite hymn. I think it was Clarence Leggitt who chose No. 175. It was something about a little church on the hillside. The choir sang it with a will, assisted by such of the congregation as could. When the Reverend Billy Sunday arrived "the flowers" were asked to rise from their seats again to be thanked for a beautiful basket of their product that graced the platform, sent by the wholesalers of Philadelphia and arranged by Pennock Bros.

The sermon was most impressive, nothing that the dearest girl in all the world should not hear, with little reference to booze, and strong appeal to the best that is in us. Then came the call to come forward, responded to by many of us, amid the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" by the large choir and vast audience. A few moments more and the entire assemblage was out in the open air again, wondering at the power of one man to stir so many.

Easter Lilies.

The first call of the season in quest of a line on lilies was made at Godfrey Aschmann's place. It chanced exactly six weeks before they should be at their best. That length of time is named in the rules for lily growing under glass when you want the buds to show above the foliage. I have not read the rule for years, but my recollection is that it reads this way: "The buds should be distinctly visible above the plants when seen from the doorway of the greenhouse." That is just the way they are at Godfrey Aschmann's place, and a prettier lot of Lilium multiflorum would be hard to fancy. They are well flowered, clean and vigorous. Of course, on the question of height, no two of us ever agreed; I can only say that they seem to me to be of excellent height. Besides the multiflorum lilies, there are some giganteums. (Jigs, one of my festive friends calls them. Yes, I think it was Bobby.) French hydrangeas; Spiræa Gladstone, as even as a meadow; azaleas galore, cinerarias, primroses and the biggest flowered Begonia luminosa "that you ever did see."

The effect of the place was so pleasing that, before leaving, a word of congratulation was given to John Godfrey Aschmann on the bright Easter outlook.

Stuart H. Miller will open his cut flower commission house March 1, at 1617 Ranstead street.

Don't forget the carnation meeting of the Florists' Club will be held March 2.

Pennock Bros. have all the new roses in their window this week. They include Hadley, Jonkheer J. L. Mock, Killarney Brilliant, Lady Alice Stanley, Francis Scott Key, Ophelia and Old Gold. With them are the older varieties, a most instructive display.

Phil.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Henry Krueger, Meadville, Pa., returned from the carnation convention well pleased with the exhibition and satisfied with his previous purchases of the new varieties. Mrs. Krueger, Sr., is again at her post in the store, almost fully recovered from a recent auto accident.

C. P. Harris, Meadville, believes there is a big reward for the raiser who can produce a field corn that will ripen satisfactorily in this latitude. Neither White Cap, Pride of the North nor Early Leaming will do it.

John Walker, Youngstown, O., was last heard from at his fruit farm on the Isle of Pines. E. Williams has charge of the plant in his absence.

J. J. Goudy, of Dreer's, was a caller and incidentally mentioned that the new Adiantum California, offered by his house, is a big seller. It is of a softer tone of green than A. hybridum or Croweanum, does not turn brown and is fully as vigorous.

J. R. Cowgill, Canton, O., is receiving a fine cut from the houses of his brother, V. A. Cowgill, at Salem. The season has been good with them.

Charles Lindacher, Canton, is looking for a desirable location in which to build, as the present site is too valuable for greenhouse purposes.

The Brown Floral Co., Canton, finds the two stores useful in handling the product from the large range, conveniently located nearby.

The Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, is putting the finishing touches on its new store. Harry Holmes, Jr., is much pleased with its location in the center of town, with a large 4-story warehouse within easy reach.

The Gilbo Floral Co., Akron, O., expresses the opinion that it would be to the advantage of the commission houses if they would occasionally advise their country customers when overstocked, by making special offers. The writer has in mind a couple of leading eastern houses that put out quite a few calls, to mutual advantage, when the market was overstocked on certain lines.

Charles Peterson, East Liverpool, O., has been unable for several years to take an active interest in his business, but keeps in close touch with the outside world through the trade papers. He says The Review is ever welcome, the first to come to hand and the last to be laid aside.

Joseph H. Cunningham, Delaware, O., is well pleased with the perpetual nature of his business. Asparagus and other specials keep moving along.

The Zach Davis Co., Delaware, is mailing the seed catalogue. It is well gotten up; the illustrations are all halftones, many of them showing home scenes. Mr. Davis believes the smaller seedsmen benefit considerably through the lavish advertising of the larger and older houses.

Louis Elsass, Chillicothe, O., realizes that the business demands a central location and has purchased a prop-

The Profit From Withered Flowers

The profit that is possible from withered flowers is to sell the flowers before they spoil and are thrown out. This is easily done through their proper preservation in a

McCray Florist's Refrigerator

Here the flowers are preserved at an even temperature and are kept fresh and cool. No other refrigerating system is so efficient as the McCray. It stops the loss from spoilage so common with inadequate refrigeration.

In addition the McCray, with its beautiful plate glass doors and sides permits an inviting and attractive display of the flowers. The compartments are of different sizes to accommodate the various lengths of stems.

The outside woodwork may be had in any finish to match your store's interior. The linings may be secured in either plate mirror or white enamel and are very attractive.

Make up your mind right now to increase your business and decide upon a McCray Refrigerator to help you do it. Every enterprising Florist needs a McCray. Write and learn why.

hundred. A few novelties occasionally rise a little higher, but these are not fairly quotable. Even Ward and Matchless joined in the retreat. In large lots the price was shaded to $20 per thousand. The lower grades sold at half this quotation.

There has been no change in the price of gardenias or valley. Both are abundant. Lilies have not sold above $8 per hundred, and only a few command that figure. They will probably sell at $6 per hundred before the week is over.

Orchids are doing a little better, but are still far below their real value. Improvement, however, seems certain. There are many varieties offered.

The market is well supplied with bulbous flowers, especially daffodils. Freesias, narcissi and tulips are now unlimited. The variation in quality of these is extreme. The wholesale windows are filled with spring flowers—pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, calendulas, antirrhinums and wallflowers. Sweet peas are much in evidence. Violets are steady at a lower average; 40 cents per hundred seems to be the high quotation.

Various Notes.

At the international flower show, at the Grand Central Palace, the retail florists are expected to occupy fifteen booths, at a cost of $150 each, where exhibits of artistic skill in floral displays and decorations will be made, not for competition, but with a view to benefiting the retail trade of New York and Brooklyn.

H. A. Bunyard has leased space at 40 West Twenty-eighth street for the seed and bulb business he is establishing.

The Retail Florists' Society now has a membership of 125, including ninety-four of the Greek fraternity.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Review,

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

A few weeks ago I started a small card in the Retailers' Telegraph Delivery department of The Review.

I have paid you only $3.50 so far. And this is what happened:

I received orders for Wyoming delivery at Christmas amounting to $142.50.

I think that is doing fairly well.

Respectfully yours,
Louis B Westholder

The Market.

Although Lent is here and there is a decided suggestion of spring in the air, business is holding up nicely. The warmer weather has increased production considerably, but demand also has shown some improvement. There is still considerable social activity and the old-time Lenten slump is no longer feared. Roses are slightly lower, except that special Beauties are in somewhat shorter supply and have held their own. The call for Beauties, however, was not strong last week. Short-stemmed flowers average $1 per hundred less and other grades have declined a little. Carnations have stiffened and the prices averaged better last week than for some time back, although arrivals were quite heavy.

Violets continue to sell at low, unprofitable prices. Many singles only realize $2.50 per thousand. Sweet peas sell well and some splendid winter Spencers are coming in. Yellow marguerites continue to equal carnations in value. So far there has been no glut in bulbous flowers, and this has proved an agreeable surprise. A few Spanish irises are now appearing; the first arrived February 13. Forget-me-not is heavily overdone and hard to sell. Pink snapdragon is scarce, but white is abundant; it does not sell like the pink, however. There have been somewhat too many lilies and callas. Good valley moves well, but a lot of poor material is arriving. Cattleyas move slowly; the same holds true of gardenias. Pot plant trade lacks animation. A considerable number of rambler roses are now available. Other favorites are Rhododendron Pink Pearl, lilacs, bulbous stock in pans, deciduous flowering shrubs and camellias.

Various Notes.

H. J. Borowski & Sons, of Roslindale, had ten splendid specimen cyclamens at the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which secured a cultural report of merit. A group will be shown at the spring exhibition in Boston. No finer cyclamens are produced in New England than at this establishment. They are so good that buyers in plenty come for all that are ready. Easter plants here are coming along finely. The principal varieties are rambler roses, azaleas, bougainvilleas, lilies and hydrangeas.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, report a successful season so far with bulbous flowers. They now have fine Murillo and Flamingo tulips, while in narcissi Mrs. Walter T. Ware and Victoria are good.

At Carbone's beautifully and artistically arranged store, on Boylston street, it is always a pleasure to make a call. Business here has been booming all winter. Old-fashioned bouquets have had a great run. For table decorations bulbous flowers mixed in low dishes have had a great sale. Hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, crocus and scillas are chiefly used and make a stunning effect, especially when planted in masses a yard across. I noted the first Spanish iris of the season here.

Kidder Bros. are sending in some remarkable Spencer peas, with the finest stems I have seen this season.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is sending to the wholesale market well flowered Primula malacoides. Bunches of the same primula are also found to be quite salable. Cinerarias here are good. Bulbous flowers now include Murillo and Prosperity tulips and Victoria and Emperor narcissi. Victoria brings the highest market price of any of the narcissi.

Peter Fisher has already shipped away over 150,000 rooted cuttings of his new carnation, Alice. Local specialists will all plant it quite heavily another season.

Donald Carmichael's carnations are good this season. His favorite quartet consists of Pink Delight, Ward, Beacon and Benora.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, finds Carnation Champion a first-class variety. He also likes Pink Delight, Yellow Prince, White Wonder and Beacon. He has a batch of a pleasing red seedling. Of bachelor's buttons he has far the finest flowers coming into the Boston market.

W. H. Ward, of Montvale, has finished cutting one house of freesia and has two more coming into bloom. Pink Delight, Benora, Beacon, Rosette and White Wonder are the carnation leaders here.

Tickets for the annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at the New American House, March 10, are selling fast, and early application for the remaining tickets is necessary.

W. C. Ward, of East Milton, and W. E. Turner, of Woburn, are each sending large quantities of pansies to the market.

William Sim is picking a fine crop of Spencer sweet peas of splendid quality, in addition to his single violets.

A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me., will read a paper on "The Culture of Hardy Bulbs" at Horticultural hall February 27.

W. J. Marshall, of Campello, is a large shipper of Formosa lilies to W. A. Hastings. In last week's issue I inadvertently omitted mention of an exhibit of Benora and White Enchantress carnations at the club meeting February 16, from J. A. Nelson, another of Mr. Hastings' shippers.

now are E. B. Hanson, of South Royalston; John Marshall, of Providence, and P. & W. O. Jahn, of Bridgewater. All are handled by W. H. Carr.

William S. Grassie, of Waverley, has gone into bulbs quite heavily this season. He now has Murillo and Thomas Moore tulips and freesias in abundance.

The Sutermeister Estate, through William Caraher, is disposing of large shipments of Mrs. W. T. Ware, princeps, Double Von Sion and Golden Spur narcissi; also tulips in variety.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is having splendid success with both double and single violets this season. He will have anemones and Gladiolus nanus in quantity a little later.

All the local directors of the S. A. F. are planning to accompany President Patrick Welch to the directors' meeting in Chicago, leaving here February 27.

Penn had a big special plant sale February 20, which moved a lot of stock. He had specially decorated windows for Washington's birthday. Special violet boxes, with a bunch of cherries and a hatchet fastened at one corner, were used to send out all special orders.

Harry L. Shedd, of South Lowell, is doing particularly well with carnations this season. White Wonder, Benora, Beacon, Pink Delight and Rosette are his leaders.

Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell, easily led all comers with Spanish iris this season, sending his first in February 13.

The Rosery, on Boylston street, reports business good. I noted here splendid pans of Pride of Haarlem tulips; also cyclamens and Acacia pubescens, beautifully flowered.

Thomas Roland is sending in, among other plants, excellent rambler roses, camellias, ericas, genistas and cyclamens.

A. E. E. Koch is getting a good cut of white and yellow marguerites and snapdragons.

February weather has been much

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Carnival, the climax of the winter season, has passed, and with it nearly all prominent social functions. The Lenten season is more or less strictly observed here and only smaller social gatherings are taking place. Hardly any large weddings are on the calendar during this time, and our retailers are compelled to be satisfied with funeral work or a few flowers for a tea, and the sale of a few flowering plants. Although the season just closed was by no means as profitable as in other years, especially in regard to the prices paid for bouquets and flowers during Carnival, business was better than some florists expected it to be, in view of the war in Europe. Both wholesalers and retailers are now busy going over their Easter stock, which is as large as in former years, especially in the line of lilies and hydrangeas, which are the best sellers here for the occasion.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting February 18, at the Association of Commerce building. President P. A. Chopin and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their places. A fair number of members were present, and the meeting was a highly interesting one.

R. C. Kerr, president of the Texas State Florists' Association, sent a letter stating that he wished to meet the florists of New Orleans and vicinity during his stop-over here on his way to Chicago to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the S. A. F. He expected to be here February 24. His object is to form a Southern State Horticultural Society. The society voted that a telegram be sent to Mr. Kerr assuring him that the N. O. H. S. would be glad to see him, and communications were sent to other florists in and out of town, not belonging to the society, asking them to come and join in the welcome to Mr. Kerr.

A general discussion on lilies, hydrangeas and bulbous stock followed. Henry Mische sent in an application for membership.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. report a big increase in their shipping trade. They have a fine lot of Cineraria hybrida in bloom and are selling them at top prices.

P. A. Chopin states that since he has his big store on St. Charles avenue he can sell almost any flowering or foliage plants, provided they are well finished; the price is no object.

H. C. Doescher has his big place in fine shape and says that business, both local and shipping, is picking up nicely.

C. W. Eichling has been exceedingly busy with funeral work lately. The different varieties of narcissi of his own growing are surely fine and are a big addition to his stock.

Richard Eichling, since January, has been private gardener for Mrs. Isidore Newman.

Charles Farley reports that business is good, especially in landscape work.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. says business conditions are quite satisfactory, both in plants and flowers.

U. J. Virgin is getting his usual big share of the trade. He always has a fine stock of cut flowers and plants.

Justin St. Mard's place is now easily accessible with an auto, on account of the newly paved street. He makes a specialty of outdoor palms and roses, particularly Marechal Niel. R. E.

The Market.

The cut flower market was in splendid condition last week, from a buyer's point of view, there being plenty of everything in season. The first few days in Lent made considerable difference in business, especially with the west end florists, with whom society does its shopping. The springlike weather, however, caused quite a large demand downtown, where a big transient trade is reported.

In looking over the market we find quite an increase in production, as the consignors nearly all are coming into crop with roses and carnations, the prices being cut to nearly half those of the week previous. Roses are of excellent color, Killarney leading in quantity. There also are some fancy Beauties and plenty of the lower grades of these. Carnations are arriving in larger quantities, Enchantress varieties leading in quality and demand. Bulbous stock is in heavy supply, but not in great demand. Tulips, freesias, Dutch hyacinths and valley are in better demand than Romans, Paper Whites and jonquils. Violets are abundant and sell as low as $2 per thousand. A large cut of fancy sweet peas has resulted in a fall in prices, the best Spencers being obtainable at $1 per hundred. The usual demand for greens was noted last week.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular meeting February 15, at the Washington hotel. The election of officers took place and resulted as follows: President, Charles C. Young; vice-president, Conrad Bergstermann; secretary, Fred C. Weber, Jr.; treasurer, Alexander Geranios. It was decided to hold a banquet March 8, at the Washington hotel, to which all the prominent retail florists in the city will be invited.

Quite a few St. Louis florists contemplate attending the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Urbana, March 2 and 3. J. F. Ammann, secretary, and E. W. Guy, vice-president of the association, have extended an invitation to all members of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Henry Brinkman, a gardener at Bellefontaine cemetery, while hunting rabbits in the cemetery last week, accidentally shot William McGee, another gardener, at work not far away. The wound was only slight.

Visitors last week included C. W. Whitinger, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, with a line of samples at the Maryland hotel; S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia; B. L. Steber, landscape gardener, representing R. E. Langley, Jackson, Miss.; Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and Sam Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York.

Thomas Carr, the Union Market florist, if the mild weather continues, will open his plant stands this week. He reports a big lot of funeral work of late, which required extra help.

The County Growers' Association will hold an important meeting March 3, at the Eleven Mile House, in Kirkwood. President Vennemann says the association will take up the matter of assisting the St. Louis Florists' Club in entertaining the members of the American Carnation Society when it meets here.

Vandervoort's department store and has engaged extra help to this end. The opening will be March 8.

W. W. Ohlweiler, superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Garden, is down to read a paper before the meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club March 11. The trustees say this will be of great interest to plant growers. A carnation and novelty exhibition will be held during this meeting at the salesroom of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

William Gray, of Philadelphia, and late with the Mullanphy Flower Co., has resigned his position and is now in the employ of Grimm & Gorly at their Washington avenue store.

A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., was here last week buying supplies. Mrs. Fehr surprised him recently with a wedding anniversary celebration at their home.

August Hummert, vice-president of St. Louis Seed Co., says the mild weather has brought out the seed buyers and their new Washington avenue store was crowded daily last week. They expect, judging from the early sales, the largest seed trade in many years.

Muskopf & Irish Co. and Charles Fullgraf, landscape architects and tree surgeons, say advance orders indicate they will have an extremely busy season.

C. Young & Sons Co. has a window display of seeds, bulbs and garden implements, which is attractive to the general public at this time of the year. Mail orders are coming in briskly.

Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., Nursery, Mo., says advance orders indicate they will be rushed with work, which has already begun. Sanders Nurseries and J. W. Schuette & Co. also report heavy advance orders. J. J. B.

menced. Previously a number of weddings, large and small, as well as other social functions, were crowded into the last few days. We must now look for a somewhat quieter season until the Easter business comes into full swing. Nevertheless, stock has moved satisfactorily and prices have been maintained, except those of carnations, which remain somewhat glutty. They are moving better, however, and the demand is fair. We are receiving a good supply of Easter lilies, which of late have been used extensively for design work. Callas are fine and move well. Valley is in first-class condition, but moves none too fast.

Jonquils and daffodils are plentiful and are large, well formed blossoms, having been helped considerably in the last few days by the increased amount of sunshine. All bulbous stock, too, has come along faster on this account. There are large consignments of tulips, Romans and freesias. The supply of roses meets all demands. Beauties are fine and bring good prices. Taft, Sunburst, Ward, Prince d'Arenberg and Maryland are all in good demand. Violets are large and fragrant, but do not sell as rapidly as they should. Sweet peas and forget-me-nots are selling well in corsages and Dutch bouquets. A good business has been done in plants of all kinds, the best sellers probably being azaleas and Dutch bulbous stock. The supply of asparagus and ferns is plentiful.

Various Notes.

Harry Merritt, of Irondequoit, N. Y., is cutting some large, well colored Delight carnations. His White Wonder carnations are large and fragrant. He recently received a good shipment of

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Thirty-third annual convention, San Francisco, Cal., 1915.

THE death of H. Frank Darrow, American agent for Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

THERE is the usual spring demand for capable assistants. The seed trade always is short of trained help three months in the year.

N. N. SHERWOOD, V. M. H., head of the firm of Hurst & Son, well known British wholesale seedsmen, has been appointed justice of the peace for the county of Essex.

VISITED CHICAGO: Robert Fulton, of Henry & Lee, New York, en route east with fifteen pounds extra weight as the result of seven months with his family in southern California.

IT is interesting to note in British trade literature the statement that German aster seed has not been used for years, a finer sample having been obtainable from America.

MAIL orders for February will compare favorably with the record for the same month last year and may even make up the January decrease. The average mail-order house now has all it can do.

ON the steamer Florida, which arrived at New York from Copenhagen February 15, were forty-five cases of valley pips for Loechner & Co., and on the Nieuw Amsterdam, from Rotterdam, the same day, came twenty-six cases for Vaughan's Seed Store. The total up to date is now 9,420 cases.

SEEDSMEN as a rule read their competitors' catalogues with considerable care, especially any unusual features, and the lecture H. G. Hastings addressed to southern planters, occupying several pages of the 1915 catalogue of his firm, has attracted wide comment. The trade approves his forceful argument in favor of diversification of crops.

ALFALFA experts are recommending planting in rows in dry farming in localities where the rainfall is fifteen inches or less. A distance of three feet six inches is advised, in which case only one pound of seed is needed per acre. For even distribution the seed is diluted by thorough mixing with some inert substance, such as screened lignite coal.

THE business and good will of the Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala., has been taken over by the Amzi Godden Seed & Grain Co., at 2119 First avenue, incorporated recently with a fully paid up capital of $20,000. The officers

To Our Friends

In U. S. A. in the Seed Trade

An Eye to the Future

We are busy now filling orders which you passed to us direct or through our representative; but we also have an eye to the future, that is, on your requirements from harvests of 1915 and 1916.

Whilst we are occupied in our customers' interests in making many sacrifices this season, and in overcoming obstacles caused by the present regrettable military and financial situation, we do not forget that arrangements must be made for your demands from coming harvests.

If land is not to be sown to corn, we must know in time. If stock seed is to be reserved we must know now.

For these and other equally good reasons, we ask now for a list of your requirements, and it may save time and ensure bargains being concluded if you can tell us near the quantities required, and the prices you think you can afford.

Wars come and Wars will cease; the material needs of the Human Race continue, and you cannot afford to wait; there are few left to cultivate the land, and there will be fewer still. Secure what crops you can whilst you have the opportunity.

of the concern are: President, Dr. R. F. Lovelady; vice-president, Dr. W. J. Love; secretary, F. G. Macke; treasurer, S. R. Batson; manager, D. P. Durban.

F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York, has been in bed for several days with the grip.

The activities of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., Chicago, are manifold, so it need occasion no surprise to learn that one of its barges plying on the drainage canal recently was destroyed by fire.

It is said that the Idaho Gold Coin Co., a mining concern in the Black Lake region, is owned largely by men in the Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. It is stated development work has occupied twelve years and cost $250,000, but that the mine now is turning out ore that goes $12 to $16 per ton.

"Our sales of alfalfa, red clover, oats, etc., were unusually large for the fall months," said J. L. Mosby, of the Tucker-Mosby Seed Co., Memphis, Tenn., "but we expect to do a further large business this spring. The prices of all these seeds are high this year, but in spite of this we are selling more of them than ever before."

No considerable number of the 1915 seed catalogues run above the 8-ounce limit, so the parcel post proposition has proved of little consequence in so far as it affects the mailing of books. Two or three large houses issuing heavy books have found their mailing more costly than before, but the great majority have followed the well-known practices of other years.

BEET SEED IN FRANCE.

Referring to the item regarding the suspension of the French import duty on beet seed, which appeared in The Review for January 28, Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, say that, while the duty on all beet seed is suspended, there is little likelihood of imports of garden beet seed, the exports of which are expected to continue as usual. This is what they write:

"The suspension during the war of the duty of Frs: 30,00 per 100 Kilog., formerly levied on the import into France of garden beet, sugar beet and mangel seed has been decided upon by a decree dated November 21, 1914.

"It has been justified on the ground that Germany usually supplied important quantities of sugar beet to France. That source being closed, it was ex-

Burpee Quality

Flower Seeds

CONDITIONS in Europe preclude the possibility of securing flower seed from that source within any reasonable time. When stocks become depleted during the season, an American source of supply of undoubted integrity is highly essential.

FORDHOOK FARMS—America's greatest and most complete trial grounds—are famous for the finest strains of flower seeds, especially Antirrhinums, Balsams, Begonias, Celosia Plumosa, Perennial Chrysanthemum, Coleus, Dolichos, Gladiolus, Gourds, Heliotrope, Marigolds, Morning Glories, Petunias, Phlox Drummondii, Poppies, Portulaca, Salvia, Sunflower, Torenia and Zinnia.

FLORADALE FARM—the California home of Sweet Peas—produces in addition to tons of Sweet Pea seeds, the very finest strains of Centaurea Imperialis, Cosmos, Dahlias, Delphiniums, Dimorphotheca, Eschscholtzias, Hollyhocks, Marigolds, Pelargoniums, Nasturtiums, Petunia, Pentstemon and Verbena.

SUNNYBROOK FARM in South Jersey has produced for a number of years exceedingly fine strains of Petunia, Poppies, Dahlias, Ipomoeas and Dolichos.

With these vast quantities of flower seeds at our command, we are in a position to offer to the trade superior stocks of seeds which have formerly been secured in Europe. When in the market for the very best strains of flower seeds, kindly submit a list of your requirements for quotation.

Please bear in mind that we are in no position to offer in a wholesale way (as we are entirely sold out) the following: Morning Glory, tall, mixed; Ricinus Zanzibarensis; Marvel-of-Peru, mixed; Vincas and Thunbergia, mixed.

Florists and Market Gardeners

pected that a large part of the supply required for 1915 and 1916 might have to be imported from Russia at heavy freight, insurance and shipping charges. The suspension for the duration of the present crisis was therefore as a safeguard against a too great advance in price of the seed required by the sugar beet growers.

"In fact, notwithstanding the large stock of sugar beet seed which French firms had on hand at the beginning of the crisis, they could not be ready to fill all of a sudden the demand of about 5,000 tons of sugar beet seed used annually in France.

"The change, however, does not interest in any degree the trade in garden beet and mangel seeds, articles which France does not import, but of which, on the contrary, she exports large quantities of seed every year."

THE SUPPLY OF VALLEY PIPS.

There are evidences that the supply of valley pips is worrying the holders, and it will be of interest to note that the imports through the port of New York to February 10 are only a little heavier this season than last—9,339 cases as against 8,786 cases a year ago. There is, however, this difference: in normal seasons the shipments practically all enter at New York, there being no suitable boats from Hamburg to other ports, but this season a large part of the pips have come via Rotterdam, from which port the Holland-America line has good boats to Baltimore, Philadelphia and other ports, as well as to New York.

DAMAGES NOT RECOVERABLE.

The Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co. recently brought suit against the Detroit & Mackinac Railway Co., to recover damages resulting from closing of part of a street upon which plaintiff's premises abutted, in the construction of a depot by the defendant at Alpena, Mich. This suit has been decided by the Michigan Supreme court in favor of the railway company, on the ground that where access to property is not prevented, but is merely made less convenient by closing of part of a street, the property owner has no redress. SEED BUSINESSES FOR SALE.

A mail-order seed business is a mighty fine thing, an almost certain money-maker if carefully conducted, but not the easiest thing to turn into cash after one has spent years in building it up. But every now and then a large and well established mail-order seed business comes onto the market. The Review now knows of two that will be sold this spring if the owners find their opportunities.

One of these is in an eastern city of 35,000 population. It is a corporation owned by three brothers. One is a traveling man and finds office work irksome, another is in ill health and must seek a milder climate, while the third has another business. The seed business has been established several years and has been fairly successful, having a reasonably complete equipment for handling all lines, with a mailing list of 350,000, largely in eastern rural districts and small towns.

The second mail-order seed business for sale is in a middle western city that had 25,000 people at the last census. It has been established thirty years and there are many on its mailing list of 200,000 names who have bought regularly from its catalogue for from ten to twenty years. Although the business was originally started as a retail mail-order concern, of late years the wholesale end has grown rapidly. Now the two branches conflict. The wholesale end, to the owners, seems the better worth increasing, so the mail-order business is for sale.

It is not everyone, of course, who has money enough to buy and swing a business of this character, and those who have the money, if they seek a place to invest it, usually are without knowledge of the trade. To realize the most from a sale, the owners frequently find it desirable to incorporate and distribute holdings among employees, taking notes secured by the deposit of stock to permit payment in larger part out of profits.

LIABILITY FOR ANOTHER'S DEBT.

Maine, like all the other states, except, possibly, one or two, has a statute which provides that no promise to pay the debt of a third person shall be enforceable unless evidenced by some writing signed by the promisor. But it is usually held under these laws that where some benefit inures to the promisor, he will be deemed to have assumed the obligation as an original indebtedness of his own. This latter principle has just been applied by the Maine Supreme Judicial court in the case of Colbath vs. Everett B. Clark Seed Co., 91 Atlantic Reporter 1007. It appears that plaintiff contracted to sell a quantity of seed potatoes to one Klippel, who, in turn, agreed to sell to defendant. Being in doubt as to Klippel's responsibility for the purchase price, plaintiff called defendant's representative up on a telephone and stated that shipment would not be made unless defendant would assume payment of the price. Defendant's representative thereupon orally promised that defendant would become so liable, but, in a suit brought by plaintiff to recover, pleaded the statute above mentioned. The defense was overruled by the Maine Supreme Judicial court on the ground that defendant's promise

Prices for Fall Delivery

Horseshoe Brand GIGANTEUM

THE BEST LILY BULBS PRODUCED

AT PRESENT prices are very low. They may advance at any time. They positively will not be reduced. Don't be misled by war talk—the only other country in the world consuming large quantities of Lily Bulbs is England and, in spite of the war, or on account of it, as you may elect, the supply there is far short of the demand. Furthermore, should there be a cessation of hostilities, a still further demand will spring up, creating a shortage, because the crop of Giganteum is not increasing in proportion to the demand.

REMEMBER we deliver f. o. b. various cities as below. The freight you pay is part of the cost, and many buyers can save from $2.00 to $10.00 per 1000 bulbs in the actual cost. Besides, you help make your immediate vicinity a greater distributing point. Compare our prices—you know the goods.

CANNING IN UTAH.

More than one seedsman has noted the increase in the demand for seeds of the canners' specialties that recently has come from Utah, but few realize that the increase has been sixty-seven per cent in two years. The National Copper Bank, of Salt Lake City, has taken a census of the trade. It finds that in 1914 thirty-three canning plants operated in the state, the output being as follows:

Tomatoes	829,822 cases
Peas	347,050 cases
Miscellaneous	151,629 cases

The acreage under cultivation may be estimated with fair accuracy as follows: Tomatoes, 4,208; peas, 2,433; string beans, 139.5, and all other products, 325.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Theo. D. Kuebler, Evansville, Ind.—An 8-page wholesale list of rooted chrysanthemum cuttings, including novelties, standard varieties, pompons and singles; the standard varieties are grouped according to colors.

Wm. Toole & Son, Baraboo, Wis.—"Toole's Guide to Pansy Culture and Catalogue of Seeds and Plants." At the beginning of this 18-page book are four pages of instructions on the growing of the pansy, the firm's specialty; then follow lists of pansy seeds, seeds of other flowers, plants for the house and garden, and hardy perennials.

Moore Seed Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Seed Buyers' Guide for 1915," a catalogue of flower, vegetable and agricultural seeds, small fruits, garden and farm implements, insecticides, fertilizers, poultry supplies, and such live stock as poultry, dogs and fancy hogs. The book is freely illustrated, but otherwise is so arranged as to crowd as much printed matter as possible into the 140 pages. A wholesale catalogue, for market gardeners and florists, has also been received from this firm; it contains thirty pages, illustrated.

Wilhelm Pfitzer, Stuttgart, Germany.—Two illustrated, accurately compiled seed catalogues, wholesale and retail, each containing ninety-six pages, printed in German. Besides seeds, the stock listed comprises bulbs, roots, plants, tools and supplies. Aside from the difference in the prices, the matter in the two books is almost identical.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Burpee's War Bulletin," an 8-page supplementary list of vegetable and flower seeds which were omitted from the regular edition of this year's catalogue on account of the uncertainties caused by the war, but which have since been received.

Electric City Conservatory, Great Falls, Mont.—Catalogue of vegetable and flower seeds, grass seeds and forage plants, greenhouse plants, hardy perennials, shrubs, vines, bush fruits, vegetable plants and cut flowers; thirty-two pages, illustrated.

M. B. Skinner & Co., Chicago, Ill.—"Pipe Repair Book," an instructive 16-page catalogue, illustrating and describing the use of Emergency pipe clamps, joint clamps, pipe saddles, flange clamps, valve-reseating tools, flue cleaner rods, boiler tube cutters, etc.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, N. Y.—"Henderson's Farmers' Manual," listing grasses, grains, forage crops, root crops, tobacco and the less common farm seeds, potatoes, implements, fertilizers, etc.; forty-eight pages, with an abundance of illustrations and cultural hints. Special grass mixtures are prominently featured.

H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., Nursery, Mo.—"Weber's Guide," a general catalogue of both fruit-bearing and ornamental nursery stock; also bulbs and greenhouse plants; eighty-six pages, well illustrated, and bound in an artistic cover. The book contains several pages of information on the transplanting, pruning and spraying of stock, with formulas for the making of insecticides. There are tables, also, in which shrubs are classified according to height, color of foliage or bark, and other peculiarities.

Kelway & Son, Langport, England.—"Wholesale, real price seed catalogue, for the whole year," not the condensed, unadorned wholesale list that is usually issued in the trade, but a sumptuous book of ninety large pages, such as is usually issued by this firm. It is printed in large type on enameled paper and is finely illustrated, partly in colors. The first one-third of the book contains the general list of vegetable, root, flower and lawn-grass seeds, with comparatively few illustrations; then follow the novelties and specialties, which are so numerous and so freely illustrated as to occupy nearly all of the last sixty pages.

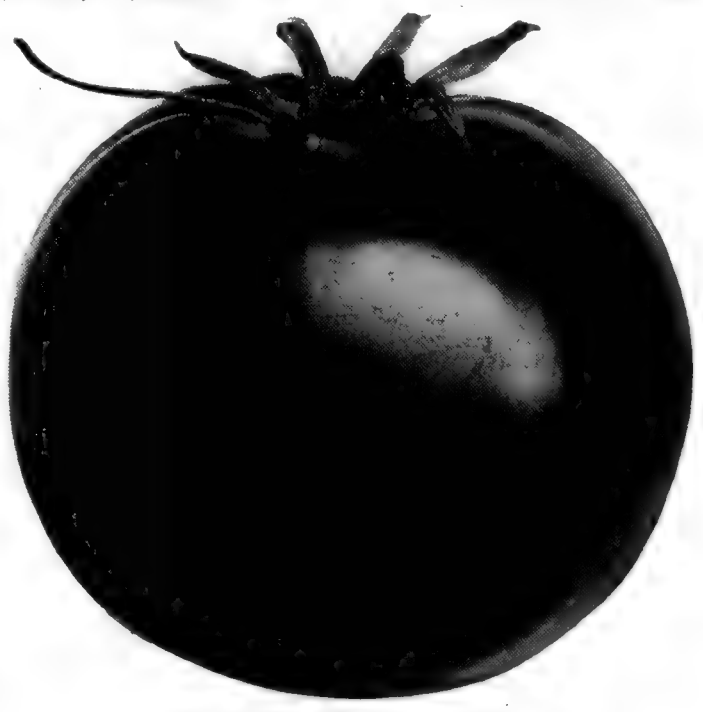
J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen: Your Adv. of Feb. 6th in The Florists' Exchange is some puff for "John Baer" Tomato, which is all true. I tried the "John Baer" last year and there was not one in your Adv. that had one on me.

From 620 plants I sold over 2½ tons of Tomatoes. Set 3 feet each way and trained to bamboo stakes trimmed to one shoot. When they became heavy with tomatoes, I tied the top of four stakes together as shown in the enclosed photo, and as the season was cold in the Spring could not set the plants until the last of May and commenced to market on the 17th of July. I raised Celery between the rows. Inclosed find check for 1 ounce of "John Baer" Tomato Seed.



Very truly,
(Signed) S. D. PRICHARD.

Cincinnati, Ohio, February 7th, 1915.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen: Glad to see your Adv. again on "John Baer" Tomato Seed. I bought $1.00 worth of seed last year from you, all people gave me the laugh for paying such a price for Tomato Seed, but when they found me picking Big, Fine, Solid, Fine Tasting Fruit on the 3rd day of July, 1914, then all the neighbors came to see them. I could have sold all my fruit, but to please the "wise ones" I presented each with a nice basket of them. Out of 50 "John Baer" Plants I picked on an average of ½ bushel every other day, where on my other varieties, I did not average a small measure a day. I saved 12 of my largest and best "John Baer" Tomatoes for seed, there wasn't enough seed in them to give me 50 plants this year, so you see why I must send for some to be sure I will have good old "John Baer." By me it is more than you claimed for it, in your last year's Adv. in The Florists' Exchange.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) WM. F. MASS,

DREER'S Famous American ASTERS

We offer below just a few of the most important sorts. For complete list see our Wholesale Catalogue.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters

The finest Asters for late August and September blooming. The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. They come into bloom from two to three weeks after the average type, usually being at their best during September. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz.:

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich, deep lavender	$0.25	$1.00
Pure White. Extra fine stock	.25	1.00
Shell Pink. An exquisite shade	.25	1.00
Rose Pink. A very desirable color	.25	1.00
Deep Rose. Rich and brilliant	.25	1.00
Deep Purple. Royal deep purple	.25	1.00
Lavender. A pale grayish-lavender	.25	1.00
Crimson. Very rich	.25	1.00
Finest Mixed. All the colors	.25	.75

Crego's Giant Comet Asters

Magnificent fluffy flowers, with long, strong stems, the finest of this type. Comes into bloom in August, continuing well into September, and, unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship. We offer five colors, our own saving, of the highest quality.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
White. Purest white	$0.30	$1.50
Pink. Delicate shell pink	.30	1.50
Purple. Bright purple	.30	1.50
Rose. Rich, deep rose	.30	1.50
Lavender. A rich, deep shade	.30	1.50

Dreer's "Peerless Pink" Aster

This grand Aster may be briefly described as a glorified late branching shell-pink or Mary Semple. It has the same strong, sturdy habit of growth; comes into bloom a little earlier, bears freely almost globular flowers rarely under 4 inches across and frequently over 5 inches. The color is rich shell-pink, similar in shade but more decided than the late branching. The center petals are prettily incurved, while the wide outer petals reflex, making a most artistic and finely finished flower, and stands cut longer than any other. 50 cts. per trade pkt.; $2.50 per oz.

Queen of the Market Asters

The standard early flowering variety, good flowers and good stems.

DREER'S "PEERLESS PINK" ASTER

Astermums

This strain of Giant Comet Asters were first exhibited at the Florists' Convention in 1912, and their immense size and Chrysanthemum-like appearance created quite a sensation. They closely resemble Crego's Giant, but come into bloom fully two weeks earlier. We offer three colors.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
White Astermum	$0.50	$2.50
Pink Astermum	.50	2.50
Lavender Astermum	.50	3.00

Dreer's "Pink Beauty" Aster

A magnificent cut-flower variety, in bloom from early August until well on in September; 24 to 30 inches high; flowers average 4 inches across, on long, strong stems. Color a delicate blush pink, and pronounced by experts to be the finest pink midseason sort yet introduced. 40 cts. per trade pkt.; $2.00 per oz.

King Asters

The "King" Asters form a distinct class or type, and have many sterling qualities to recommend them to lovers of fine Asters. They are of strong, sturdy habit, growing fully 18 inches high, and bear from August to October very large, double blossoms, the petals of which are more or less quilled, forming very attractive flowers.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Dreer's Crimson King. A brilliant new color in this type, which originated with us and offered last year for the first time. It is the richest and deepest crimson variety known to us	$0.50	$3.00
Pink King. An attractive shade of delicate shell-pink	.40	2.00
Rose King. A beautiful, brilliant rose variety	.40	2.00
White King. Of purest glistening white, flowers very large	.50	3.00

Dreer's Fine Sweet Peas

HENRY A. DREER, 714-716 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

C. S. Harrison's Select Nursery Co., York, Neb.—"Special Price List," in which the prices "supersede the prices quoted for the same plants in the large catalogue"; sixteen pages, well illustrated. The stock listed comprises phloxes, irises, peonies and other perennials, cannas, dahlias, gladioli, lilacs, evergreens and hardy ferns.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.—"Bolgiano's Big Crop Seed Potatoes," a 16-page, illustrated catalogue, with cultural directions and with hints on potato diseases.

S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Wholesale catalogue of specialties in flower seeds, bulbs, plants and florists' supplies; thirty-two pages. "Our seed list for the season of 1915," says the firm, "is limited to but a few kinds, and of these we aim to supply the highest grades only."

Wagner Park Nursery Co., Sidney, O.—A 42-page, illustrated catalogue of trees, shrubs and hardy plants. Accompanying the catalogue is an artistic booklet entitled "Wagner Plans and Planting," with pictures that provide "glimpses of Wagner landscape art"; there is also a separate list of garden furniture, such as settees, sundials, vases and plant boxes.

Lord & Burnham Co., New York, N. Y.—"How to Give Your Garden a Running Start," an illustrated folder with reference to "booster boxes" or frames.

Archias Seed Store, Sedalia, Mo.—Catalogue of "everything for the gardener, farmer, poultryman, dairyman and bee-keeper," including lists of seeds, plants, bulbs, nursery stock and sundries; ninety-six pages, freely illustrated. The 22-page list of sundries seems to include almost everything imaginable in growers' tools or storekeepers' side lines.

Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O.—"Garden and Lawn," a neat, well illustrated catalogue of seeds, plants, bulbs, etc. The vegetable, farm and lawn seeds are most conspicuous, occupying nearly all of the first thirty-six pages; the remaining space, consisting of about half a dozen pages, is closely packed with lists of flower seeds, bulbs, roots, implements, poultry supplies, spray pumps, insecticides and fertilizers.

STAMFORD, CONN.

The annual entertainment and dance of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Mechanics' hall, Tuesday evening, February 16. The members, with their wives, families and friends, as well as a goodly number of representatives of leading nursery firms and seed houses, formed a large and happy party, who were cordially welcomed by President W. J. Sealey.

Mrs. James W. Stirling sang Scotch ballads in a wonderfully sweet and clear voice and was heartily encored. Owen A. Hunnick sang some old-time favorites that were pleasing and well received. Professor Wilson, the Scotch comedian, amused and delighted the audience and responded to several encores. The talented young son of James Foster rendered violin solos in a most artistic and finished manner. Professor Melcher, sleight-of-hand artist, amused and mystified the audience with a number of clever feats. Songs were sung by the Honorable John M. Brown, mayor of Stamford; also by A. L. Rickards, W. J. Collins and James Johnston. These songs were well received and heartily applauded.

While the floor was being cleared for dancing, a splendid buffet lunch was provided, with plenty of fruit and candies for the kiddies. An excellent orchestra furnished good music, and a pleasing and varied dance program was rendered, under the able floor management of James Johnston, assisted by Alex. Clarkson. Ex-President James Stuart and wife led the grand march. The party broke up in the early hours of the morning, a tired but happy crowd. P. W. Popp, Cor. Sec'y.

Southampton, N. Y.—James Guilfoyle received an award of merit for a fine vase of carnations at the last meeting of the Southampton Horticultural Society. It was decided at that time to hold the annual flower show in Southampton July 28 and 29.

MYOSOTIS RUTH FISHER

The largest flowering of all Forget-Me-Nots, of the purest sky-blue color. It is of dwarf, compact growth, with broad, dark green foliage, and makes an ideal plant. It may be lifted from frames as needed during winter and potted up in pans and forced into bloom in a moderate temperature within a few weeks, selling as readily as the best Cyclamen. Seed very scarce. Tr. pkt. of 250 seeds, 50 cts.

PETUNIAS

Grandiflora, very large flowers with beautiful and distinct colors. Tr. pkt., 50c.

Grandiflora Fringed Mixed, same as above, but with fringed flowers. Tr. pkt., 50c.

Grandiflora Superbissima Mixed, the choicest, a giant flowering strain with deeply fringed edges and beautiful markings in the colors. ½ Tr. pkt., 60c; Tr. pkt., $1.00.

Grandiflora Double Fringed Mixed, the best procurable, producing about 45 per cent very double deeply fringed flowers. ½ Tr. pkt., 60c; Tr. pkt., $1.00.

Queen of the Balconies, a large flowering, deep purple with white center, of rapid growth, sunproof, excellent for vases or window boxes. ½ Tr. pkt., 60c; Tr. pkt., $1.00.

Inflata, a small flowering trailing variety for hanging baskets or porch boxes, covered with bright crimson flowers. Pkt., 15c.

SOLANUM "CHRISTMAS"

Originated with me and is a cross of Capsicastrum x Fra Diavolo. The old Capsicastrum never berried very freely and the berries were usually hidden by the foliage. Fra Diavolo, though the berries are small, displayed them to greatest advantage and produced them abundantly. The new variety "Christmas" has the foliage and size of berry from Capsicastrum and the character of display from Fra Diavolo; holding the fruit for a long time. "Christmas" will prove a seller of importance and will, if it stays constant, supersede any other Solanum of its type. Tr. pkt. $0.50

GOOD EARLY TOMATOES.

I intend to plant tomatoes for early market, but am at a loss to know what varieties to plant. I want a smooth, red tomato and the earliest that can be had. Will you please mention a few of the earliest large sorts? We can use only the dark red varieties.

W. S.

You will find Chalk's Early Jewel quite early. It is bright red in color and is hard to beat as an early outdoor variety. Sparks' Earliana is another good early sort. These are not so large as Globe or Matchless, or the old, reliable Stone, which is still the best main crop variety. C. W.

LEGUMINOUS CROP FOR HUMUS.

I am growing a crop of tomatoes in my greenhouses this winter. When my crop is out, say in July or August, would it be practicable to sow some crop such as cowpeas, and turn the crop under the sod in a green state to get humus into the soil? What is the best crop to grow for that purpose? E. G. C.

You could sow either cowpeas or Soja beans, if you wish. This crop would, however, need lots of water, and I doubt if it would pay you, considering the labor of watering, etc., as well as would putting the value into good cow or horse manure. Personally, I favor the latter, but for outdoor work these leguminous crops certainly add much fertility to the soil. C. W.

The Market.

Retail trade is still increasing and the valentine business was a big surprise to the florists here. The public was generous in its outlay for flowers on that day. Violets in red heart-shaped boxes were in great demand and many of the florists used kewpies to great advantage in advertising.

Various Notes.

Harry Randall had a beautiful display of spring flowers last week. He sent out 1,000 folders as an advertisement for Valentine's day, from which he received astonishing results. Mr. Randall has purchased a light delivery car.

H. F. A. Lange had a cineraria sale last week and cleared nearly his en-

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The regular monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held in E. J. Canning's office, Prospect Heights, February 16 and was well attended, twenty-two members being present. G. H. Sinclair and George Strugnell, of Holyoke, and F. D. Keyes & Son, of Florence, exhibited some remarkably well grown cyclamen plants. F. D. Keyes & Son also exhibited a vase of that fine new dark crimson carnation, Princess Dagmar. E. H. Downer, of the Smith College Botanic Garden, exhibited some beautiful plants and sprays of flowers of Schizanthus Wisetonensis. He also exhibited some finely grown cinerarias. Each of the exhibitors was awarded a first-class certificate of merit. The exhibits provoked much discussion among the members and practically every minute detail of culture was brought out.

Frank Barnard, a former active member, sent a paper which was read by Mr. Sinclair, on the history and the quantity of plants and cut flowers at the A. N. Pierson plant at Cromwell, Conn., where Mr. Barnard is now located.

The March meeting of the club will be held at the new Sinclair greenhouse, Smith's Ferry.

TO LENGTHEN LILY STEMS.

Our giganteum lilies seem to be a little short in stem, about six inches high. They are in a temperature of 70 degrees, with full sunlight. Will a little shade hurt them? H. G. A.

No, a little shade will not hurt them. It is often applied in order to lengthen the stems on lilies when they are too dwarf. Most customers prefer lilies which are comparatively dwarf. Keep your plants well sprayed, and in the temperature mentioned they should now be showing buds. C. W.

NOT BEGONIA CHRISTMAS RED.

I have a greenhouse 30 x 100 feet and make a specialty of pot plants. Being a subscriber to The Review, the inquiry of W. C. K., on page 13 of the January 21 issue, has aroused my curiosity as to whether a begonia I have is Christmas Red or Martha Washington, by which name it was sold to me. I am sending you a bud and foliage. It is a persistent bloomer; it has bloomed for fourteen months and during that time has not been a day without buds or flowers. We have the original plant, which I purchased five years ago. It is in a bench in the greenhouse and is about three and one-half feet high and three feet wide. It now has forty-nine flowers and buds. I have started as many as 200 plants from the original plant. It is easily propagated, by either cuttings or leaves. H. M. S.

The flowers and leaves forwarded were quite fresh on arrival, as you packed them well. This is not B. Christmas Red, but B. semperflorens gigantea rosea, an old but quite floriferous and persistent-flowering variety. C. W.

Seeds With a Pedigree

FOR generations James Carter & Co. have used painstaking English methods in selecting and testing their seeds. The Carter trial and testing grounds at Raynes Park have become celebrated in Great Britain.

This explains the remarkable record of Carters seeds in American Gardens. These "Seeds with a Pedigree" can now be purchased in this country. A complete stock is carried in Boston and prompt service is guaranteed.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Portland, Ore.—To promote Portland's fame as a rose-growing city, 31,000 rose plants were offered at cost to residents for rose-planting day, February 22. The plants, obtained from local nurseries, were sold at 12½ cents, and a few at 20 cents each.

Lompoc, Cal.—Anton C. Zvolanek is planning to visit the big flower show in New York in March, and on the same trip will see for the first time another Anton C. Zvolanek, his grandson, not yet 1 year old, who, grandfather has no doubt, will some day be a good sweet pea man. Charles Zvolanek, the son and father of the Antons, is growing some sweet peas for the New York show, at Bound Brook, N. J.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Another good week has to be recorded for the wholesale houses, and retailers also give good reports of the business done. Flowers of best quality are still on the scarce side, especially good roses. Carnations are more plentiful and of fine quality from cloth houses and under glass, but the continued rain has taken the color out of the outdoor flowers and made them ragged. Large quantities of daffodils and other bulbous stock are arriving and a few forced tulips from the north are particularly good for the season. The retail stores are brightened up considerably with almond and peach boughs; these make an elegant display, while the cut boughs of Acacia Baileyana and other varieties form great masses of golden yellow that are exceedingly attractive. At first sight it looks like a pity to cut these boughs, but both the fruit trees and the acacia grow so rapidly that their places are soon taken by more.

Violets are plentiful and the quality is well up to the average. Corsage flowers, such as valley, orchids and Cecile Brunner roses, are selling well, the latter being still among the scarce articles. Greens are plentiful and good. Plant trade is quiet. Funeral work has formed the principal outlet for stock, but there have been several good decorations and St. Valentine's day also helped out.

Various Notes.

Murata & Co. are handling large quantities of bulbous stock these days. Their store on a recent visit looked like a flower show, with row after row of vases of daffodils and roses that would have done credit to any exhibition. And the best of it is, they are selling the stock; every day sees practically a clean-up in the afternoon.

"Like a miniature Christmas," was the way H. Reeve Darling described the St. Valentine's day business at Darling's Flower Shop. They are catering to a good medium class of trade by up-to-date advertising methods and elegant window displays, with the most encouraging results. Mrs. Darling has not been in the best of health of late, but recent reports are encouraging.

S. A. J. Dorn is no longer connected with Smith & Dieterich, at Seventh and Figueroa streets. Mr. Dorn figures on a trip north to Spokane, Wash., where his father is ill.

Thanking you for the excellent results we have had to date from our ad. in The Review.—
HOLLYWOOD GARDENS,
Per V. A.
Jan. 12, 1915. Seattle, Wash.

Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade here last week.

At the store of the L. A. Floral Co. bulbous stock is moving well. Several of the largest growers send their output here.

The windows of Wright's Flower Shop are always full of good things, but the fine spikes of Phalænopsis Schilleriana exhibited last week were certainly above the average. Large branching sprays, with scores of the lovely blooms open, made such a choice and striking display as is seldom seen. The moth orchids do wonderfully well here and Mr. Wright's growers are especially successful with them.

At Wolfskills' and Morris Goldenson's I noticed an exquisitely made pall of violets and freesias for a local funeral. In place of the usual hard outline, the violets on the outside were arranged on drooping sprays of Asparagus Comorensis and the effect was exquisite.

Flowering rhododendrons and azaleas are moving well at the nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. The rhododendrons have arrived in especially good order this season. Forced lilacs are also making a pretty show here.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co. is now well established in the new quarters at Sixth and Alameda streets, where the increased space gives much better shipping and office facilities. The retail trade only is carried on at the old stand on Main street.

W. Armacost & Co. are sending in fine pot lilies. H. R. Richards.

A LITTLE DIFFERENT.

The fact that it is not of the ordinary style of flower store is sufficient reason for taking a look at the store of Miss Kate Parsons, at Fresno, Cal., aside from some others of greater or less importance. The apparent size and spaciousness of the place, as well as the absence of the ordinary obstructions to freedom and familiarity on the part of customers, remind the easterner afresh of the exuberant and unrestricted enthusiasm of the Californian. But don't be led by appearances into believing that Miss Kate Parsons conducts so large a business in this place that she needs two cash registers side by side to handle the receipts. It is only the large plate-glass mirror which produces that effect. But the business is growing rapidly.

OAKLAND, CAL.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business far exceeded the expectations of the florists. Those who took advantage of the occasion to arrange special window displays were well repaid for their trouble. Tulips, hyacinths, cinerarias and azaleas were in the majority and proved to be the best sellers of the day.

Roses are improving in quality. My Maryland is the best of the pink varieties offered. Killarneys have been improving in the additional sunshine of the last week. Beauties are off crop. Richmonds and Tafts are also scarce. Mrs. Shawyer is a popular variety, but extremely scarce. Cecile Brunner is entirely off crop. Carnations are becoming more plentiful, with a slight decline in the wholesale prices. Violets are plentiful and are improving in quality, despite the recent severe rains. Asparagus and maidenhair are of poor quality. Smilax is plentiful. Huckleberry is used in great quantities for decorative purposes.

Following the rule of the business houses of the big cities, the florists of Oakland closed their stores February 20, the opening date of the Panama-Pacific exposition. A general holiday was proclaimed throughout the state. The attendance exceeded expectations.

Various Notes.

G. A. Van Linge has the largest supply of valley on this side of the bay. He keeps 20,000 pips in all the time, to insure against a shortage.

C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., was a caller last week. He reports business satisfactory.

E. Flossmann, who grows maidenhair and other ferns exclusively, finds no trouble in disposing of his stock in the local market.

M. Okada has a fine crop of Killarney and My Maryland. He is one of the most successful growers on the coast.

SUPERIOR-GROWN ROSES for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

September Morn Our sensational light pink rose. Throws extra strong canes in rapid succession, 2 to 4 feet, producing high-grade stock without pinching. Wonderful keeper, full, double, with petals of grand substance waved on edges, giving it a most distinct appearance. Light shade of flesh-pink on outside, shading to pure rose-pink in center. We planted 10,000 of it for cutting and have had more repeat orders on it than on any other rose and at better prices. Flowers every day in the year and never soft in the hottest weather. Strong stems, no mildew or spot. (See our full page ads in issues of January 21 and 28.)

Own root plants only, from 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000, 5000 for $1000.00.

Francis Scott Key Flowers unusually large and double, rosy red and quite distinct from any other indoor rose. Its keeping qualities are remarkable. While being so double, it is especially good for hot weather conditions. Worthy of its name and its raiser, Mr. John Cook. Note our prices.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. F. F. Thompson The beautiful shell-pink sport of the well known Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. It combines all the fine qualities of its parent, and this surely is recommendation enough when added to its magnificent coloring. Always in bloom and already proved a money-maker.

$30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000

Hadley Brilliant, deep, velvety crimson, a color which it retains all the year round. Flowers borne on stiff, upright stems, and a first-class variety in every particular.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg Has fulfilled every prediction made for it last season and is a big winner everywhere. There is no red rose grown that will make as satisfactory returns for the space occupied. Of exceedingly strong, sturdy growth, throwing splendid stems at all times; splendid foliage. The one best bet in red roses.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Ophelia has proven of exceptional merit as a forcing rose; a great grower, clean and strong, very free, and a most beautiful color—brilliant salmon-pink, shading to orange. A fancy rose that you will be more than pleased with.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Killarney Brilliant This is the very last word in the Killarneys—an exceptionally strong grower, increased petalage and of heavier texture. A most brilliant and pleasing color; is doing well everywhere, and will be planted heavily this season.

$10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000

Mrs. Geo. Shawyer The most popular rose of its color ever introduced; has won its way to the very top on merit alone. A grand grower, very free, a splendid keeper and the most pleasing shade of pink; sells on sight, at top prices. Will be planted heavier than any other pink rose this season.

$6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

All the new and standard varieties in quantity. Let us figure on your requirements for the coming season. We can make the price right for first-class, well grown stock.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Weather conditions indicate an early spring and the mild, bright days have stimulated trade. Potted bulbous stock is more abundant, but is kept cleaned up. Azaleas are among the best sellers, the favorite varieties being Jules Thooft, Mme. Vander Cruyssen, Mme. Petrick, Llewellyn and Vervæneana.

Daffodils, tulips, sweet peas and carnations lead in cut stock. There is a tendency to lower prices on daffodils. Some excellent sweet peas are coming in from several growers. Roses are off crop with some growers and California-grown stock is brought in to supply the deficiency. Carnations are more plentiful and of excellent quality, but the supply is still short of the demand. Imported violets are seen everywhere. Prince of Austria is a favorite among red tulips. Cinerarias are in full supply and their quality is improving.

The seedsmen have all hands and some extra help busy filling orders, which have resulted from their issues of catalogues. They report this branch of the trade unusually good for this month. Landscape work is being rushed, as the soil in most places is in good condition. The call on the nurserymen for stock is heavy.

Club Meeting.

The Portland Floral Society met February 16 at its rooms in Masonic Temple. Julius Dorsche, chairman of the committee which is attending to the society's participation in the rose festival, reported details of the committee's conferences with festival managers, from which it was evident that the interests of the society are being looked after satisfactorily. Mr. Conville, superintendent of parks, stated that his department is inclined to grant the society any privileges within reason on public property which may be required for a festival center or summer garden.

President Van Kirk gave details of correspondence with S. A. F. officials and with railroad agents relating to the invitation the Portland Floral Society has extended to those who will attend the convention at San Francisco in August, to visit Portland at least one way on the trip. They will be welcomed if they stop in Portland either going or coming. He stated that the rose festival managers have offered to assist in the entertainment of florist visitors. E. J. Steele gave an instructive talk on the question, "How Can the Sale of Greenhouse Products Be Stimulated?" He said in part: "The grounds surrounding the greenhouses seldom are used to best advantage. They should be made a show place to display goods for sale inside, arranged on a scale to bring out their attractiveness. Color harmony should be studied in packing blooming plants. Too often the plants themselves and their containers are dirty and unattractive. Appearance is the chief factor in promoting sales and for this reason more attention should be given to packing methods."

After adjournment a luncheon was served.

specialty of hardy perennials. He grows many varieties successfully.

The rose festival managers have held a sale of 2-year-old rose bushes. They disposed of 30,000 at about wholesale prices and Mme. Caroline Testout, the official Portland rose, was the best seller.

E. H. White, of the Willamette Dahlia Co., reports that orders are coming in briskly for roots. He says that the specialists and amateurs lost a large quantity of stock, due to the cold, wet weather which prevailed in December before the roots had been lifted.

Inquiries for bedding stock are beginning to come in. The prospect for a brisk business in this line is good, as all the tender varieties have been killed by freezing weather.

The first crocus blooms have appeared and outdoor daffodils, tulips and hyacinths are budding.

POOR GERMINATION OF SEEDS.

Every season I experience great difficulty in getting seeds of snapdragons, thunbergias, maurandias, etc., to germinate. Sometimes a few seeds will come up in a corner or in the middle of the box or pan, but the balance of the space will be a perfect blank. I take great care that the soil is light and fine, and sow the seeds at various depths, leaving some on the top of the soil or nearly so. I then cover them with glass and shade them from the sun. I keep the seeds in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Would soaking the thunbergia seeds in hot water help? If so, how long should they be kept in the water and how hot should the water be? J. G. B.

The fact that a few seeds germinate in the corners of your seed boxes goes to show that the trouble is not wholly due to the seedsman. I am inclined to think that you may not be using a suitable soil for your seeds. Ordinary soil will not do; it should consist principally of well decayed leaf-mold, with only a small proportion of screened loam added and some fine sand. Put good drainage in your pans or flats. Cover this with the coarser portions of your leaf-mold. The leaf-mold must be passed through a screen, and the portion for the surface needs to pass through a fine screen. Firm the surface slightly and make it perfectly level with a piece of board; then sow your seeds evenly. Afterwards screen a light covering over the seeds. When the seeds are fine, water the soil with a fine rose before sowing and do not cover the seeds at all.

All watering of seeds must be done carefully, always using a watering pot with a fine rose. Careless watering will wash the seeds to the sides of the flats. None of the seeds mentioned should need soaking before sowing. Give the seed flats a well shaded position and a temperature of 60 degrees at night. Move them to a cooler house as soon as germination takes place; this is especially necessary with antirrhinums.

It Pays To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

S. W. Call, probably the oldest active nurseryman in Ohio, was killed February 22, while driving an automobile across the tracks of the New York Central at Perry, O.

Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, has introduced an amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill to increase the appropriation for the control of diseases of forest and ornamental trees and shrubs, etc., from $47,350 to $69,510.

Heretofore Wm. Pfaender, Jr., has superintended both the growing and selling of the stock at the Pioneer Nursery, New Ulm, Minn., but as the business has grown rapidly, he has secured an experienced sales manager to relieve him of part of the burden. He plans to incorporate, and with additional capital, expects to develop the business greatly.

The California Mountain Fruit Co., operating a large nursery and fruit ranch a few miles east of Grass Valley, Cal., has applied for permission to increase its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000, in order to be able to increase its holdings. The company purchased its present tract about two years ago. W. M. Whitney is president and F. H. Bolster is secretary.

Part of the Attean territory, in Somerset county, Me., devastated by fire in 1908, will be replanted with white pine next spring by the Coburn Lands, Inc., under the direction of John C. Hutchison, of Bangor. Only about fifty acres of the 10,000 or 11,000 devastated will be covered; the 50,000 white pine trees for this tract will be obtained from the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill.

PHOENIX SALE APPROVED.

Overruling the motion of counsel for the unsecured creditors to set aside the sale of the real estate of the Phoenix Nursery Co., recently reported on this page, Judge Myers entered an order of the court February 15 approving the sale of the property to B. S. Green, trustee. Counsel representing Sidney Tuttle, A. E. De Mange and the Phoenix Nursery Co., unsecured creditors, stated that the property had been sold for about half its value and that if a larger price could be obtained there would be more surplus to divide among the unsecured creditors. The secured creditors stated that they were satisfied with the sale as made and had no objection to its confirmation.

Leave was granted the objectors to file additional affidavits as to the value of the property. John Y. Chisholm, receiver, was ordered to execute and deliver the deeds to the property, and hold the money until a further order of the court.

PARK MEN WILL GO TO FRISCO.

An executive committee meeting of the American Association of Park Superintendents was held at the offices of the park commissioner in New York city February 20, for the purpose of deciding the convention date. A number of members were present, at the invitation of the executive board, from Boston, Providence, New Haven, Newburgh and New York. President Gustave X. Amrhyn presided.

It was voted to hold the annual convention at San Francisco August 18. An invitation was extended by Wm. H. Coldwell, who was present at the meeting, to have the members of the A. A. of P. S. when visiting the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds, make their headquarters at the exhibit of the Coldwell Lawn Mower Co.

It was the unanimous choice of those present to make the trip to San Francisco via Chicago, Minneapolis, Glacier National park, Spokane, Seattle and Portland, leaving Chicago August 6, making a one day stop at the points named and arriving at San Francisco August 16. Returning, leaving San Francisco August 22 via Los Angeles and San Diego, where a stop of four days will be made, with a one day stop at Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs and St. Louis, where the party will separate. The trip from New York will occupy just thirty days. Railroad fare from New York for entire trip, including lower Pullman berth, will be $162.80, with proportionate fares from interior points. An invitation will be extended to the different horticultural societies to have their members who will go to the exposition at that time join the members of the A. A. of P. S. in their trip across the continent.

Enclosed you will find some advertising matter. We have a surplus, and we believe IF ANYONE CAN HELP US MOVE IT, YOU CAN.—Atlantic Nursery Co., Berlin, Md., D. W. Babcock, Mgr., January 30, 1915.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The bright days have opened up stock much better. During the early part of last week business held up fairly well, but after Ash Wednesday it fell down flat until Saturday, when things moved more briskly. Roses are more plentiful and, as the demand fell off, prices came down. Carnations are still in good demand, with a slight drop in price. There is almost a glut of violets, which can be bought at almost the cost of picking. Lilies move slowly. There has been an oversupply of jonquils and the prices dropped to a low figure. The street boys had their first chance to get any stock since the New Year's glut. Greens also are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club was held February 22, President Johnston in the chair. There was a good

We Offer for Immediate Delivery

Good, strong, well established plants in 2¼-inch pots of the exceedingly VALUABLE NEW ROSES

Ophelia, Francis Scott Key and Prince E. C. d'Arenberg

Growers will find all of these valuable additions to the list of standard varieties. They have been tested thoroughly and have been found to have exceptional value.

OPHELIA

No fancy rose ever introduced possesses so many excellent qualities. It is a splendid grower, a very free bloomer and has fine stems. It sells on sight. The demand undoubtedly will exceed the supply. Anticipating the large demand, we have propagated it extensively.

Strong plants on own roots. 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

This variety, raised by Mr. John Cook, is very distinct, being entirely different from any of the indoor roses grown today. Flowers are rosy red and are unusually large and double, resembling very much a very full, double, hardy garden rose. Coupled with its large size and double form, it is an exceedingly free bloomer. It promises to be exceedingly valuable, especially for spring, summer and fall flowering, when other less double roses are difficult to handle. Its keeping qualities are remarkable.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

PRINCE E. C. D'ARENBERG

This variety might well have been termed a Red Killarney, as it possesses so many of the good qualities of the Killarneys. In color the flowers are similar to Richmond, but they are much more double, and it should prove a very much more profitable rose. Flowers have fine, straight stems on all the grades—from the shortest to the longest. It has fine foliage, comes away quickly and is even a freer bloomer than the Killarneys. We believe it is the best all-round red rose that we have today.

Strong plants on own roots, 2¼-inch pots, now ready, $12.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

WE WILL BE GLAD TO QUOTE ON APPLICATION PRICES ON ALL THE NEWER AND STANDARD VARIETIES—STRONG, GRAFTED PLANTS READY IN MARCH

Just Why Our Shrubs Are The Shrubs To Buy

THEY are best to buy because, price considered, their quality is way above the average.

You reply: "It's easy enough to say that they are, but in what way are they?"

We answer: "They are above the average in vigor and quantity of root development."

You ask: "But why are they?"

We answer: "This famous, fertile soil of Chester County, Pa., is ideal for shrub root development and the climate is sufficiently vigorous to give them that sturdiness your shrubs so need for successful planting under varying climate conditions."

No one has finer Barberries. 60,000 plants we offer you, every one grown right here by us, from cuttings of original Japanese stock. The price is a mighty attractive one. And so it is on the Viburnum Plicatum. Don't let these two especially good items get by you. Send along your orders.

turnout of members. The nominations for officers resulted in the following candidates being named: For president, Jas. Hamilton and J. L. Towner; for vice-president, J. M. Rider, John Nuth, Albert Fiedler and Wm. F. Ekas; for secretary, N. F. Flitton; for financial secretary, Geo. Talbot; for treasurer, F. G. Burger; for librarian, C. M. Wagner. It was decided to hold the annual banquet at Hotel Rennert, on election night, March 8. To avoid getting through too late it was decided to call the meeting at 7 p. m. sharp.

Some interesting questions were in the question box and it took some time to dispose of them, which resulted in a late adjournment. M. Thau had on display a variegated Asparagus plumosus.

Various Notes.

L. H. A. Klein, of Towson, has ordered a new light delivery truck.

The sweet pea house of James Glass looks fine; the vines are about ten feet high and flowering profusely. A fine lot of Princess jonquils are also being forced for cut flower use.

Edward Herrmann has a large lot of Primula obconica of the grandiflora type, which are easily sold.

One of the most striking examples of floral art was on exhibition in the window of Samuel Feast & Sons February 22. It was a picture of George Washington composed of flowers. The face was of Murillo tulip petals, the lace collar of Harrisii petals, the coat of violets and hair of gray moss and Romans. The frame was of smilax on a rustic easel. Between the picture and frame the background was filled with galax leaves. W. F. E.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Stimulated by an extra good business for Valentine's day, the last few days preceding the beginning of the Lenten season kept the florists busy and the reports all indicate that the volume of trade was considerably in excess of that of last year. Prices were well maintained, although not high, and the supply kept the market in constant swing. Violets had the first call, with sweet peas closely following and orchids in good demand among the ultra classes. The increasing demand for orchids which has been developed by the constant display of the blooms is the principal feature in connection with this year's business in this city.

Various Notes.

Smith the Florist, on Washington street, has been especially busy on funeral work, having had a dozen pieces a day on several occasions.

William Chappell is arranging for extensive repairs as soon as the present season is over.

Johnston Bros. report big business during the last fortnight, cut flowers and decorations for a number of functions keeping them on the jump.

Joseph Koppelman was a business visitor in New York last week.

Willis S. Pino's force is busy preparing for the opening of the spring seed trade.

Edgar L. Nock secured judgment for $306.41 and costs against the King Construction Co. in the Eighth District court February 17, after a trial lasting several days.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, was elected treasurer of the Providence Boys' Club February 17. This is one of the philanthropic institutions for street boys.

William N. Craig, superintendent of the Faulkner Farm, Brookline, Mass., and secretary of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Boston, was the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society February 17.

One of the Rhode Island exhibits at the Panama exposition at San Francisco is that of S. J. Reuter & Son of Westerly, who had their new rose, Lady Ann Borrodell, set out at the fair grounds six months ago under the supervision of a friend of Mr. Reuter.

The Market.

The daily supply in the market eased up considerably last week, at the beginning of Lent, and naturally prices took a drop. Every line in the market shows a substantial increase in quantity. The opening and close of last week were much better than mid-week.

Roses and carnations generally clean up readily. Lilies, including Easter lilies, callas and rubrums, meet with a fair sale. Smaller bulbous stock is generally good, but meets with no special demand. Sweet peas are fine and generally sell well. Valley and violets are moving rather slowly. The best single violets, however, have a ready sale. Other offerings include mignonette, forget-me-not, primroses, wallflowers and orchids. The supply of greens is easily sufficient for requirements.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger and wife have had as their guests for the last fortnight, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Funk, of Emerado, N. D.

Fred Brueggeman is receiving congratulations from his friends on the recent visit of the stork, with a daughter, Julia Rose Brueggeman.

George Klotter sent in his first mignonette of the season last week.

The E. G. Hill Floral Co. had a large decoration at Hotel Gibson February 22.

Visitors: O. C. Heberling, Georgetown, Ky.; Chas. Pommert, Amelia, O.; Fred Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago; Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit; Jos. Hill and wife, Richmond, Ind. C. H. H.

Ashtabula, O.—What is said to be the largest greenhouse in the state of Ohio has just been completed and has received its first planting of lettuce. It is that of the recently organized J. H. Rice Co. and measures 85 x 540. There is a propagating house 32 x 230 feet. The power house, 84 x 106, has been built with an eye to expansion. Two 150-horsepower marine boilers furnish the heat; foundations have been laid for five more boilers of similar capacity. An overhead tramway on which hopper cars will run from the boiler room to a railroad spur obviates the necessity of unloading the coal by hand. An electric railroad from the greenhouse to the packing room will be installed, to carry fertilizer, etc., and the products of the house.

Buy for Quality

We are frequently complimented on the high quality of the cuttings we are sending out. They are so short and stocky, and so well rooted. Well, that is the kind of cuttings we believe in. We select the cuttings that are propagated for selling, just as carefully as those intended for our own stock. That's why they give satisfaction. We are propagating:—

SAGINAW, MICH.

The Market.

The weather conditions have been springlike and the supply of roses and carnations has increased. The outlook for Easter is excellent. St. Valentine's day business was much larger than expected; everything the season afforded was in demand, with probably blooming plants in the lead.

Various Notes.

The Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society will hold its annual meeting Monday, March 1, at 3 p. m., with election of officers, at the Roethke store, Saginaw. Prof. Gunson, of the M. A. C., will be one of the speakers at the meeting, which will be followed by a dinner at the Fordney hotel.

There is some talk of bowling teams between the greenhouse men and the store men for the balance of the winter season, which will probably develop at the next meeting. Gee.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Two weeks of nice weather make us feel as if spring and spring business were close at hand. Business continues good. Roses and carnations are none too plentiful, but the warm sunshine is bringing them along fast. Bulbous stock is in good supply.

Various Notes.

Karl Zeidler is working up a big stock of geraniums, begonias and other spring plants. He has no complaint about business, as collections are much better than they were a while ago.

Julius Niednagel & Sons' office and display room, uptown, present an inviting appearance to the passer-by. Their business continues good.

The Blackman Floral Co. is cutting excellent roses and carnations and has large quantities of bulbous stock, for which the demand is good. The display window is nicely decorated with cut flowers and potted plants.

Miss Nellie Goodge has had a good run of business. Funeral work has kept her busy.

Austin Wallace has a fine lot of smilax.

J. C. Elspermann is getting a good share of the business.

W. D. Macer has given up the store at 318 Upper Eighth street.

Royston & Fenton have a big lot of coleus, including Verschaffeltii, Golden Bedder and Trailing Queen. E. L. F.

TOMATOES (Bonny Best) TOMATOES

Most prolific for forcing or outside crop. Size and color are right. Will produce double the fruit of any other tomato in existence. No trick in growing tomatoes; just plant them, tie and run them to single or two stems; keep side shoots out; no hand fertilizing needed. That isn't all—try this in your carnation benches. They will make you money. No higher temperature needed.

Large transplanted plants, $1.75 100, $15.00 1000, cash; to clean up. 250 at 1000 rate. B. B. POHLMANN, Rockford, Ill.

Farmers' Week.

The Department of Floriculture of the Massachusetts Agricultural College announces a series of special lectures March 16 and 17 in connection with farmers' week. The program will be as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 16.

1:30 p. m.—"Selection and Care of House Plants," F. E. Palmer, Brookline, Mass.
2:30 p. m.—"Garden Planning," P. H. Elwood, Jr., Massachusetts Agricultural College.
3:30 p. m.—"The Use of Annuals in the Garden," E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17.

9:10 a. m.—"Trees and Shrubs for the Home Grounds," A. K. Harrison, Massachusetts Agricultural College.
10:10 a. m.—"Diseases of Floricultural Plants," A. J. Anderson, Massachusetts Agricultural College.
11:10 a. m.—"The Culture of Herbaceous Perennials," Maurice Fuld, New York city.
1:30 p. m.—"Outdoor Rose Culture," Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.
2:30 p. m.—"The Forcing of Plants," Ernest Downer, Northampton, Mass.
3:30 p. m.—Question box, conducted by A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

On these dates a spring flower show, occupying the entire first floor of French hall, will be held. For further information, write the Department of Floriculture, Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Bulbous stock is quite plentiful. The market is expected to be overloaded with it soon. Carnations are more plentiful, but roses remain scarce. Some potted Easter lilies will appear on the market next week. The geraniums are now rooted and growing well.

Various Notes.

The Lady Florists' Club dance was a success. The program was marked by more of the newer dances. In the card games the first prize was won by Mr. Wessling. The hall was beautifully decorated with southern smilax and daffodils.

The State Florists' Association met at R. A. Latham's store. The subject of the affiliation of the Minneapolis Florists' Club with the State Association came up, but no definite action was taken. A question box is to be conducted by the association for the use of members.

W. D. Desmond is on the sick-list, being confined to the house with a bad cold.

Mr. Swanson is in charge at the Minneapolis Floral Co. C. B. L.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been rushing. St. Valentine's day brought a volume of business which kept all the florists hustling. Not only were flowers ordered for valentines, but decorations for valentine and announcement parties were in demand. The pre-lenten festivities were numerous, all requiring floral decorations. Funeral work has been plentiful and the florists are all reporting splendid business.

The stock of flowers has been large and varied. Roses are of splendid size and color. Carnations are of extremely good quality, and mignonette, sweet peas, forget-me-nots, jonquils and all bulbous stock are plentiful and of fine quality.

Various Notes.

The automobile show, to be held February 24 to 27, is the occasion for the use of flowers in great quantities.

Miss Ruth Flick has returned from Guerin Hall, St. Mary of the Woods college, near Terre Haute, Ind., where she visited her sister, Miss Marguerite Flick, who is a student at the college.

The Bradley Flower Shop will move from its present quarters at 828 Calhoun street, to 1026 Calhoun street, on the expiration of its lease March 20.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business was satisfactory to everybody. To many of the florists it proved to be much better than was anticipated. Violets were in great demand. They brought 40 and 50 cents per hundred, wholesale. Pans of tulips and hyacinths were plentiful and sold well. Sweet peas, daffodils, carnations and roses were cleaned up in good shape. The prices of good roses in all varieties are still high. Other prices are normal.

Various Notes.

Post & Gray were unusually busy with funeral work during the early part of last week.

William E. Mosher has some excellent callas. He intends to do some extensive altering and repairing at his place during the coming spring and summer.

Some of the best violets in the city are to be seen at Ed. Davis', on Shawmut avenue. His carnations are off crop, but he expects to get in a heavy crop for Easter.

WILL REPIPE NEW HOUSE.

I have been trying to grow carnations in a new house, 20x70, running east and west. It is four feet high to the eaves and eleven feet to the ridge. The walls are double-boarded with shiplap, with three thicknesses of building paper between. There is no glass in the walls. The west end abuts on the boiler house; the east end adjoins a shed at the back of the residence. There are three solid beds, raised one foot, with two aisles. I have a hot water boiler, rated to carry 1,500 feet. I have been trying to heat two houses with it, the one mentioned and an old one, 20x80 and the same height as the new one. The old house contains benches. I have no trouble with the old house, but I cannot keep the new one warm and the beds have poor drainage.

I want to repipe the new house and build benches in the coming summer. I shall not trouble you by describing the present heating system, except to say that it is fed by a 3-inch flow, two feet below the ridge. Please tell me a good way to repipe this house. Is it necessary to pipe under the middle bench? The outside temperature in this part of Ontario drops occasionally to 20 degrees below zero, but not often. V. M.

There is nothing in the letter to indicate the cause of the trouble, and the new house should be easier to heat than the old one. The boiler, if up to its rating, should be amply large enough to heat the two houses. Especially in the more northern sections of the country, and for houses where a temperature of less than 60 degrees is desired, I would prefer to use raised benches and run two or three of the return pipes under each bench, not only to give bottom heat but to hasten the evaporation of the drip water from the roof. This, however, is not absolutely necessary.

To heat the house described to 55
